AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Mains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAPP, Ind., 6th June, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it breaks out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turns inward and distresses me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with sore sores, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was persuaded to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, or you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. Now all humors and skin sores began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agencies of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas; Tetter and Salt Rheum; Scald Head; Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 19th Sept., 1868, that he has cured an incredible case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by many bottles of the same. It has cured him of many complaints, and is now, he says, the common Requisite by its community.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Sabalon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the treatment of complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous kind here. I have cured many leucorrhœa cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and among others, the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for those female derangements."

Erysipelas and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 25th August, 1868.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and assent to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, rapidly taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pains in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its friends, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; assuredly, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, C. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1868.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. PIHAM.

Juno Y. Getchell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and say thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

Poetry.

A GERMAN TRUST SONG.

Just as God leads me, I would go;
I would not ask to chose my way;
Content with what he will bestow,
Assured he will not let me stray.
So as he leads, my path I make,
And step by step I gladly take,
A child in him confiding.

Just as God leads, I am content;
I rest me calmly in his hands;
That which he has decreed and sent—
That which his will for me commands,
I would that he should all fulfill,
That I should do his gracious will
In living or in dying.

Just as God leads, I all resign;
I trust me to my Father's will;
When reason's rays deceptive shine,
His counsel would I yet fulfill;
That which his love ordained as right,
Before he brought me to the light,
My all to him resigning.

Just as God leads me, I abide
In faith in hope, in suffering true;
His strength is ever by my side—
Can aught my hold on him undo?
I hold me firm in patience, knowing
That God my life is still bestowing—
The best in kindness sending.

Just as God leads, I onward go,
Oft amid thorns and briars seen;
God does not yet his guidance show—
But in the end it shall be seen
How, by a loving Father's will,
Faithful and true, he leads me still.

—LAMPERTUS, 1625.

Selections.

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP.

BY SHIRLEY BROWNE.

"She's rich, eh? Then I'll enter the list and win her if I can!'

The two young men were leaning over the garden fence, slowly breathing out the blue-wreathed fragrance of their cigars, and watching the young moon, whose golden rim rested almost upon the edge of the western woods.

"Worth a hundred thousand, they say, at the very least," said Henry Emmons; "but then, my dear fellow she is forty, and as plain as Medusa!"

"I don't care if she were ninety, and had a hump on her back!" enthusiastically responded Herbert Lynn. "I shall see her only through the golden glimmer of her wealth. A rich wife has always been my aim—and now, opportunity befriends me.'

"And how about blue eyed little Abby?"

"Oh, confound Abby! Now don't look so indignant, Emmons, but how could you ever suppose that I meant anything more than an amusing flirtation with Abby? It's no flow's business to make himself agreeable to every pretty girl that comes in his way, but nobody in their sober senses could ever imagine that I, Herbert Lynn, meant to throw myself away on a cherry-lipped farmers daughter. I'm going in for the heiress, I tell you!"

Herbert Lynn drew his tall, finely modeled figure up, as he spoke, and caressed his go-de-brown moustache, with a sort of lazy, scornful light in his eyes. He was very handsome, and he knew it, the city-bred Apollo who had come out into the country to rest and recruit after his warm some siege of fever.

Emmons looked at him with a curious smile "Lynn, you are the coolest fellow I ever knew!"

"Very probably. But I say, Harry, what brings the fair feminine Midas out here?"

"O, they say she is annoyed to death with fortune hunters, and wants to pass as a mere ordinary young lady here. It was by the merest chance that I happened to hear that Rebecca Lacy was the heiress to the famous old estate of Lacy of Thorndike."

"Good!" said Lynn, with evident satisfaction, "then I shall have an opportunity of playing the devoted and disinterested lover! How astonished I shall be, when, amid her soft blushes of yielding confusion, and—and all that sort of thing, you know—she tells me that she will not come altogether portionless to me."

Emmons dashed his cigar down among Abby Wallace's velvet-blossomed sweetwilliams.

"Lynn what an unmitigated puppy you are. You never seem to dream for an instant of such a thing as a possible refusal."

"Not much danger of that," said the handsome Adonis, laughing. "You see, Harry I have always been one of the lucky ones, and I don't think Dame Fortune will desert me now. When does she arrive?"

"To-morrow afternoon, by stage."

And the two young men talked on, while Abby Wallace, weeding her border of china-asters, behind the high blackthorn hedge, heard it all with a heart that seemed turning to ice within her.

So Herbert Lynn had only been making a plaything of her, after all—a mere toy, to while away the tedium of those long, dull, summer days. And she had thought—

But no matter. Abby would think so no more—she was effectually roused now, from her delicious dream of happiness—and she crept away into the house with tearless eyes and cheeks where the innocent roses were blanched to deadly whites.

"I can be revenged yet—and I will be!" Abby murmured to herself

Miss Rebecca Lacy arrived the next day according to programme, with a perfect avalanche of trunks carpet-bags, packing boxes, and valises, an asthmatic poodle, two canaries, and a screaming macaw. She was not pretty—in fact, Mr. Lynn, though determined to view her through an atmosphere of coleur de rose, could not disguise from himself the fact that she was exceedingly plain. Her hair was of that dull, lusterless brown, which catches neither depth from the shadows, nor golden shine from the sunbeam; her complexion was thick and muddy, her mouth wide, and her teeth decaying and bad, while her nose, instead of stopping short at that piquant curve which is called retrousse, looked as if she had flattened its extreme point against a pane board. Add to this a stout, short figure, with round shoulders, elephantine ancles, and no visible waist, and you will have a pretty correct idea of Miss Rebecca Lacy's tout ensemble!

Even Herbert Lynn was taken somewhat aback at first.

"Venus and the Three Graces!" he muttered to himself, "the idea of passing one's life by the side of such a Gorgon as that!"

But then he remembered his empty purse and his expensive habits.

"Herbert, my dear boy," he apostrophized himself, "don't make a donkey of yourself. Your age of sentimental softness is over—the mainchance, my boy, is what you have to look out for! Just now, it's your business to make love to Miss Rebecca Lacy, and you'd better be about it before some one else cuts in. Abby takes my defection very well. What a plucky little creature she is! I only wish it were she who had the hundred thousand dollars tacked to her apron strings!"

So our mercenary-minded hero sat himself diligently to work to besiege the fortress of Miss Lacy's maiden heart. If one really wishes to make love the ears is no better spot on earth than a cosy old farmhouse, overshadowed with apple trees, and surrounded with pleasant woodland walks—and Abby Wallace, considerate little lassie that she was, seemed to contrive every possible method for throwing the lovers together. Miss Rebecca stared; she never had been courted so diligently before.

And, to tell the truth, it was dull work for Herbert Lynn. Intellectual diamonds do some times sparkle beneath rough, uncut surfaces, but this was not the case with Miss Rebecca Lacy. If she had not been an heiress people would have pronounced her a fool—and Lynn was as quick to perceive her mental deficiencies as if he had been wooing her after the most approved fashion.

"She is confoundedly stupid," he said confidentially, to his friend Emmons, who only laughed.

"Look here, Abby," said Miss Rebecca, one evening, to the farmer's daughter "what is that fellow chasing me around, for all the time?"

"Why, Miss Rebecca, he's in love with you!"

Miss Lacy started, then giggled.

"Dear me—it's nice to have a lover, isn't it! And do you suppose he'll ask me to marry him?"

"Of course he will!"

Miss Rebecca giggled again.

"I wonder what my niece will say? My niece is coming next week."

Which fact, being duly transmitted to Mr. Lynn, only made him hasten the campaign.

"For, of course, her relations will object—relations always do," argued Herbert, sagely. "The quicker one rushes matters through the better it will be!"

And that very afternoon he contrived to lure Miss Rebecca forth into the tremulous green shadows of a honeysuckle arbour at the foot of the garden.

"Sit down here, Rebecca—Miss Lacy," he murmured, taking her parasol from her. "Aren't you afraid of spiders and caterpillows? I am" said the fair one, looking dubiously around her.

"Rebecca—"

"And I think it's damp under foot—and I am always subject to rheumatism in the joints."

"Hear me one moment, dearest—tell me that the frantic, adoring love of my nature for thee is returned! Rebecca, sweetest dream of my life, my heart is all thine own!"

Miss Lacy blushed—blushes were not becoming to her, turning her complexion to a dull mahogany colour—and simpered:

"Do you mean it, or you want to marry me?"

"Dearest, yes. Will, you be mine?"

Miss Lacy capitulated at once, with an hysteric giggle, and threw herself on Herbert Lynn's shoulder with an appetus that had nearly destroyed his balance.

"Then you love me, Rebecca?"

"I think you're the very nicest young man I ever saw!" murmured the confiding fair one. "But oh! whatever will my niece say?"

"What care we what she says, Rebecca? Are not our hearts our own?"

"Yes—but then she's always telling me what an old fool I am, and—and—"

"Listen, my love," said Herbert, with a sudden inspiration, "let us put our fate beyond the reach of any meddling hand.'

"I don't understand you," said Miss Lacy, with a stupid stare.

"Yonder lies the parsonage, embowered in roses, a fit casket for love's vows—let us walk quietly over there and be married."

"Before my niece comes?" and Miss Rebecca caught greedily at the idea—Herbert thought she had never looked so preternaturally ugly before, but after all, what did looks signify? Perhaps he should be a handsome young widower ere many years, elapsed!

"Come then, my treasure," he murmured sentimentally.

An hour afterwards Herbert Lynn returned to the quiet old farmhouse, a married man, with his wife leaning (no fairy weight) upon his arm

"We are just in time—there are Becky's trunks on the pizza now," shrieked Miss Lynn, "and there's Becky herself."

The niece, a tall, pretty girl of eighteen, glanced at the advancing couple in surprise.

"Why, Aunt Rebecca, what does this mean?"

Aunt Rebecca gave a nervous little titter.

"It—it means that I am married to Mr. Lynn. This is your uncle, my dear!"

"And I assure you," added Herbert, loftily, "that all the efforts of designing relations to interfere with our happiness will be treated with the worm they deserve."

"Dear me," said the niece, coolly, "nobody has any desire to interfere, I assure you, sir. Of course, since Aunt Rebecca has now a natural protector, I shall withdraw the allowance I have always made her, and—"

"The allowance? I doubt whether I understand you?"

"Why," explained the blushing bride, "our Becky's a great heiress. Didn't you know it? with more money than she can tell what to do with, and she's always allowed me fifty dollars a month."

"Then you—you are not the rich Miss Lacy?" dropped from Herbert's lips as he stared stonily at his newly made wife.

"I've got five hundred dollars of my own in the Lewinsville Bank," said Mrs. Herbert Lynn, in all the pride of conscious possession.

"Five hundred dollars of her own!" Herbert felt, with a sick thrill of despair, that he had sold his birthright for a mess of pottage!

"Yes," said Abby Wallace, with a mischievous smile dimpling her lips "the fame of Miss Rebecca Lacy's wealth had preceded her here, and neither Mr. Lynn nor Mr. Emmons knew—in fact, no one knew but myself—that there were two Miss Rebecca Lacy's! I hope you are not disappointed, Mr. Lynn!"

Truly, the blue-eyed Abby had her rich revenge, and she gloried in it, as she turned away to lead the genuine heiress up to her room, while the bride of an hour looked sinisterly around upon cousins of the volcano of suppressed wrath that was burning in her young hus band's breast.

"Caught! sold! taken in!" he muttered between his clenched teeth. "Sold! and for such a price!"

"Dear," interposed Mrs. Lynn, rather inopportunely, "where shall we go for our wedding trip?"

"To Jericho, ma'am!" roared the infuriated bridegroom

And when Henry Emmons called, that evening, to proffer his congratulations, he learned that "the happy couple" had already left in the evening train.

"Such a romantic affair, said Abby, mischievously. "Married to a woman nearly twice his age—and decidedly not what you would call pretty."

"It serves him right!" said downright Harry Emmons.

And so, perhaps, it did.

A DAY WITH THE POPE.

A correspondent of the Evenement Illustre, who was admitted some days back to an audience of the Pope, gives in a letter from Rome to that journal some interesting details about the Holy Father. He says:—"The Pope is pretty tall and stout, without being obese. The furniture of his private room is a square table, with two chairs and an armchair for himself. His bedroom has yellow curtains, no carpet, and a brick floor, with a little bedstead of iron without curtains. He is very neat in his person; his hands, which are half covered with white mittens, are particularly attended to. He rises at six o'clock, shaves himself, and says his mass in a little private chapel; and then hears another. At eight o'clock he takes a small cup of chocolate, and at half past eight receives his Ministers. Cardinal Antonelli comes every day to the Vatican, and when prevented from doing so, the Under Secretary of State, Monsignore Marini, takes his place. The other days of the week the other functionaries in their turn transact business with him. At half-past ten the Ministers withdraw. The audiences then begin, and are not over till one. At two o'clock the Pope dines in his private apartments. His repast is of the most modest kind, and it always ends with a sweetmeat of which all Italians are fond. From half-past two to three he takes his siesta, at three he reads his Breviary, and at half-past five goes out for a drive in a carriage with four horses, accompanied only by two young priests. If the weather permits he alights and walks in the most retired parts of the city; nevertheless, he is followed by upwards of two thousand persons, who walk after him in silence. When it rains his Holiness proceeds to the galleries of the Vatican when the visitors have retired. He is a great lover of antiques, as proved by the researches and restorations he is continually making. On his return home at six o'clock, the audiences recommence and last till ten at night, when he retires to sup. He goes to bed at eleven, and the next day goes through the same routine. Though advanced in years he sings very well, and what is quite unknown even to many Romans, plays well on the violoncello. When I was received with my companion the chamberlain plucked me by the sleeve to make me kneel. The Pope, perceiving the movement, spared us the genuflexion and made us approach the table at which he was sitting. 'So, then,' his Holiness said, 'you are two journalists, French, going together, to Naples?' He spoke about Naples, and asked us how we liked it, adding that people found themselves very free during their stay. He then took two photographic likenesses of himself, one for each of us, and with a sly smile said, 'I am going to write something for the journalists,' and, in a low hand, traced these words:—

'Diligite veritatem, filiam Dei;'

after which he held out his hand to us. His affability is extreme. He speaks French with as much accent as Russian, and the impression he produced on me was that of a pleasant and tranquil old man who appears to be but little occupied with external matters."

A heart rending story of the abduction of a child in Illinois by a gray eagle, is greatly shorn of its tragic interest by the explanation that the baby was carried off by the steamer "Gray Eagle," plying between Keokuk and Quincy its mother having gone ashore, and failed to return.

AUSTRIA TYPOGRAPHY.—the Imperial printing press at Vienna is one of the most extensive in the world, and its variety of type and typographic processes have obtained for it great celebrity. In regard to its operations, it is stated that an engine of twenty horse power moves not less than forty-eight printing and twenty four copper plate presses and ten glazing machines. There are also thirty six large and twelve small iron hand presses, twelve numbering and embossing machines, and thirty lithographic presses. A fresh supply of type is constantly supplied by twelve casting machines and nine ovens, and three thousand cwt. of type is kept on the premises. According to a moderate computation, each cwt. contains about forty thousand types, and the three thousand cwt., consequently, make a total of one hundred and twenty thousand millions of type, of various sizes and characters. Five hundred thousand reams of paper, are daily required for the consumption of the establishment. There are offices of departments for letter press printing, for copper-plate, lithographic, and chromotypic printing, punch cutting, type founding, wood cutting, book-binding, photography, etc. There are punches of upward of one hundred different alphabets, from the hieroglyphic, Runic, and Demotic down to the Khonss, Laos, Shian, Manchu, and Formosan. The establishment is capable of executing printing in upward of six hundred different languages.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND.—The bank of England possesses singular traditions and experiences. We heard the other day an anecdote, from an authentic source, although it related to something that happened many years ago, before the lifetime of the present generation. The directors received an anonymous letter stating that the writer had the means of access to their bullion-room. They treated the matter as a hoax, and took no notice of the letter.—Another more urgent and specified letter failed to arouse them. At length the writer offered to meet them in the bullion-room at any hour they pleased to name. They then communicated with the correspondent through the channel he had indicated, appointing a "midnight hour," for the rendezvous. A deputation from the Board, lantern in hand, repaired to the bullion-room, locked themselves in, and awaited the arrival of the mysterious correspondent. Punctual to the hour a noise was heard below. Some bricks in the floor were, without much force, displaced, and in a few minutes the gay Guy Fawkes of the back stood in the midst of the astonished directors! His story was very simple and straightforward. An old drain ran in under the bullion-room, the existence of which had become known to him, and by means of which he might have carried away enormous amounts. Inquiry was made.—Nothing had been excavated, and the directors rewarded the honesty and integrity of their anonymous correspondent—a workingman, who had been employed in repairing the sewers—by a presentation of eight hundred pounds.

HOW TO MAKE A POOR PASTOR.

1. Be very indifferent and irregular in attending church. Never go except when you cannot find an apology for remaining at home, or visiting some neighboring country kinsfolk.

2. When at church sit with your eyes shut, or in staring about, or in other ways manifesting your listlessness to what the minister may be saying. Be as intelligent as to prefer your own extemporaneous thinking to the minister's elaborate thought the products of a week's mental toil.

3. Complain when you go home that the sermon lacked depth, or was too deep for you; that it was too prosy or too flowery—in fine, that you were exceedingly bored.

4. Decline co-operation with the minister in his work; refuse to pray for a blessing on his labors; decry his endeavors in society and on the street; apologize for him instead of defending him, and then complain of him because the Church does not prosper under his care.

5. Be ever showing up your minister's imperfections, and then bemoan his lack of popularity among the people.

6. Be very cold in religion and warm in the world, and charge the pastor with lack of zeal.

7. Treat your pastor with a cold heart chilling civility, and then murmur because he does not visit you.

8. If he makes a tedious longuer, or other blunder in the pulpit, be certain, in order to show your smartness, to be the first to mention it.

9. When you hear a deprecatory remark made either of his character or his talents, ratify it with your approving smile.

10. Send your children to other Sabbath schools than your own; run a round to the different churches, and send yourselves of the services of visiting ministers rather than the resident one.

11. Neglect to pay him his salary, and when he speaks of his necessities, charge him with being worldly minded.

These rules, when practiced by any Church, will always produce the heartiest acceptable commodity a poor pastor.

Respectfully submitted for the reflection of the laity.—Nashville Advocate.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.—"There is in Ohio a farmer," says the Rural New Yorker, "who never had a paper in his house till he was sixty years of age.—His father left him 200 acres of choice land, which he worked as well as he knew how, and made a comfortable living. One spring the postmaster told him if he would subscribe for a good agricultural paper and it carefully, and work according to instructions, he would warrant him to clear a thousand dollars that year. On these conditions he paid for the paper, read it carefully, and at the end of the year he figured up carefully and found that he had cleared nine hundred and sixty dollars. He used the cash to pay him for the other forty, but by some dodge of the law the villain cheated him out of it.

OUR FREE GRANT SYSTEM.

During the late election contest, we were told the government would, as soon as Parliament assembled, pass a law for the settlement of our lands, whereby the immense expense of country existing north and west would be given to actual settlers, and on the strength of these promises and the promises of our local candidates, the electors were induced to give their support to the government. They have passed a law, it is true, but what does it amount to? As far as the settlement of Ontario is concerned it amounts to nothing. The lands offered as free grants are principally north of the Georgian Bay with the exception of a township or two north of the County of Victoria; lands known only by a few in the immediate vicinity thereof, and that are likely to remain so for a long time.

Not a word, however, is spoken about the lands in this County. In fact they will neither give nor sell those lands. It is well known that there are several thousands of acres of pretty good land yet unsettled in the County of Peterboro both on the Burleigh and Bobcaygeon Roads; there is also a considerable tract of what is represented as good land in the Townships of Belmont and Methuen and it is also well known that there are almost daily applications to purchase some of these, but the answer is invariably "not in the market." These lands as long as they remain unsettled and uncultivated are valueless. The timber is taken off every year to almost nothing in too many cases. The few settlers that have wandered in are being disheartened that the lands around are not being settled also, and the consequence will be that if something better than the miserable abortion that the combination has given be not devised the next election will tell a very different story. We are told there is no land in the back country fit for settlement. But whenever a public meeting is held and men drawn out, we find that there are thousands of acres of pretty good land, and whatever sort it is it belongs to the people and should be used for their benefit, certainly not for the benefit of a few.—To allow it to remain as it is, is of no use whatever except for a kind of bait for "jobbers" to plunder. But what are our local representatives doing in this matter? Are they satisfied with the working of the free grant system? What are they doing to encourage farmers' sons who are desirous of commencing the world for themselves but are not able to purchase improved farms? They have lived long enough in this country to know that there is wild land fit for settlement, and they also know that many of our young men would go back if they could get land to purchase. Surely a matter of so much importance to the community should receive a little attention. They should lay the matter before the government at any rate and urge something more satisfactory than the miserable grant system confined to Algoma and Muskoka. Dame rumor has it that they have found time to go twice to Toronto to try to get a Crown Land agent removed and that they are unwilling to allow the lands on the Burleigh Road either into market or to be offered as grants, until he is removed. Surely we have not representatives with such little souls that they cannot allow the wild lands of this county into a market lest the agent should get employ, ment. We certainly cannot think that our local representatives are going this length.

THE FAIR.—An unusually large number of people attended the Fair on Tuesday, their evident object being to see and to be seen. Business, on the whole, was not brisk in proportion to the number of visitors, except where the spirits were kept up freely, and in one or two instances there were two or three knock's down with the consequent broken noses and marred visages; one or two found their way to the lock-up, where they found time to sober off. The number of drunken rows was not at all large. The people returned home at a very early hour. There were a few milch cows offered for sale, and prices asked were high. We did not learn, however, that many changed hands. The quantity of horse flesh was not equal to what has been at former Fairs, and some changed hands at what was considered high prices. The market was not equal to what might be expected on such an occasion.

NEW EXCISE LAW.—We are informed that persons making Ginger Beer or any imitation of Beer will require a license of fifty dollars and have to give two securities of a thousand dollars; also pay a duty of 2½ cts. on each gallon.

THE FENIAN INVASION.

During the present week the great Buffalo fair, so much talked of in connection with a Fenian raid, is being held, and the gathering together of several thousand of the Brotherhood to Buffalo at a considerable cost for one and at a fearful sacrifice of time, was meant to be for no good purpose. They are so well watched, however, that we need hardly fear any thing of a serious nature. They may make an attempt to come as they have the will, but the power is wanting. The Canadian authorities have had ample warning and opportunity to prepare for them; abundance of ammunition has been sent to convenient places and the volunteers are only too anxious for an opportunity to revenge the heroes of Ridgeway.—There is no cause for alarm under present circumstance in any quarter. It is believed that the President of the United States will not permit his country to be a basis for filibustering, and hence as soon as O'Neil makes a step contrary to international law, President Johnson will crush the affair out. We believe, however, that even though a number of the cut-throats should get over they can do but very little harm. They have no means to carry on a contest, neither in money nor in men. They can not have provisions for a week's campaign, nor ammunition, and as soon as the last dose of American whiskey died out O'Neil would find himself minus one half of his dupes. There may be a filibustering expedition across the frontier where they can get easily back again; this is needed to get more money, but we cannot imagine that there will be any thing more than a dash and run away.

INDIGNANT, EH!

In another quarter we find that our remarks of last week have not had a very salutary effect; it would, therefore, appear necessary to administer a something of a more palatable nature. This assistant Editor we do not know, and as to calling any one a "Fiend, Liar, Demon or Lunatic," we deny the charge—it is falsehood intensified. But it won't do. There is no denial, however. We had no charges, others did it, and instead of shifting the burden of proof, it would have been quite easy to deny those rumors, if false. Getting angry and using harsh words tends to fasten those charges more directly. "Rumors" are public property, especially when they come from his own friends. If his friends belie him let him clear himself by stating that the charge is not true. We have been informed since our last that the signature of the correspondent of the Boston Pilot here is not "Central Canada," but "Beaver," and only dates from Central Canada. Now if our informant is in error it is easy to say so. We don't wish to trouble any one too much, however. If it be true why it is just as easy to say "we do not deem it necessary to vindicate ourselves." We would be sorry to think we had a veritable Fenian in Peterboro; we wish to cultivate the most charitable aspect of the case, but we might have a lugger, who, although no fighter, sounds the call to arms. If not, it is cruel for either his friends or enemies to say so. Some few are wondering if Father Chiniquy returned to declare his Recantation, would the Peterboro' papers publish it? Newspaper men should keep cool.

Since writing the above some cruel slanderer tells us that there was also an All any Fenian meeting at which the correspondent figured. They should not tell those things on the street. O, it's very vindicative, so it is. Who lets out those secrets? We do wish that they would keep their secrets to themselves.

The Way Fenians Chatter—From a Paper Called the Irish People.

"What sort of barbarians live in America? We do not mean the aborigines, but the Europeans who have colonized that part of the world. The cable informs us that they hanged Farrell who fired at and wounded—not killed—the Duke of Edinburg, the Queen's second son. We, benighted American citizens, thought that capital punishment was inflicted only on alleged murderers, even within the British dominions; but here we have a man executed for a murder that was never committed at all! Even if poor Farrell was a sane man, he may have intended only to wound the royal young scamp. At all events, he only wounded "his victim," and a couple of years' imprisonment would have been ample atonement for the damage done. But the "victim" was a Prince, of England's Royal Family, and the transported sheep-stealers, house burners, forgers, burglars and murderers, and their descendants, who now rule the roast in the historic regions of Sydney, Melbourne, Botany Bay and Van Diemen's land, are as "loyal" to "the mother that bore them"—to the worthy dam of such worthy off-spring—that for a mere scratch on a bit of royal skin a poor plebeian must pay the awful penalty of death by strangulation. This would be bad enough if the said plebeians were one who could be held responsible for his acts by responsible men; but the fact is the unfortunate Farrell was a raving lunatic! This is the nineteenth century in America; but the barbarism of the dark ages still flourishes among the respectable pick pockets and highwaymen at the penal settlement of New Holland, and, indeed, in every other spot in this world over which the murder-stained flag of England flings its blighting shadow."

It is no great wonder that the poor dupes who are misled by the designing demagogues who wish to plunder, should cherish hatred to saxons while they read such trash, and this is the sort of trash with which Fenians are fed during the present excitement. The leaders of this movement are doubly guilty, and should in every case be held accountable for not only the lives of Canadians but also for the ignorant rabble who follow them and suffer. If a few of those who were taken in 1866 had been forced to undergo the extreme penalty of their crime, there would have been less fear of another raid now, too much leniency may prove a great mistake.

Royal College of Dental Surgeons.

A provisional meeting of the Board was held in Toronto on Tuesday, and in the report we find the names of both Mr. Pentland and Mr. O'Donnell, as having received certificates according to the act respecting Dentistry.

Mr. O'Donnell presided at the election of Board of Directors for the next two years.—The following gentlemen were elected:—Messrs. O'Donnell, Day, Callender, Chittenden, Relyea, G. L. Elliott, J. S. Scott, H. T. Wood, D. A. Rogers, C. Kahan, J. B. Meadows and Lalonde. The meeting then adjourned till eight p. m. On resuming a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Relyea, seconded by Dr. Day, to Mr. O'Donnell for his able and impartial duties as chairman. Mr. Chittenden in the chair. The following gentlemen were then elected officers:—H. W. Day, M. D., Kingston, President; J. O'Donnell, Secretary; C. S. Chittenden, Treasurer; and H. T. Wood, Registrar.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met on Monday evening. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs Helm, Clarke, English, Towle, Wrighton, Dixon, Stevenson, Doherty, Kennedy, Dickson and Chambers.

The minutes of the last meeting were read over and confirmed.

A communication from D. W. Dumble, Esq., giving his opinion on the subject of the lease by the Town Commissioners to Dr. Burnham of a portion of the Market Block, was read, and on motion received.

The Clerk submitted to the Council the result of the vote of the ratepayers on the 28th day of April last, showing that the By-law was approved by a majority of 25 votes.

A petition from Napoleon Poirier, asking aid from the Council. The case was referred to the Charity Committee.

Petitions from Mrs. Hazlehurst and others, and Michael Boulton and others, asking for sidewalks, were read, and on motion received.

A petition from Whyte & Hamilton, asking to repair Reid street near their Foundry, was read and referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

A petition from Jas. McFadden, Market Clerk, asking the use of the old lock-up for an office was referred to Town Trust Commissioners.

A communication from C. Perry, Esq., M. P., was read, calling the attention of the Council to the McGee Memorial Fund.

A communication was read from William Lundy, informing the Council that the county Council has granted $20 to be spent upon Park street on the condition that the Town Council grant a similar sum to be spent on the same street.

A petition from Solomon Glaile was received, for a higher rate than his tender for cedars furnished by him.

An account from Returning Officers, for holding the recent election, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Glaile was allowed four cents per foot for the cedars in accordance with the first tender.

On motion of Mr. Towle, Messrs. Clixton, Chamberlain, Doherty and the mover were named a committee to solicit subscriptions to the McGee Memorial Fund.

A report for the street and bridge committee was read, and on motion of Mr. Towle, amended, by providing that $150 be expended the remainder of $200 be used in removing soil on the bridge over Dickson's Race and stones, &c., in any portion of Murray street that may appear most necessary to the inspector, east of Water street.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, Messrs. Clixton, Chamberlain, Towle and the mover were appointed a committee to act in connection with the committee from the county council on the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges.

On motion of Mr. Towle, seconded by Mr. Dixon, a By-law authorizing the Municipality of the Town of Peterboro to issue Debentures to the amount of $5000 towards the erection of bridges across Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek, was read and passed.

The Council adjourned for one week.

COUNCIL OF BURLEIGH &c.

The Court of Revision for the Municipality of the United Townships of Burleigh, Anstruther, Chandos, Cardiff, Monmouth, Harcourt and Bruton held the 18th May, 1868.

Present,—John Carroll, Reeve Caleb Lousley, Patrick Scott, and Giles Stone.

A notice of appeal was received from A. H. Campbell & Co., no particulars specified and no person present to explain ground for appeal Appeal dismissed.

A notice of appeal was received from the secretary of the Canadian Land and Emigration Company, requiring that the lands in the Township of Harcourt sold to settlers, be assessed to them, which was ordered to be done.

The Clerk was ordered to assess each lot separately where persons are assessed for more than one lot.

Moved by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Lousley, that lot No. 15 in the 12th concession of Burleigh, be assessed at 79 acres instead of 100 acres: also, lot No. 15 in the 11th concession to be assessed at 90 acres instead of 100, and lot 16 in the 12th concession of Burleigh be assessed at 76 acres instead of 100 acres, the above being the correct contents of said lots.

Moved by Mr Stone, seconded by Mr. Scott, that the Assessment Roll be now adopted and be considered the Revised Assessment Roll for this Municipality for the current year.

The Council then met.

Moved by Mr. Lousley, seconded by Mr. Scott, that the Auditors report be accepted and that the Clerk be instructed to prepare an abstract of same for publication.

Moved by Mr. Stone, seconded by Mr. Lousley, that the Reeve be instructed to sign an order in favor of P. Phalen for removing trees off the government road.

Moved by Mr Stone, seconded by Mr. Scott, that the Clerk be instructed to write to the Crown Attorney for the County, a king why the suit against James Golborne, Henry and Thomas Gills for a nuisance has not been prosecuted

Moved by Mr. Lousley, seconded by Mr. Stone, that the offer of Mr. John McDonald for timber cut on the road allowances, be deferred for future consideration.

The Reeve reported the sureties tendered by Joseph Lousley as quite satisfactory and bond laid on table executed by Mr. J. Lousley and his sureties.

Moved by Mr. Stone, seconded by Mr. Scott, that Mr. J. Lousley's bond be accepted and that Mr P. Lousley be required to hand over to the said Mr. P. Lousley, Treasurer, all monies, books letters, vouches, papers or any other comments held or received by him as Treasurer of this Municipality, and that the Clerk be instructed to write to him and enclose a copy of this resolution.

Moved by Mr. Lousley, seconded by Mr Scott, that an order be issued on the Treasurer in favor of the Auditors for the amount of their salaries.

Mary Jane Scott, 3rd C, 1 year.

A MAN PROPOSES TO DESCEND THE NIAGARA FALLS IN A LIFE-BOAT.—The Detroit Free Press says that Charles Ockfork, of that city, the sixty-hour skater has conceived the idea of making the perilous passage over the Falls of Niagara in an India-rubber life-boat of peculiar construction. A few weeks ago the idea suggested itself to his mind, and upon communicating it to some eastern gentlemen, it was proposed by them that a purse of $30 00 be raised to induce him to make the undertaking. He accordingly perfected his scheme, and the contract for building the boat has been let to the Goodyear Rubber Company for $1,000

A Murderous Attack.

A POWERFUL MAN ATTACKS ANOTHER WITH AN AXE—HORRIBLE DEPARA.

(From the Owen Sound Advertiser.)

A most violent and entirely unprovoked attack was made on Thomas Farley, an Irish navvy and chief young man of the Town-Line of Sydenham, by his brother-in-law, Thomas Whitney. The circumstances of the outrage are these:—The two persons were going to their work on Monday morning last to another farm of young Farley's father, distant about a mile, young Farley taking an axe with him for some purpose connected with the work. On the way, Whitney also got an axe, carrying it along with him, talking at the same time about murders, and more especially reaching it from the conversation going on Farley handed the axe to Whitney, remarking at the same time, "You can carry the axes down to the shanty while I go over into the chopping here and draw over the oxen till we yoke them." After going a few rods he was stunned to find Whitney at his heels, who had seized him with the axe, striking his mile at breakfast, which Farley denied. Then he (whitney) says, "you slapped my little boy," which Farley also denied. At this time Whitney was walking ahead, the other being lame and ill shifter to fight nor fly. Whitney drew one of the axes and with a full down blow struck Farley to the ground the axe cutting a piece out of the head, clearing the skull in the middle and sinking into the flesh of the neck. By some means in falling young Farley got both axes under him, and then commenced a fair struggle as to who should have them. Whitney, a powerful looking man, seized the handles to drag them from Farley, who, in turn, clung with all the tenacity which the hope of life inspires to the weapons of death. Whitney then drew the handles and bent them around his neck in order to strangle him. Failing in his he commences to crush his skull in pieces by leaping on it with a pair of cruel heavy boots. His first leap was on poor Farley's left ear, a stream of blood of a terrific while I write. With the heel of his boot he then strikes to smash his nose. Then raising him to the full height he leaps from the edge of a hillock, lighting this time with one heel on the left temple just over the eye, and with the other on the lower lip. He then turns and with the toe of his boot lays open the flesh, and crushes the bones just below the right eye missing that member by about one fourth of an inch. Then he leaps on the shoulder and on the arms, kicks the elbows and even tries to break his hands. Knowing that Farley's father was coming behind, he desisted, permitted the young man to wash himself in a convenient rivulet, and finally proposed that young Farley should kill him with one of the axes, and expressed his deep sorrow by helping Farley home. We visited the spot and found the young man's scalp with a considerable portion of skull attached. The struggle took place on the edge of a deep hollow into which he dragged his victim, and out of which, but for a merciful Providence he never would have come alive. Hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The Interest Question.

The following is a portion of the debate which took place when the Interest question came on in the House on Tuesday:

Mr. McKenzie hoped that no action would be taken during the present session, it was too important a question to deal with so summarily. For Ontario he would say no such law was required, the people were quite satisfied with the law as it now exists, and it was only in Lower Canada that restriction was asked.

Mr. Bowell regretted that this important question had been delayed to so late a period in the session, and that such should have been the case upon similar occasions, yet he fully concurred in the remarks of those who declared it impossible to give the subject a full and careful consideration at the present time. He wished it to be understood that the hon. member for Lambton, did not speak for the whole of the Province of Ontario.—When he stated that the people of Ontario did not want a restriction in the rate of interest, he did not fairly represent them. In the rural portions of the country the people felt strongly on this subject, having suffered much from the effects of free trade in money. He would not discuss the question at present, but if the Government proposition was pushed he intended to move amendments in the direction of making the rate of interest uniform in the whole Dominion, and to provide for penalties. If it were postponed at the present time he should bring it before the House at an early day next session, so that it could be fully considered, and the question settled.

The bill was then laid over till next session.

RAPE AND ATTEMPTED MURDER.—The neighborhood of the village of Archibaldville has lately been the scene of a crime, shocking and revolting in its details. On Sunday last a girl, named Marie Victorie Poisson, aged 13 years, left her parents' house at 4 p. m. to go for some milk to a neighbours named Lebianc. On her errand, while passing by a bush that lay between the two houses, she was met by a young man from whom she apprehended no evil, named Provencher, who seized her and dragged her into the bush. She resisted and attempted to cry out, but he threatened to choke her if she did not desist, and beat her over the face with his fist and even with stones, till she sunk senseless on the ground. The scoundrel then accomplished his infamous design of violating her person, and to conceal his crime, he at her again till he supposed that life was extinct, and then threw the body lifeless, as he thought into a hole, formed by the uprooting of a tree, a wounded by rugged roots and branches that hid it from the observation of passers-by. He then with fiendish coolness retraced his steps and went to bed. The poor girl recovered gradually from her faint and succeeded with great effort in making her way out of the murderous pit, and returned home, bleeding, and exhausted to the house of her father where she told her piteous story. He immediately started for the village where he made his complaint before a magistrate and had a warrant issued for the arrest of Provencher, who was the same evening lodged in the gaol of the district. The trial is fixed for October next. The prisoner is only 19 years of age, and is said to be the son of respectable parents. The girl Poisson, though she has had careful medical attention, is not yet out of danger, from the brutal treatment to which she was subjected.—Gazette

A NOVEL EXPERIMENT.—Thomas Hughes the well known English Member of Parliament intends to try whether he can secure a re-election without being compelled to pay votes. He announces his intention of putting the political virtue of his constituents to a rigorous test at the next general election. The entire cost of the former contest was $5,500; and Mr. Hughes says, it is probable that no meeting than borough was ever won so cheaply before. But he declares that he cannot afford to pay even $5,000 for the seat again, and therefore he intends to do without committee rooms, public houses and all the election machinery. The Pall Mall Gazette remarks that if Mr. Hughes intends to ignore publicans and printers, and all the old people who look out for work at an election, he will deserve well of many who wish to see how the plan will answer, without themselves running the risk of putting it on total." Mr. Hughes is anxious to see if merit without money can win a seat in Parliament.

The Price of Meat.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—A poor man with seven children to feed. I complain that my day's pay is not sufficient at the present price of provisions to supply my family with that kind of food which a regard for their health prompts me to obtain. I look at the small quantity of beef that my dollar will get, and I turn from the market, denying myself rather than give my dollar for what I believe to be less than a dollar's worth. The butchers grow rich; the Council makes By-laws which drive everybody into their stalls to buy; they lay their heads together and they put the price at what they please, irrespective of the first cost. The market is a mere poly and the price of meat will not be regulated by competition like other articles of consumption so long as the Town By-law drives us to them to buy. On behalf of the mechanics and poor men of the town, I ask that it be made lawful for butchers' stalls to be in different parts of the town as one in the Centre and one in the North West. Then the sellers will be independent of the present and competition that is now exercised over each other by the butchers in the market, and the price of beef in this town will be such that the poor as well as the rich can enjoy what was intended for all men equally.

Yours, truly,
VULCAN.

Peterboro, June 2nd, 1868.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—When in your improving and cheerful town (on Saturday last), while passing the office of J. T. Henderson, Esq., J. P., I observed an unusual number of persons congregated at the door; upon enquiry of the cause I was informed that an interesting trial was going on before the magistrate. Messrs. Henderson and Chamber—assault and battery—Plaintiff, Patrick Castello, of Dummer, taken 27th day of May, 1868, before J. T. Henderson, Esq., &c. That the Rev. D. O'C—did assault and strike the Plaintiff with his fist on Sunday morning, 27th day of May, inst., contrary to the Statutes, &c. &c. The Defendant did not appear, but deputed a professional man to answer in his behalf. The Plaintiff after having been hardly pressed by Mr. Devlin and others, agreed to abandon the prosecution conditionally, viz:—That the Priest should pay the costs of Court as far as incurred, not repeat the assault, nor demurrage him from the altar. The first of the terms was complied with after much scrutiny by Mr. Lawyer Devlin who seemed desirous of taxing the bill very tightly. Mr. D. through disrespect or otherwise omitted taking off his hat I cannot say which. But Mr. Henderson dealt with him in a very summary manner by ordering him to submit to the rules of Court or he'd put him down stairs.

ONE FROM DOURO WHO WAS PRESENT.

Douro, June 1st, 1868.

SINGULAR CASE OF SOMNAMBULISM.—The Toronto Telegraph records a most remarkable case of somnambulism:—A gentleman doing business on Young street, who is also somewhat of a horse fancier, made what he thought an excellent investment in horse flesh. On going home in the evening with his new purchase, he entertained his family with details of the operation. He retired to bed with his mind in a decidedly horsey condition, and it is therefore not single at the his slumbers should have been disturbed with the sight mare. In the middle of the night he got up in his sleep, went to the stable and took out his new horse, mounted him, and started on a good round pace that the guy he continued a monument equestrianism through the streets for a considerable time. His singular appearance and actions attracted the attention of a policeman, who, thinking some insane circus rider had broken loose, or that John Gilpin's spirit had returned to earth, took him into custody, and with a great fear and trembling, conducted him to one of the police stations. Shortly afterwards the gentleman was thoroughly aroused, and great was his astonishment at finding himself in such a singular predicament. During all his riding he had been in a somnambulistic state, and it required a great deal of argument on the part of the policeman to convince him that he had been engaged in such unusual mode and peculiar exercise till course he was liberated at once. This we conceive to be one of the most remarkable cases of somnambulism on record, and is that it is an standing of by the most reliable authority, it might fairly be doubted.

FENIAN PLOT.—It is said that the leaders of the Fenian conspiracy determined, at the time of the execution of the murderers of the unfortunate Brett, to take the lives of four of the members of the royal family, to "pay for the "murder" of the Fenian "martyrs," and that Prince Alfred is one of the one thus doomed. It is certain that intelligence of the thus-to-be-made was telegraphed by Mr Gathorne Hardy to a person who had accident only learned his face, a short time after the execution had taken place; and it may well be learned that the abortive plot attempt on the life of Prince Alfred will not be the last of the endeavors of these miscreants to carry out their diabolical programme. One must hope that an urgent attacks, if made, will

MONTREAL HOUSE,
VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The subscriber has much pleasure in announcing to his numerous friends that his stock of Spring and Summer Goods is now complete in every department, and that for quality, style and variety it cannot be surpassed in town, while in cheapness it cannot at all be equalled.

His Staple Goods were purchased before the late rise in Cotton, and are consequently over 30 per cent cheaper than they can now be purchased. It is his intention to give his customers the full benefit of this advantage, as he is offering these goods at a rather lower advance on cost than usual, and will continue to do so as long as they last.

In his stock will be found several cheap lots which were purchased at a bargain, and which will be offered much below their usual prices.

One lot of DRESS GOODS is offered at from 4½d to 9d per yard,

And a lot of first quality ALL WOOL CANADIAN TWEEDS is offered at from 3s to 3s 6d per yard. The 3s lot of these Tweeds cost 3s 6d to make them, and the 3s 6d lot were sold wholesale at 4s 6d per yard.

Good FACTORY COTTONS, we are selling at 4d, 5½d and 6½d per yard.
Good BLEACHED COTTONS, we are selling at 5½d, 6½d and 7½d per yard.
PRINTS, at 5d, 6½d and 7½d; the best ever seen at the money.

DRESS GOODS, in Lustres, Challies and Bareges, at 9d, 1s and 1s 3d per yard—very pretty and good.
Dress MUSLINS, very good and pretty, at 7½d per yard.
PARASOLS—a large assortment, from 3s up.

LADIES' HATS AND BONNETS,
FLOWERS—New Style.
STRAW TRIMMINGS,
BUGLE TRIMMINGS, &c., &c.

At about 25 per cent. lower than they are sold other places. We make it a point to sell our Millinery Goods at less than the customary profits.

Good Striped TICKINGS at 9d per yard,
Stripe SHIRTINGS, Blue and Brown Derrys, Straw TICKINGS, &c., &c., at very low prices.

SHAWLS—We are clearing out our Stock at cost price and under.
FANCY BONNET RIBBONS, we are selling out in cheap lots.
BELT BUCKLES selling off at cost and less than cost.
BLACK VEILS, we are selling off at almost any price.

Our reason for offering some of these things under Cost is that our stock of them is too large and we wish to reduce it.

We hope our friends will call and judge for themselves that we do not advertise what we cannot show.

CLOTHS.

We invite particular attention to our Stock of Cloths, which is one of the best assorted to be found.

Our CANADIAN TWEEDS at 3s and 3s 6d per yard, already mentioned as one of the cheap lots, every person should buy.

In FINER CLOTHS, also, we can suit any person who favors us, as our stock is so varied, and our rule is to sell on very small profits.

This department of our business is under the charge of Mr. BAKEWELL, who is now so well known as a first-class Cutter, that it is needless to make any remark upon his ability.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We have now on hand one of the largest assortments in Town of Spring and Summer Clothing, which we are offering at very low prices.

CALL AND EXAMINE OUR STOCK WHETHER YOU PURCHASE OR NOT.

Gentlemen's Hats, Caps, Shirts, Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Paper Collars and Cuffs in any quantity.

MOTHERS READ THIS.
HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, an acid extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and will administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

The Great English Remedy.
SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,
Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, shortness and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

LEAP YEAR LAMENT.

Bother Leap-year, boys—
A-wful to think of it;
Rain is yawning, boys,
We're on the brink of it;
Victims of women's schemes,
Each of us—all of us;
Sure as we're living, boys,
They'll be the fall of us.

Fall of us, all of us,
Bachelors, young and old;
Ladies are planning, boys,
Nothing their tongues can hold;
Planning all sorts of things—
Awful to think of it;
Pain approaches, boys,
We're on the brink of it.

Confound the girls, I say,
Tyrants the whole of them;
Looking us wretches, boys,
To the control of them:
Pity of the wretches, boys,
For we are-wuz, you know;
Worst of it they know it,
Shame I must speak of it so.

Popping the question boys,
That's what they'll do to us—
If we but give the places
Half a side view of us;
Bold a and sparkling eyes!
Well! let me think of it,
Sigh! I swear ruin, boys,
I like the brink of it.

We went one week without it up to our house, but at last, giving wa to the clamors ov the children and the wife, I entrated in to mi wife, I bought half a pound and more gave i my hous and lot. O, it's kos. Butter is very skerce. Kows ar az plenty az ever, an give just az much milk, but the unrighteous farmers pax his butter up for a big thing next winter. The don't konsider that the world wu cum to an end before that time, and there butter apile on the x hands. A farmer bro't a teakettle ful to market yesterday, and he kame tew lookin' his lite bi bein' smuttered i cloth. A groshery man crowded around and offered him large sums for it. I reel sily offered him mi life and sakred honor for half and he arkst me with a sarkastic grin if I thought his cutter waz strong. That was a pretty strenghy sarkasm. He finally sold his butter to a man for $18 in stamps and a female dorg; the cup warzent thrown in. There ar bin sum very shaky butter in circulation within the past few weeks. I got a roll sum time ago for an old gold watch that was left tu mi wife, with the strick injunkshun that she shouldent part with it unless it wuz to get sum thing to eat. We koudent eat that butter; I hired a pedler ful man to carry it far into the country and bury it. Cum to find out, that roll ov butter had been made bi an agrikultural girl to an ax-hame of hers in our plais. The lu flavor ov the butter was expressy ov the strong luv she bore him. She had also sent him a lock ov her hare very skilfully workt up in the roll.

WHAT H S WIFE SAID.—When trade grew slack and notes fell due, the merchant's face grew long and blue; his dreams were troubled through the night with Sheriff's bailiff all in sight. All this his wife unto him said: "Rise up at once, get out of bed, and get your paper, ink and pens, and say these words unto all men: 'My goods I wish to sell to you, and to your wives and daughters, too; my prices they shall be so low, that all will buy before they go.' He did as his good wife advised, and in the papers advertized. Crowds came and bought up all he had; his notes were paid, his dreams made glad, and he will tell you to this day, how well did printer's ink repay. The other is a place as tight, contented was the press to alight; and did not let the people know of what he had or where to go. His drafts fell due and were not paid, a jury on his goods was made; the store was closed until the sale, and for some time he was in gaol. A bankrupt now without a cent, at leisure he can deep repent that he was foolish and unwise and did not freely advertise.

Said a fond mother to a young hopeful of eight:—"Tommy, my boy, fetch us that stick of wood." "Ah, my dear," responded the youth, "the grammatical portion of your education has been sadly neglected; you should have said, Thomas, my son, remove from that recomb ut collection of combustible material on the threashold of this edifice, one of the curtailed portions of a defunct log."

A young lady with blue gaiters, blue dress, blue sacque, blue lace collar, blue hat, blue feather, blue parasol, blue fan, blue kid gloves, blue stockings, blue eyes and turquoise bracelet, necklace and ear-rings, attracted attention a day or two ago on one of the New York ferry boats.

I heard a very good story the other day of a bank clerk who, having adopted the laudable system of recording his expenditure, was overheard apostrophising his balance sheet: It is ev dent, said he, that I have saved forty pounds this year, but where the duc is the money?

A little boy asked his father what fool lived in the house next door. "No fool lives there that I know of," why do you ask such a question said the father. "Why, I heard ma say the other day that you was next door to a fool!"

"Three and sixpence a gal!" exclaimed Mrs Partington, looking over the Prices Current. "Why, bless me, what is the world coming to, when gals are valued at only three and sixpence?"

Mistress—"Your character is satisfactory, but I'm very particular about one thing—I wish my servants to have plenty, but I don't allow any waste." Page—"Oh no, m'm, I 1 eat and drink till I busted, m, rather than waste anything, m!"

POPULAR ERRORS.—That editors keep public reading rooms. That they have plenty of time to talk to everybody. That they are delighted to get anything to fill up the paper with.

A California editor says he lately met a grammarian who had just made a tour through the min s, cogitating thus:—"Positive, mine; comparative, miner; superlative, minus."

An exchange has discovered that Eve was the only woman who had never the ataxed to go and live with her mamma. Pity she hadn't before the apple scrape.

A young lady from the country now visiting in New York, writes home thus:—"Nobody's ma'r notion now which do n't hold up her clothes, an I the hier you hold'n 'em up the more you are no iced."

A gentleman standing at his door was asked by a beckstor whether he was the man of the house? In a subdued tone, he replied, "No my wife is."

Ben of the noblest disposition think themselves happiest when others share their happiness with them.

Be sure your grounds be good and then be sure you maintain your ground.

If you see anything "going at a ruinous sacrifice"—let it go.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonee Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I remained sinking; just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours. While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; D. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which felt through my whole system; at night I took a table spoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I am hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees. British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western County where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of this or any Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the great cat hood, ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer expectedly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

AYER'S

CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the premise to serious illness. Some bit of obstacle is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed to health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. Thence, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the dangerous and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her chin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are as mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Biliousness, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Ashael Hoyt, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR: AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all but one. In a hundred cases out of a hundred, I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contact with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PETERSBURG, Va., May 1, 1865.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. I believe it arises from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PRESLE,
Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Respectfully yours, ALEX. H. BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Metrop. Hospitals.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic, Worms.

From Dr. J. L. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best spechcals I have ever found. The ultimate effect upon the liver when I use them as excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Rev. P. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. Hundreds of our brethren have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the promoter of others that are worse. I believe costiveness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Swart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural secretion which should be partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PLANTERS HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians the disease grew worse and worse until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Markeside, I tried your Pills. Their effect was slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1865.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill. From the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use, Thom contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Cam Bell McNeil & Co., C. Britton Lindsay and all Medicine Dealers.

Poetry.

A GRAND OLD POEM.

Who shall judge a man from manners,
Who is all know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May be clothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feeling—
Satin vests could do no more.

There are springs of crystal nectar,
Ever welling out of stone;
There are pur, le buds and golden,
Hidden, crushed and overgrown:
God, who counts souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man upraised above his his fellows,
Oft large a his fellows rises,
Masters, rulers, lords, remember
That your meanest kinds are men,
Men by labour, men by feeling,
Men by thought and men by fame
Claiming equal right to sunshine,
In a man's sonorling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little weed-clad rills:
There are feeble inch high saplings
There are cedars on the hills
God who counts by souls not stations—
Loves and prospers you and me
For to Him, all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nations wealth or fame,
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same.
By the sweat of other's foreheads—
Living only to rejoice
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifted up its voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light.
Secret wrong shall never prosper,
While their is a sunny right—
God, whose world heart vo ce is ringing
Round us love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles,
As the pebbles in the sea.

Selections.

The Ghost Robber.

On a fine evening in the spring of 1830, a stranger mounted on a noble looking horse, passed slowly over the Black Forest.

Just as the sun was going to rest for the day, when the gloomy shadows were beginning to stalk, he drew rein, as he said—

'This must be near the spot, surely. I'll stop here, anyhow, for a while, and see what I can learn.

He thereupon dismounted and entered the parlor of the inn, where he sat down before a small table.

'How can I serve you, mein'heer?' said the landlord,

'See to my horse outside,' replied the guest, carelessly, but at the same time eyeing the landlord from head to foot 'and let me have some wine— Rhine will do.'

The landlord was turning to withdraw from the stranger's presence, when he stopped and said—

'Which way, mein'heer, do you travel?'

'To Neustadt,' replied the guest.

'You will rest here to night?' continued the landlord.

'I will stay two or three hours, but I must then be off, so as to reach my destination in the morning. I am going to purchase lumber for the market.'

'And you have considerable money with you, no doubt?' asked the landlord, innocently.

'Yes, considerable,' replied the guest.

'Then, if you'll take my advice,' said the landlord, 'you'll stay here till morning.'

'Why?' replied the stranger, looking up curiously.

'Because,' said the landlord, looking all around as if he were disclosing a great secret, and was afraid of being heard by somebody else, 'every man that passes over the road for the last ten years, has been robbed or murdered under very singular circumstances.'

'What were the circumstances?' asked the stranger, putting down his empty glass, and preparing to fill it again.

'Why you see,' the landlord went on, while he approached his guest a table, and took a seat, 'I have spoke with several who have been robbed, and all I could learn from them is that they meet in the lonely part of the wood something that looked white and ghostly, which frightened their horses so that they either ran away or threw their riders; they felt a chicking sensation, and a sort of smothering, and finally died, as they thought but awoke in an hour or so to find themselves lying by the roadside robbed of every thing.'

'Indeed!' ejaculated the stranger, looking abstractedly at the rafters in the ceiling, as though he was more intent counting them than he was in the landlord's story.

The innkeeper looked at him in amazement. Such perfect coolness he had not witnessed for a long time.

'You will remain then?' suggested the landlord, after waiting some time for his guest to speak.

'I?' cried the stranger, starting from his fit of abstraction as though he were not sure he was the person addressed. 'No, most certainly not; I'm going ahead, ghost or no ghost, to-night.'

Half an hour later the stranger and a guide called Wilhelm were out on the road, going at a round pace toward Neustadt.

During a flash of lightening the stranger observed that his guide looked very uneasy about something, and was slackening his horse's pace as though he intended to drop behind.

'Let on,' cried the stranger, 'don't be afraid.'

'I am afraid—I cannot,' replied the person addressed, continuing to hold his horse in until he was at least a length behind his companion. 'My horse is cowardly and unmanageable as a thunderstorm. If you will go on, though I think I can make him follow close enough to point out the road.'

The stranger pulled up instantly. A strange light gleamed in his eyes, while his hand sought his breast pocket, from which he drew something. The guide saw the movement, and stopped also.

'Guides should lead, not follow,' said the stranger, quietly, but with a firmness which seemed to be exceedingly unpleasant to the person addressed.

'But,' faltered the guide, 'my horse will not go.'

'Won't he?' queried the stranger, with simplicity in his tone.

The guide heard a sharp clink, and saw something gleam in his companion's right hand. He seemed to understand perfectly, for he immediately drove his spurs into his horse's flanks, and shot ahead of his companion without another word.

He no sooner reached his old position, however, than the stranger saw him give a sharp turn to the right, and then disappear, as though he he had vanished through the thick foliage of the trees that skirted the road

He heard the clatter of the horse as he galloped off. Without waiting another instant, he touched his horse lightly with the reins, gave him a prick with the rowels, and off the noble animal started like wind in the wake of the flying guide.

The stranger's horse being much superior to the other's, the race was a short one, and terminated by the guide being almost taken from the saddle by a heavy hand which was laid upon his bridle stopping him.

He turned in his seat, and beheld the stranger's face, dark and frowning, and trembled violently as he felt the smooth cold barrel of a pistol against his cheek.

'This cruel beast almost ran away with me,' cried the guide, composing himself as well as he could under the circumstances.

'Yes, I see,' said his companion, dryly, 'but mark my words, young man, if you horse plays such tricks again, he'll be the means of seriously injuring his master's health.'

They both turned and cantered back to the road. When they reached it again and turned the heads of their horses in the right direction the stranger said to his guide, in a tone which must have convinced him of his earnestness—

'Now, friend Wilhelm, I hope we understand each other for the rest of the journey. You are to continue on ahead of me, without either swerving to the right or left. If I see you do anything suspicious, I will drive a brace of bullets through you without another word of notice. Now push on.'

The guide had started as directed, but it was evident from his mutterings that he was alarmed at something besides the action of his follower.

In the meantime the thunder had increased in violence, and the flashes of lightning had become more frequent and blinding.

For about a mile the two horsemen rode on in silence; the guide keeping his directions to the letter, while his follower watched his every movement as a cat would watch a mouse.

Suddenly the guide stopped and looked behind him. Again he heard the click of the stranger's pistol.

'Have mercy, meinheer,' he groaned; 'I dare not go on.'

'I gave you three seconds to go on,' replied the stranger, sternly. 'One!'

'In heaven's name, spare me, implored the guide, almost overpowered with fear; 'look before me in the road and you will not blame me.'

The stranger looked. At first he saw something white standing motionless in the centre of the road, but presently a flash of lightning lit up the scene, and he saw that the white figure was indeed ghostly and really frightful looking enough to chill the blood in the veins of even the bravest man.

If his blood chilled for a moment, therefore, it was not through any fear he felt for his ghastly interceptor, for the next instant he set his teeth hard, while he whispered between them, just loud enough to be heard by his terror stricken guide—

'Be it man or devil, ride it down—I'll follow. Two!'

With a cry of despair upon his lips, the guide urged his horse forward at the top of his speed quickly followed by the stranger, who held his pistol ready in his hand.

In an instant the guide would have swept past the dreadful spot, but at that instant the report of a pistol rang through the dark forest, and the stranger heard a horse gallop through the wood riderless.

Finding himself alone, the stranger raised his pistol, took deliberate aim at the ghastly murderer, and pressed his finger upon the trigger. The apparition approached quickly, but in no hostile attitude. The stranger stayed his hand.

At length the ghost addressed him in a voice that was anything but sepulchral—

'Here, Wilhelm, ye move out of your perch this minute, and give me a helping hand. Ive hit the game while on the wing—haven't I?'

The stranger was nonplussed for a moment, but recovering himself, he grumbled something unintelligible, and leaped to the ground. One word to the horse, and the brave animal stood perfectly still.

By the snow white trappings on the would-be ghost he was enabled to grope his way in the dark towards that individual whom he found bending over a black mass, about the size of a man, on the road.

As the tiger pounces upon his prey, the stranger leaped upon the stooping figure before him and bore him to the ground.

'I arrest you in the King's name' cried the stranger, grasping the prisoner by the throat, and holding him tight—'Stir hand or foot until I have you perfectly secured, and I'll send your soul to eternity.'

This was such an unexpected turn of the arrangements that the would-be ghost could hardly believe his senses, and was handcuffed and stripped of his dagger and pistol before he found breath to speak.

'Are you not my Wilhelm?' he stammered out.

'No, landlord,' replied the individual addressed. 'I'm not; but I'm an officer of the King, at your service, on special duty to do what I to-night have accomplished. Your precious son, Wilhelm, you thought was leading a sheep to the slaughter, lies there on the road killed by his own father's hand.'

Two weeks later, at Brachsale prison, in Baden, the landlord of the sign of the Deer, and ghost-robber of the Black Forest, who was the same identical person having been proven guilty of numerous fiendish murders and artfully contrived robberies, committed at different times in the Black Forest, paid the penalty of his crimes by letting fall his head from the executioner's axe, since which time travelling through Schwartzwald has not been so perilous to life and purse, nor has there been seen anything in the shape of a ghost in that part of the country.

Moses and the Egyptian Monuments.

In one of the papyrus rolls preserved in the British Museum, the Egyptian scribe, Pinebsa, reports to his chief, Ascenemput, the condition in which he found the city of Ramses. It is incomparable, he says, and life is sweet therein; the place is filled with inhabitants, the ponds and canals with fishes and the fields with birds, while fragrant flowers bloom in the meadows, and the fruits taste like honey, and the granaries burst with corn. And then he describes the preparations which had been made for the reception of the King at his entrance into the city, and adds that the pressure of men to greet him was very great, but more especially to lay before him, "mighty in victory," their supplications and congratulations. And on the back of this withered papyrus is a memorandum of the very fact of building of which Geneis makes mention.

We should naturally expect to find the term by which the children of Israel were known to foreign nations applied to them on the Egyptian monuments; and, in fact the most recent investigation has found this term in the Egyptian destination Aperu. Thus, in a papyrus well preserved at Leyden, in Holland, is found the following writing, from the scribe Bekenptihe: "May my master find content therein that I have accomplished the task which my master had assigned to me in the words, to wit: 'Give sustenance to the soldiers and also to the Hebrews who transport stones to the great city of the King Ramses-Miamun, Lover of the truth [and who] are put under command of the captain of the police-soldiers, Amenemnan.' I supplied them with food each month according to the excellent command which my master had given unto me." And again in the rocks in the valley of Hamamat, along which went the old Egyptian highway from Coptos on the Nile to the port of Berenice on the Red Sea, is an inscription which contains, among other things, a review of the number of men employed there in constructing it, among whom are a troop of eight hundred Hebrews under the escort of Egyptian soldiers of the police of Libyan descent, called mazai.

Two things, therefore, may be considered established: "first, the Egyptian records name Ramses as the builder of the cities of Pithom and Ramses; and, secondly, that the same records speak of the Hebrews in a way to indicate that their position in respect to the building of these cities was that of forced laborers under police superintendence. Now, in the Bible, the builder of Pithom and Ramses appears at once as an oppressor of the children of Israel, and as a new king in Egypt who knew not Joseph; a fact which shows that Joseph could never have come to the court of an Egyptian Pharaoh, but must have been taken up by one of their Semitic conquerors in the Delta, who, as we have seen, lived at Avyan Tanis, and thence governed the country as far as Memphis and Heliopolis.

After the liberation of their country from these usurpers, the Pharaohs of Egyptian race could have no feelings for the kindred of the latter; and for three hundred years, therefore, they oppressed them grievously, their oppression reaching its culmination under Ramses II. and his successor. The birth of Moses fell, as we have said, under Ramses II.; and under his successor, whom the monuments call Menephthes, occurred the exodus when Moses was eighty years of age. If, therefore, Menephthes reigned twenty years, as the Egyptian list of kings state Moses would have been born about the sixth year of Ramses which corresponds with the statement in the Bible that the building of Pithom and Ramses occurred in the first year of Ramses II.

The building of these cities, it must be added, had a strong political motive at the bottom, for they were not merely designed as a defence against inroads from Canaan, but as centres whence to afford means to keep down their own subjects, perpetrated with the restless Semitic spirit, as is manifest from the treaty found inscribed on one of the walls at Thebes, made between Ramses II., in the twenty-first year of his reign, and Cheteser, king of the Hittites, which contains, among other things, the following clause: "If the subjects of King Ramses come over to the King of the Hittites, the King of the Hittites is not to receive them, but to compel them to return to the King of Egypt."—words which may serve to throw light upon the confession of Pharaoh in the Bible: "Come on, let us deal wisely with them [the Hebrews]; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land" (Exodus i. 10).

Touching the Egyptian origin of the name of one ex, says Brugsch, there can be now but one opinion. The monuments make mention of several persons who bore the name of Mas or Mass, a word signifying "the child;" among others, one of the governors of Memphis, under the Pharaoh of the exodus, with whom, indeed, Josephus seems to have confounded Moses the lawgiver, when he speaks of the latter as having led an Egyptian army to Æthiopia in his youth, and having penetrated to Meroe, where he married the Egyptian princess Tharbis, who out of love to him had opened the gates of that city.

The whole legislation of Moses, it has often been remarked, shows the traces of his Egyptian origin; and there is one fact in relation to it mentioned by Brugsch which we do not remember to have met with before. The religious monuments of the Egyptians, whether stone or papyrus, bear testimony everywhere to the fact that the priests had originally a distinct conception, and taught the doctrine of the unity of God; and that however much this doctrine may have been perverted afterward in the animal worship of the people, it was still preserved by the priests of their mysteries, and revealed to the initiated, but to them alone, although a dark allusion to it was made in the papyrus roll which was put into the mouth of the dead to accompany them to the grave. The name, however, of the one God was not mentioned in these rolls; it was only paraphrased with the words nuk pu nuk; "I am that I am"—words which recall at once to the sundar phrase in Exodus (iii. 14) with which God names himself to Moses and the children of Israel and which, in their Hebrew form Jahveh, unpronounced Jehovah, signifies the same as the Egyptian formula nuk pu nuk—"I am that I am."—Round Table.

The "Specials" Proclamation,

OR TWO WRONGS MAKE ONE RIGHT.

We have hitherto believed this logical contradiction to be beyond the possibility of any other solution; but we live in strange times, when produce results of a like character. The proclamation below speaks for itself; it is composed of two Fenian proclamations (Manchester and Clerkenwell); and when read separately there can be but little doubt about there being two outrageous "Wrongs;" but let them be read as our whole "Specials' Proclamation, (as "Burrah for old England") and it cannot be denied that they are one 'Noble Right."

Hurrah for	Old England
Permission	Is curse
We fight for	The Queen and Constitution
The Fenian Brotherhood	Is Belgium with Satan

THE DRY ROT IN MEN.

A very curious disease is the dry rot in men, and difficult to detect the beginning of. It had carried Horace Kinch inside the wall of the old King's Bench prison, and it had carried him out with his feet foremost. He was a likely man to look at, in the prime of life, well-to-do, as clever as he needed to be, and popular among many friends. He was suitably married, and had healthy and pretty children. But, like some fair-looking houses, or fair-looking ships, he took a dry rot. The first strong external revelation of the dry rot in man is a tendency to lurk and lounge; to be at street corners without intelligible reason; to be going anywhere when met; to be about many places rather than at any; to do nothing tangible, but to have an intention of performing a variety of intangible duties to-morrow or the day after. When this manifestation of the disease is observed, the observer will usually connect it with a vague impression once formed or received that the patient was living a little too hard. He will scarcely have had leisure to turn it over in his mind, and form the terrible suspicion of "dry rot," when he will notice a change for the worse in the patient's appearance,—a certain slovenliness and deterioration, which is not poverty, nor dirt, nor intoxication, not ill health, but simply dry rot. To the successful a smell as of strong waters, in the morning; to that a looseness respecting money; to that a stronger smell, as of strong waters at all times; to that a looseness respecting everything; to that, a trembling of the limbs, somnolency, misery and stumbling to pieces. As it is in wood, so it is in men. Dry rot advances at a compound usury, quite incalculable. A plank is found affected with it, and the whole structure is deserted. Thus it had been with the unhappy Horace Kinch, lately buried by a small subscription. Those who knew him had not high done saying, "so well off, so comfortably established, with such hope before him, and yet, it is feared, with a slight touch of dry rot!" when he the man was all dry rot and dust.—Dickens.

An exchange remarks that it was the wet rot.

THE POOR BOY.—Don't be ashamed, my lad, if you have a patch on your elbow. It is no mark of disgrace. It speaks well for your industrious mother. For our part, we would rather see a dozen patches on your jacket than hear one profane word escape from your lips. No good boy will shun you because you cannot dress as well as your companions; and if a bad boy sometimes laughs at your appearance, say nothing, my lad, but walk on. We know many a rich and good man who was once as poor as you. There is our next door neighbor, in particular, now one of our wealthy men, who told us a short time since that when a child he was glad to receive the cold potatoes from his neighbors' table.

Robert Collyer says when a man gets married at 45, he soon becomes very sorry that he did not do it before.

The New World says: The announcement by the Pall Mall Gazette that General Butler will succeed Minister Adams, creates considerable alarm in London. There is a deal of plate in that way.

DETECTIVE CULLEN SHOT.

This morning, between three and four o'clock Detective Andrew Cullen, of the City Police, was shot, it is feared fatally, by a man whom he had arrested and was conducting to the station. The would-be murderer is supposed to be an American, and was arrested near Vigor garden by Detectives Cullen and Bouchard, as it is stated, on a charge of robbery. The whole party was coming along Notre Dame street, Cullen and a policeman walked beside their prisoner, and Bouchard preceding them a few paces When opposite Dr. Picault's place, the prisoner warned Cullen that he, prisoner, had a revolver, and would shoot him; and the latter scarcely had time to reply, when the prisoner drew his revolver and fired at him, the ball entering the lower part of the abdomen, just above the right groin. Cullen dropped upon his knee and fired his own revolver at the prisoner, but without effect. The prisoner then dashed away from the guard and made towards a lumber-yard, and, though immediately and closely pursued, was lost sight of in the darkness. Cullen was at once removed to the station, and medical assistance sent for; and detective Bouchard immediately despatched men to the various toll-gates and wharves, to intercept the fugitive, if he should attempt to leave the city. About an hour and a half afterwards, Bouchard, with two other policemen were making their way down St. Joseph street, and when near the toll-gate they came up to a man who was hurriedly going the same way, and whom Bouchard at once recognized as the one who had so lately escaped him on Notre Dame street.—Bouchard stepped up to this person and presented his revolver, when the man cried out not to shoot, and immediately surrendered himself. He was then conveyed to the central station, and placed under close confinement. He is a fine-looking man, over six feet in height, and about 30 years of age. Cullen was subsequently removed to his house on College street, where Doctors Leprohon and Hingston made an examination of the wound, which, though very serious, may not be fatal. The ball has not yet been extracted, and it is considered doubtful if it can be.—Witness.

HORRIBLE MURDERS.

SEAFORTH, June 8.—Nicholas Malady and wife, residing about three miles from Seaforth, in the township of Tuckersmith, were found yesterday at two o'clock p. m., murdered in their bed room. I have just returned from the scene of the murder, a horrible sight. The post mortem examination of the body of Malady shows that he was shot with buckshot. Three grains were found in his brain. The wife was lying on the floor beside the bed, with the head smashed to a jelly by an axe. The wall, bed curtains, window curtains and floor are covered with blood. A son of the murdered man, a son-in-law and brother of the latter, have been arrested. No very strong evidence against them appears as yet. The house was robbed of considerable money.

The Montreal Gazette of yesterday says: We have to-day received the following despatch from the Gazette's special frontier correspondent: I have heard the rumor, but cannot vouch for its correctness, that the Fenians intend to hold fairs at Malone and St. Albans, similar to the one now at Buffalo, but only as a cloak to cover the gathering of their forces at these points. A person residing across the lines, but who is thoroughly British in sentiments and reliable has been in Canada this week, and has stated that the transportation of arms and amunition to the frontier if correct, and that about the 20th or this month is the time fixed. There has also been a leaking out, as the time approaches, of some round Chateauguay. Four Corners and Burke, (probably being so elated they cannot keep it,) that this month will not end without a stand being made in Canada by the army of the Irish Republic. A few days ago two cases of arms were taken off the cars at the Summit. Station, twelve miles east of Chateauguay Four Corners.

MURDER AND INQUEST.—John Hyland stabbed in six different places on the 11th May, by a French lumberman named Oliver LeDucier died on the 29th inst., after suffering considerable torment. A Jury was empannelled by Coroners Roy and McDonald, and a post mortem examination was held by Doctors Lister and Power, who attended on the deceased. Only a few witnesses were examined, and the inquest adjourned to first June. S. B. Burdett, Esq., conducted the defence, and the County Attorney, Mr. Coleman, watched the case on behalf of the Crown. We will give the evidence on resumption of the inquest.—Intelligence.

PUNSHON AND BARNUM.—The Rev. Morley Punshon delivered his celebrated lecture "Daniel in Babylon," before the Young Men's Christian Association, in the Crosby Opera House, Chicago, on Tuesday evening, 19th inst. A few years since, P. T. Barnum wrote this distinguished man, offering him $10,000 per annum if he would lecture for him in America, in reply to which Mr. Punshon referred him for an answer to the 13th chapter of Acts and 10th verse: "O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, will thou not cease to prevent the right ways of the Lord?"

INTEMPERANCE.—A pamphlet containing the "Proceedings of the State Temperence Society, held in Harrisburg, Pa, on February 12th and 13th, 1868," contains some startling facts. Among others is a table showing that drunkenness is invading, to an alarming extent, not only the families of the rich and cultivated, but is subjugating the female portion of refined society. The following enumeration of admissions to the New York State Asylum for Inebriates is suggestive: Clergymen, 89; judges, 8; Merchants, 340; physicians, 226; gentlemen, 240; rich men's daughters, 1300!

In an editorial article of some length, the editor of l'Evenement says that Sir John A Macdonald, the present Prime Minister, has tried to politically assassinate four of his colleagues; that he has succeeded with Mr Geo. Brown and with Mr. Galt; that Mr. McDougall is looking for a safe retreat: but that the same game tried with with Mr. Cartier was a failure, the latter proving too much for him. The result is, according to a Quebec paper, that Sir John reigns, but Sir George governs.

A young couple were married in Lexington, Ky., the other day, and started on their wedding tour. The same afternoon they arrived in Cincinnati. After reaching that city, the groom thought he would call on some friends. He returned to the hotel in a condition repulsive to every Good Templar. His spouse refused him admission to her room, and returned home in disgust.

ROBBERY.—The Hamilton Times says:—On Saturday evening last, three men entered the store of Mr. James Menary, post-master and township treasurer of Widder, and knocked him down senseless. The ruffians then rifled the house of $750 in cash, being the township funds, and made good their escape. Mr. Menery was severely injured, but is recovering.

According to the London Owl of the 6th, the transfer of the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company to the British Government has been agreed to by the chairman, Lord Kimberley. A measure to effect this will be introduced into Parliament in the course of a few days.

The Leader understands that the eminent English divine—the Rev. W. Morley Punshon—intends to remain three years Canada, and that he will be nominally connected with the Richmond Street Wesleyan Church in Toronto, preaching there perhaps once a month.

THE WILD LANDS.

In our last issue we referred to the abortive free grant system of the present government of Ontario, because of its narrowness and uselessness; being confined to a few townships and those townships in districts not likly to attract settlers. We also mentioned the fact that there are large tracts of land fit for cultivation in this County, and we are now in a position to assert on good authority that there are hundreds of applications for lands to buy, and of course there would be, if given away. We have gathered the following items from parties who are well able to give correct information:—

In Galway there are 10,000 acres of land fit for settlement and not a creature on it; in Harvey, 10,000; in Snowden, 6,000 to 7,000; in Minden, 4,000 to 5,000; in Stanhope, 5,000 to 6,000; in Cavendish, 4,000 to 5,000; Somerville, 3,000 to 4,000; Lutterworth, 5,000 to 6,000; Hindon, 3,000 to 4,000; making a total of more than 50,000 acres of land on the Bobcaygeon road alone that are fit for settlement and would be taken up right away if in the market. We have also authority for saying that there have been over 200 applications to the Crown Land Agent at Bobcaygeon for lands since February last, and that invariably they have to be sent away with the old cry "not in the market yet." On the Burleigh road settlement, in Burleigh, in Anstruther, in Chandos, Cardiff and Monmouth, there are also large tracts not yet settled, while there are numbers of settlers who havegone in and cleared and improved, hoping that the free grant system would be extended to them also.

From these figures it will be seen that there is room in this county to settle between 500 and 600 families; these with an average of 5 persons to a family would add to our population 3,000, and would increase our wealth from year to year—in fact would be equal to one of our largest townships. As it is those lands bring in no revenue to the government, they pay no taxes to the County, they are there more as snares to invite dishonest jobbers to cull the timber and sell it to large lumbermen, and are really a source of crime rather than an advantage, as is well known to the people in the neighborhood of lumbering districts, and as our courts testify. But there is a worse feature in this contracted, short-sighted policy of the present Commissioner of Crown Lands. Our young men are forced to leave the country and seek a home in the territories of the United States, because they cannot get land to purchase at home, where they would prefer remaining among their relatives and acquaintances; the emigrant who comes amongst us finds himself in the same position and eventually he leaves for the Western States, and all the while the lands are unsold, unsettled and likely to remain so. We call upon the electors of this County to take a note of this state of things, and if they cannot now by their protests or entreaties induce a change in the insane policy that leaves the back country unsettled, our sons forced away from us, and compels us to build up the United States at the expense of the Dominion, perhaps they can do so at the next election by electing slow coaches to stay at home and attend to some business that they can manage, as assured ly they do not understand our wants, nor are they guided by such a liberal policy as should actuate men of broad, statesmanlike views. We thought of giving our readers the eloquent speeches of our representatives in the Ontario Government on this subject, but in looking over the reports of debates we looked in vain for a word on the subject. True, they did not say much on any other subject more than this one; but this is one that concerns the electors materially and ought to have received a little attention. Let us agitate until they are compelled to give heed. We are told that Monmouth and Cardiff is to be put into market, but why pass over Chandos and Anstruther where there is good land? Let the whole lands be given away to settlers. Surely men, women and children are better citizens than bears, wolves and foxes.

FENIANS.

There are reports of gatherings at different points on the frontier, and an attack is momentarily expected. They are to make an attack especially on the Lower Canadian frontier, and for that they are gathering at St. Albans. Prescott also is threatened, and a baker of Ogdensburg has furnished them with a large quantity of biscuit. Arms too are being sent forward, and there is every indication of a raid at several points. We do not altogether believe that their strength is as great as represented, viz., 150,000, but there can be little doubt that they have men if they have money. The government, we are led to believe, is taking all necessary precautions to prevent a raid, or if they come to punish them severely. The volunteers here have orders to hold themselves in readiness at a moments notice, so that none of them can really undertake any contract or employment of importance. We believe that it would be better to let them come over this time and then surround the cut-throats and let not one of them back. It would be a blessing to our own people to be rid of them, and a blessing to the rest of themselves, as it would tend to break up the organization and drive them to some honest business instead of living on the hard earnings of the poor servant girls that are induced to give their money.

From the Review, of July 5, 1867.

"LOOK OUT!

"The following advertisement has appeared in the daily Globe for a week past:—

"TO NEWSPAPER MEN!

"There is an excellent opening for a new paper, supporting the principles of the Toronto Reform Association of 1867, in a prosperous and increasing county town, where a large advertising and printing patronage can be secured. A reliable Reformer, capable of conducting such a paper will find this a first rate opportunity. Address JOURNALIST, care of the Editor of the Globe, Toronto."

"July 5."

"Our readers will perhaps be surprised to learn that Peterboro is the "prosperous and increasing County Town" referred to. But what is the matter with the Peterboro Examiner, the present Reform organ? Is it not servile enough in its imitation of the Globe, and sufficiently rabid, inductive and untruthful to suit even the ambitious schemes of some of the fast Reformers who have found here "a local habitation and a name." Pray, gentlemen, be considerate to the journalist who has published your vapid squibs, and has for years been invoking "retribution" on the cruel "Tories;" who got "sick" of the Coalition, soon after Mr. Brown had that fit of the "blues," and who is ready to do any amount of fibbing for your especial benefit! Do, gentlemen, be considerate!"—Editor Review.

Our readers will not be surprized to learn that the above was a falsehood invented and published by the Editor of the Review, as we have letters in our possession to prove, and is one of the many mean, contemptible ways that the Editor of that paper has taken to damage his opponents. Tit for tat can now be given with a shadow of truth.

Wanted, an Editor for a country paper not one hundred miles from Peterboro. One who will refrain from attending Fenian meetings, but who can, at the same time, ride a Fenian and a super loyal horse, and one who has been accustomed to manufacture all sorts of stories when occasion requires it, would be preferrrd, for the last one was such an adept at this work that none but a clever dodger need succeed him. If he has a little Fenian sympathy all the better, but we wish him to understand that he must be loyal.

Surely he is not falling into disgrace. What's the matter? Don't cast him off yet, you will not get one so pliant again, besides he is now well accustomed to fibbing and that sort of thing; even his enemies admit that in that line he has few equals. Do be considerate. Don't let him go; he'll not go to Boston or Albany any more, nor will he crack nuts with General Spears. Give him another trial; you will not get one so well able to manage the Fenian war nag.

Take Care of Paddy Mungovan.

There is a poor creature of the above name who travels this and neighboring counties as a kind of agent for the Toronto Leader, but in our opinion as propagator of everything mean and cowardly, and who is inspired by the most unholy and villainous motives, as the sequel showeth. We clip the following from his correspondence to the Canadian Freeman—a newspaper whose Editor delights in collecting slanders against Protestants, and has become the mouth-piece of Fenians:—

"In the press, in the workshop and on the public streets" (says this dastardly bigot) "we (i. e. Roman Catholics) have been taunted with Fenianism; nay, in the common schools—a fact not unknown to Mr. Stratton, County Superintendent of Education—the classical and standring phrase, d——d Fenian is applied to our children."

There never was a baser or more wickedly devised slander against our Protestant people published, nor do we believe there could another man be found, besides this poor creature Mungovan, who would give publicity to such a base and unfounded assertion. Mr. Stratton most unhesitatingly asserts that during the two years he has been Superintendent he never heard the epithet, Fenian, applied to a child of a Catholic or to any other child; nor did he ever hear it spoken of in connection with school matters in the county. But Mr. Stratton does know of many instances in which Protestant Boards of Trustees have removed their dearly cherished Bible from the School, in order to remove every hinderance out of the way of Roman Catholic children obtaining the advantage of a common school education; and we dare assert that not a single instance of the use of the expression can be adduced by this filthy calumniator of Protestants. This perambulating firebrand, who infests our county and who lives on our bounty and generosity, but who is full of party rancour and bigotry; who is to be found in every corner where there is a Catholic, we fear for no good purpose, and who glories in slandering those very Protestants of whose generosity he too often partakes, should be watched, for he who penned this base libel on the Protestants of this County and their children is unfit to be at large and should be taken up as a disturber of the peace, a dangerous propagator of error, and should be confined in the Asylum or some Reformatory. As to his abuse of the Examiner or any one connected with it, he might as well save his small shot and send it to Fenian O'Neil, for whom no doubt he has a particular sympathy. Mungovan does not relish the idea of having peddlers, news-hacks, scouts and spies explain how they make their living; if this were done there would be perhaps one firebrand less in this community and one more in our county boarding house.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

The County Court and Court of Quarter Sessions opened here on Tuesday. R. Dennistoun, Esq., presiding, Thomas Chambers and J. T. Henthorn, Esqs., on the bench.

COONEY CASE.

James Cooney was arraigned on nine Counts—shooting at Thomas Lehane, with intent to kill, shooting with intent to wound, shooting with intent to disfigure, shooting with intent to disable, and shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm to said Lehane; also, stabbing with intent to cut and wound; with intent to disable; with intent to disfigure; with intent to do grievous bodily harm.

W. H. Scott appeared for the Crown, and Sidney Smith for the prisoner, Cooney.

Mr. Scott opened the case in a short speech, of about five minutes, explaining the nature of the evidence he would bring forward and the kind of evidence. He also pointed out that the different counts were different forms of the same charge as arranged as to meet the requirements of the statutes in this case provided. He also pointed out to the jury that they could find him guilty on any one of the counts, or the whole of them, if they thought the evidence would warrant them.

Thomas S. Lehane sworn—Knew the prisoner, Cooney; saw him near the boundary line, near Emily, on the 16th day of May last, in the morning, as he (Lehane) was coming to Peterboro; did not see him again till evening when about to return home, when he saw him sitting on the road side about a mile from town at Scobell's; did not know him till quite near, Cooney was sitting on a stone. When they came near, he got up and crossed before the team to the right hand side and told Lehane to stop, saying that he (Lehane) had insulted him in Emmismore some time ago, and now he must get out of the waggon and beg his pardon or he would not go home safe.—He re Lehane asked how he had insulted him. Cooney said witness had broken his stick and given him a glass of water. Witness remarked that this occurred in speaking of Mr. McGee's murder; that he was sorry for having done so, and had intended to buy him a stick or pay him for it as soon as he would see him. Cooney said he didn't care a d——n for the stick, but he must get out and beg his pardon. Witness said what need getting out. Mr. Corkery said something that witness did not hear. Cooney then jumped to witness and took hold of him to pull him out. Witness fell back to save himself. Prisoner endeavored to get him feet up. Witness threw the lines and whip away and held by the wagon box, but prisoner getting hold of his feet got him on his back. Before witness got on his feet Mr. Corkery was on the road and tried to get hold of Cooney. Cooney jumped back and got two stones and with the stone in his right hand struck Mr. Corkery on the left side of the head and cut him. Corkery then got hold of him saying, Cooney, what do you mean? We both got hold of Cooney. In the struggle his coat turned up, when Mrs. Lehane shouted he has a knife, take it from him. Witness got hold of the pouch, but in the meantime Cooney had got the knife and made a thrust at Corkery, by which Corkery was cut on the head. Witness then got hold of his hand and got the knife out of it, but Cooney caught it in his left hand and tried to hold on, and in the struggle got his hand cut. Mr. Lehane threw the knife away and shouted he has a pistol. Corkery then seized the wrist of the hand the pistol, was in, while Cooney endeavored to raise the pistol and fired. Witness was a little behind Mr. Corkery when the shot was fired. Witness got the revolver away and threw it on the grass.

Here the revolver was produced in Court, when Lehane said he believed it was it, at any rate it was like it.

Witness proceed—He then gave Cooney a kick on the head or about it, when Mr. Corkery told him not to kick him. They got a halter shank and tied him and brought him to town, Mrs. Lehane driving the team. While tying him he appeared as if about to get away, when witness returned and gave him another kick. Witness also picked up the knife and dagger and put them under the cushion on the waggon seat, put Cooney's hat on him and came and delivered all to Mr. Arnot at Morgan's Hotel.

To Mr. Scott—Did not think of him from the time I saw him in the morning until I saw him again, then felt somewhat alarmed as I had been told that he carried the revolver and knife to defend himself against government detectives. On the way down he said to Corkery but for this he would have been in the United States. Corkery replied you do not mean to say that you stayed for this revenge on Lehane, to which Cooney replied that he did and would.

The knife was then showed and testified to. The wound witness received was a sore one, and at one time he feared the dagger had been poisoned.

To Mr. Smith.—I first noticed him rising from the stone. Don't remember who made the remark about the man first.

Here witness looked at his published evidence, owing to some question put. It was taken away.

There were several things in the waggon; don't remember everything; there was a wheelbarrow, and bags, and other things.—Did not go out to fight; there was no challenge; only gave two kicks; Corkery didn't strike Cooney; he was fighting like a tiger: Corkery and Mrs. Lehane both said not to kick him.

Here a remark from Mr. Smith about the published evidence being that Mrs. Lehane drove home the team that evening, was contradicted by Mr. Lehane, saying that was not so, as she drove it to town, and that it did not appear that way in the Examiner.

Witness saw Cooney in Emismore last fall. Didn't know that he took any side in the election; never had any words about the election. Do not know where he came from the Tuesday that the stick was broke in at O'Donohue's hotel. Did not know who called Cooney into the room. Pat. McCarthy was there also. We were talking about McGee's murder. He said that McGee ought to be shot, or the man that killed him ought not to be hanged; think commenced the trouble. Did not speak of O'Connell. I gave him a glass of water after breaking his stick, not as a deliberate insult. There was no challenge. Did not charge Cooney with being a Fenian.

Here witness refused to tell who gave him information of Cooney having arms to defend himself against government detectives, and appealed to the court not to be compelled to answer the question.

To Mr. Scott—Not certain whether he kicked him before the shot was fired; thinks not.

Martin Corkery sworn—Nearly repeated the evidence of the former witness. So closely did they agree both in the way the row commenced, the scuffle, the stabbing, shooting, kicking, except that Mr. Corkery thought all the kicks were given at once, while Lehane thought he went back and kicked Cooney lest he might get away.

To Mr. Smith—Saw Cooney during election times; do not know that he took either sides; was not at O'Donohue's on the day of the breaking of the stick; never told John Sullivan that I was not struck; did not go before a magistrate; he told me I would not be required; never told Pat Galvin that we took up Cooney lest he might take us up; I thought prisoner only made one stroke with the knife; heard Lehane say that he gave another kick; never heard of "bad blood" between them till this. Patrick Galvin said to witness it would have been better to have given him a good beating and let him go, than to bring him to town into the midst of his enemies.

Ann Crough sworn—Knew the prisoner, saw him in Emmismore, was in the waggon when they met Cooney on the day referred to; Cooney said that Lehane must beg his pardon, jerked Lehane out of the waggon; all three were on the road in a scuffle; witness left for home.

This witness, evidently, was unwilling or afraid to tell all she knew of the matter.

William Arnott, Chief Constable, sworn—Testified to putting Cooney in lock up, to the revolver (a seven shooter) being the one Lehane or George Johnston gave him, he could not say which, as it was dark, and Johnston addressed him.

Geo. Johnston, sworn—Saw prisoner on the 16th day of May. Saw Messrs. Arnott and McFadden going up street and followed, and found them having Cooney a prisoner. Mr. Arnot sent me for the revolver and dagger. Mr. Lehane brought them to Mr. Arnott. I said here are the weapons, but Lehane handed them over. I went to Jail to tell Mr. McWilliams; was there when prisoner came; got water to wash him, he was bloody. Said he was from Cavan; said he got cut with a knife, and that he had fired a shot to frighten Lehane.

C. B. Sullivan sworn—Had ferried the prisoner across Mud Lake about four o'clock the evening of the row; had no conversation with him. Cooney said Lehane had abused him. Witness asked why did he let Lehane abuse him. He answered he did not intend to strike Lehane in Emmismore. Didn't know what side Cooney had taken at last election.

John Archer sworn—Was coming to Peterboro on the 16th May; I saw a man behind the fence at Scobell's; could not tell who he was; was dressed in black clothes, black hat with broad brim; but did not see his face as his back was towards the road. About 20 minutes afterwards met Lehane and Corkery.

Mr. Lehane recalled—Never told John Cooney that I would not have taken prisoner, but that I feared he would take me up. I may have told John Cooney that if I would let him go I could be indicted for it.

John Cooney, sworn,—Reside in Emily. Prisoner was at my place on Friday evening, before the row spoken of. Consider it a near way through Emmismore to town. Left my place to go to his sisters. Know Lehane; saw him on Monday last; told him I would not have cared if he had given him a sound beating, but not to put him to jail. Brought a letter to Lehane to settle it. This was at O'Donohue's. We had some talk about seeing my brother. Witness understood Lehane to say that if he had let his brother go, he, Lehane, would be indicted.

To Mr. Smith,—Understood him to say that he would have let brother go but for fear that he would take him up.

John Sullivan—Knew the parties, saw Corkery on the evening of 16th May, heard him say in answer to a question from some one that if Cooney struck him with a stone he (Corkery) did not know it. Corkery's back was to the wall at the time in the Mayor's office.

Dr. Kincaid sworn—Dressed Mr. Corkery's head; there was a cut 2½ inches long by ¼ inch deep; think it was done with a stone, not with a knife; the cut was rough as if done with a stone; might have been done with the guard of the knife or handle, but not with the knife.

Patrick Galvin sworn—Had a conversation with Corkery on 25th May; said to him it was a sad affair between himself, Cooney and Lehane. He said he would not for fifty dollars have anything to do with it, and that they would have let him away but for fear that he would turn round and take them, did not say for what he would take them.

P. McCarthy, sworn,—Was in O'Donohue's the night spoken of, with Lehane, in a room off the bar; were talking about D'Arcy McGee; saw Cooney coming; Lehane saw him also, and called him in. He said that McGee was a clever man to whom every Irish Catholic could look to with pride, but he had not used his talents for his country's good; said O'Connell had done so. They went out to O'Donde; Lehane treated witness and Cooney; the latter to a glass of water sayi g it was good enough for him.

To Mr. Scott—Cooney said nothing when Lehane broke the stick. Lehane said the splinters were like O'Neil, O'Mahony, Cooney & Co. They had some joking. Lehane struck witness and Cooney with broken stick. Witness thought it was fun.

Mr. Robert Ward fell, of South Monaghan, James Chalmers, of Peterborough, Robert McCamus, Jas. Aitken 3d and Jas. Fitzgerald of Cavan, were brought to testify to prisoner's character, while he lived in Cavan. All gave him a good character while there, but none of them knew anything of him for about two years.

R. Trenwith, his uncle, it is said, testified to prisoner having lived with him from January '67 to May '67; then having gone to the States; came back in three months; thought this was last year. 1866. The Court said last year was '67, when Mr. Trenwith asked was this '68.

John Maguire, Sworn,—Was with Mr. Corkery on the 16th May; heard him say that Cooney had struck him with a stone. Did not hear him say that he did not know if Cooney had struck him. Did not see Mr. Sullivan that evening with Mr. Corkery.

This being the last witness in the Council proceeded to address the jury.

The trial occupied from 9.30 a.m., to 6 o'clock p.m., when the jury retired, and at 8 o'clock returned with a verdict of guilty on the 5th count, viz.: shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm, but with recommendation to mercy. The sentence was not pronounced when going to press.

PRESBYTERIAN.—The Synod of the Old Kirk sits this week in Kingston.

THE WESLEYAN CONFERENCE is also in session in Kingston. Deputations from each waited on the other and expressed their fraternal regards. Mr. Punshon was chosen President.

BIBLE CHRISTIAN.—The fourteenth annual conference of this denomination is held this year in Mitchell. The Rev. Cephar Barker was chosen President.

THE PRIMITIVE METHODIST CONFERENCE meets in Hamilton.

THE SYNOD of the Canada Presbyterian Church, will meet in Montreal on Tuesday next.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I was much pleased on reading a letter in your last issue over the signature of "Vulcan," in reference to the price of fresh meat charged by the Peterboro' butchers in the Market stalls. If "Vulcan" is as powerful at the anvil as he is with the pen, I think it will be admitted, he has not assumed an inappropriate nom de plume.

I am not surprised to see that this dangerous monopoly, created by the Town Council, and fostered under the Market By-law, is beginning to be felt to be oppressive, and I trust, now that public attention is being called to it, such an outcry will be raised against it that will cause a change to be made, which will give relief to the already over burdened rate-payers of this fair Town.

For the purpose of showing what outsiders think of our wisdom in this respect, I will, with your permission, give an extract from a letter addressed to the Whitby Chronicle newspaper, last autumn, by Mr. James Rowe, of that town:—

"'As an instance of the folly of market building in towns like Whitby, I beg to call your attention to the following from the Lindsay Post of the 29th ult. A correspondent of that paper writes:—"I am credibly informed that the butchers, some eight in number, paid to the Town of Peterborough last year somewhere in the neighbourhood of $700 for stall rents. Now I will estimate the average sales of these eight butchers to be $1500 each per annum, a very low estimate. This represents at 10c. per pound, 120,000 pounds of meat, which they could easily obtain, (having the exclusive right of selling by retail,) would be imposed by these butchers—what does it show, even at these low calculations? That the Town of Peterborough paid out $2,400 for $700 received."

So well recognized is the fact by our American neighbours, I refer most particularly to the inhabitants of York State,—That scarcely any town of 10,000 inhabitants and under, will have such an institution as a Market House; and now in Peterborough, only the other day, a By-law for the erection of a new Town Hall was voted down by a majority of over three to one."

The above by no means shows all the loss that would be sustained under such a state of things, for, while we were last year paying from 8 to 12 cents per pound to the butchers for meat, it could be had of the farmer, in large or small quantities at from 4 to 7 cents, while the butchers in Peterborough it is well known obtained 15c. per pound during most of the year.

It is unnecessary at present to add anything to the above. Those who have small incomes and large families, will readily see the force of this correspondents arguments, and will no doubt, if an opportunity offers, vote in favor of a free market in Peterboro.

FREE TRADE.

June, 1868.

A VILE SLANDER.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—It is not very often that we in the "back woods" are called upon to vindicate our character against the slanderous reports or attacks of either our neighbours or outsiders, and less seldom against the slanderous attacks of religious bigots; but on account of a bundle of falsehoods published in a filthy sheet called the "Canadian Freeman," by which the character of one of our most esteemed Teachers is assailed, and the most flagrant lies about her interfering with the religion of her pupils published, we are constrained to ask the insertion of this letter. The following is the morsel to which I refer:—

"The Catholic people living in School Section No. 5 Verulam, county of Victoria must be a three headed people, in that they have in their midst a certain Miss McLean, a worthy daughter of Zion, to look after their spiritual welfare. Miss McLean teaches the young idea how to shoot in that section, for which she receives a handsome salary, contributed alike by Protestants and Catholics. In the midst of her multifarious duties she finds time to have an occasional 'wrestle' with the man of sin, and what more patent weapons could she employ in her encounters with the antiquated old gentleman than a bundle of tracts?"

"It does not appear that a life of 'single blessedness' has the same miseries for her that it had for those 'sour old maids,' Miss Rebecca Cantwell or 'Shandy Maguire,' or Miss Olive Samuels in the 'confessions of an apostate'—Be this as it may, Miss McLean, Mistress girl that progenitors, the 'Cavan Blazers,' is bound to have a 'tussle' with error. Among the recipients of Miss Missionary McLean's evangelical favour is a little boy, son of Mr A. P. Sentry, an extensive Catholic ratepayer of that section. To manifest her deep solicitude for this boy's spiritual welfare, our pious Missionary frequently presented him with a bundle of tracts, all of them of course breathing the most Christian sentiments; because full of the most virulent abuse of Catholicity. Did the missionary zeal of the fair "Colporteur" end here? Oh! no. Mr. A. P. Sentry himself is one of those stiff-necked, obstinate and contumacious beings who have long bent the knee to Baal; and what more natural than that the Gallic-loving Miss Missionary McLean should endeavour to secure him, like a burning brand from amongst the children of Belial. With the object in view, the boy has been strictly enjoined to get his 'Pa and Ma' to read them.—Sensible people will agree, that a request as reasonable, and withal accompanied by the most tender caresses and bewitching sweetness, should at once be complied with. Unaccustomed to gaze on things religious through Protestant spectacles, the obdurate heart of Arthur, became more rebellious, and instead of sitting down to peruse the 'precious volumes' he forthwith put spur

Horrible Murder.—A telegram from Whitby, states that on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., a man named Geo. Patterson, murdered his little son five years of age. It appears that he is a widower, and has been keeping company at his house with a woman of bad character for the last few days, where they had been carousing. His children were hungry this morning, and ate some bread their father provided for himself and paramour. For so doing the unnatural father knocked down the poor little fellow, and kicked and stamped him to death. The Coroner is now holding an inquest.

The Rev. Mr. Sullivan, late of St. George's, Montreal, and now Rector of Trinity Church, Chicago, received a warm welcome on entering on his new charge on the 13th ult. A house was rented and furnished throughout, for his use, by members of his congregation; the gas fixtures, &c., alone, costing $1,500. The church wardens and others, with a number of ladies, were present to receive their new pastor; the house being brilliantly lighted, and adorned with vases of flowers.

A letter recently received from a Guelph lad in Detroit says Irish Republican recruiting is going on by wholesale at that place, and the wildest enthusiasm prevails among the brethern. Guns are firing and drums beating the livelong day. The Sunburst flutters o'er head in silk and shoddy, and decanters and kegs of double proof are swilled to the glory of O'Neil. The Detroit corps is under marching orders for the 4th of July or thereabouts.

The repeats of a renewed attack of the Fenians upon Canada have induced the Directors of the Eastern Townships Bank to send their funds to Montreal for safe keeping. This may have been a prudent measure, but we presume it was only in anticipation of a possible attack upon the bank by a party of marauders and not fear of an invasion of this part of the Province.

The Franco-Canadian, published at St. Johns, Quebec, says in its issue of Friday: "Yesterday (Thursday) morning, four heavy cases arrived at Rouse's Point, as luggage. They remained in the car some time without being disturbed. In removing them, the lid of one became detached, revealing a second box in the inside, with the inscription, 'Fenian Circle, Altana.'"

Le Protecteur, a French Journal published at St. Albans, by Rev. Mr. Rouin, announces, in its last issue, that it has authentic information to the effect that large sums of money have been collected for the Fenian cause in the United States, and that a contract for a considerable quantity of biscuit was recently entered into with an Ogdensburgh firm.

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"We have more than once had occasion to observe that Mr. Disraeli's position is like that of a man hanging on to a boat, and having his fingers violently rapped with a stretcher. The question how long he will be able to hold on depends upon the hardness of his bones and the thickness of his skin."

Military Movements.—The regiment of Royal Artillery, now stationed at Quebec, was reviewed by Col Kennedy. The Volunteer Artillery, under Lt. Col. Lamontagne, is drilling and practising. The Canadian Hussars have received notice to keep in readiness for active service, as well as all the other Quebec volunteers.

Reports from Halifax of the 2nd, state that four regiments are under orders to proceed to Canada at an hour's notice. The "Royal Alfred," line of battle ship, is to convey them to Quebec.

Stores.—One million rounds of Snider ammunition was received and stored in the London garrison magazine on Wednesday afternoon, having been brought from Quebec.

It is said that Chief Justice Chase will be nominated by the Democrats for the Presidency. The Democratic Convention meets on the 6th of July.

According to the Leader, Whelan's trial will be brought on as soon as possible in the Circuit arrangements, wich will be determined in a few days.

The Toronto Telegraph of Thursday evening last says that eight companies of Fenians arrived in Buffalo the night previous.

Lord Monck is to visit the Maritime Provinces previous to his departure for England.

Perfect Digestion means perfect health, and is secured by using Colby's Pills.

A military guard of twelve men are detailed for the gaol of Toronto.

No person should be without Jacobs' Liquid.

Hunt's Hair Gloss is cooling to the Head.

Mr. Punshon in Chicago.—The Oshawa Vindicator says:—"A short time ago the Young Men's Christian Association of Chicago, where Mr Punshon is now gowing to attend the General Conference, telegraphed to him, asking if he would deliver a lecture for them, offering him five hundred dollars for so doing. Mr. Punshon consented. They fixed the price of admission at ten dollars, and in a short time they telegraphed back that at that high figure they had sold two thousand tickets, and had taken in twenty thousand dollars for his lecture." This beats the sale of Dickens' tickets.

Advice to Girls.—The New York Evening Gazette tells young ladies what to beware of if they would have a fresh healthy and youthful appearance:—"Late hours, large crinoline, tight corsets, confectionery, hot bread, cold draught, furnace registers, easy carriages, late suppers, thin shoes, fear of knowledge, nibbling between meals, ill-temper, haste to marry, dread of growing old."

The Irish Church.—The establishment of the Irish Church comprises 13 archbishoprics and 2 perpetual curates with a net income of £330,-864.—The Hierarchy consists of two Archbishops and ten Bishops with an income of £53,-764.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic wafers in curing Coughs, Colds, and all Bronchial affections has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the last twenty years, until now the average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

The Erie Canal.—This Canal is 363 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1861 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, their loses the sufferers, to avoid both use "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurlbut & Co. is on each package.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and if administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay All Pain and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and Can Say in Confidence and Truth of it what we have never been able to say of any other Medicine—Never has it Failed in a Single Instance to Effect a Cure, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, and Pledge our Reputation for the fulfilment of what we here assert. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

Offices:—215 Fulton Street New York, 205 High Holborn, London, England, 441 St. Paul Street, Montreal, Canada.

Poetry.

DO YOU MEAN TO PROPOSE?

You come very often, 'tis all very well,
You're a very fine man and a very big swell;
You've a very good heart and a very long nose,
But now to the point—do you mean to propose?

The house is besieged both by rich and by poor,
Who knock all day long at grandmamma's door.
They turn up their eyes, they turn out their toes,
But what is all that if they do not propose.

You say that you love me, but love all alone
To unmarried girls is a thing quite unknown;
You sigh and look down, and present me a rose,
But that is all stuff!—do you mean to propose?

I am not so hard-hearted as I may appear,
Why stop and look sheepish there's nothing to fear?
You men are such geese I only Beelzebub knows
The trouble you give us before you propose!

'Tis almost two seasons since I have been out,
You simper and smile and you whirl me about,
But this is not business, the horrid time goes,
Another will have me if you do not propose!

You take all the airs of a man I've preferred,
You keep off the rest, and don't say a word
This is not fair play—a fellow who shows
Such uncommon devotion should propose e!

I want to be married—do you understand?
You'd give me a world!—only give me your hand?
One can't go on always with coys and with pros,
Never come here again—or by frank and propose!

Varieties.

Death of English Kings and Queens.

William the Conqueror died from enormous drink, and from the violence of his passions.

William Rufus died the death of the poor stag that he hunted.

Henry the First died of gluttony.

Henry the Second died of a broken heart, occasioned by the death of his children.

Richard Cœur de Lion died like the animal from which his heart was named, an arrow from the bow of an archer.

Henry the Third is said to have died a natural death.

Edward the First is likewise said to have died of a "natural sickness"—a sickness which would puzzle all the college physicians to determinate.

Edward the Second was most barbarously and indecently murdered by ruffians employed by his own mother and her paramour.

Edward the Third died of dotage, and Richard the Second of starvation, the very reverse of George the Fourth.

Henry the Fifth is said to have died of "fits caused by uneasiness," and uneasiness in palaces in those times was a very common complaint.

Henry the Sixth died in prison, by means then known only to his jailor, and known only to Heaven.

Edward the Fifth was strangled in the tower by his uncle, Richard the Third.

Richard the Third was killed in battle.

Henry the Seventh wasted away as a miser ought to do.

Henry the Eighth died of carbuncles, fat and furious, while Edward the Sixth died of a decline.

Queen Mary is said to have died of a broken heart, whereas she died of a surfeit from eating too much black pudding.

Ole Queen Bess is said to have died from melancholy from having sacrificed Essex to his enemies.

James the First died of drinking and of the effects of a nameless vice.

Charles the First died a righteous death on the scaffold, and Charles the Second died suddenly of apoplexy.

William the Third died from consumptive habits of the body, and from the tumbling off his horse.

Queen Ann died from her attachment to 'strong water,' or, in other words, from drunkenness, which the physicians politely called dropsy.

George the First died of drunkenness, which his physicians termed an apoplectic fit.

George the Second died of a rupture of the heart, which the periodicals of that day called a visitation of God.

George the Third died as he lived—a madman. Throughout his life he was at least a consistent monarch.

George the Fourth died of gluttony and drunkenness.

William the Fourth died amid the sympathies of his friends.

Rev. Dr. Beecher.—We have heard a good anecdote of the Beecher family, which we do not find in his biography. Some years since, he was going home one night with a volumn of an encyclopædia under his arm, when he saw a small animal standing in his path. The doctor knew that it was a skunk, but very imprudently hurled the book at him. The skunk, as might have been expected, opened his battery with a return of fire so well directed, that the divine was glad to retreat. When he arrived at home his friends could scarcely come near him, and his clothes were so infected that he was compelled to bury them. Some time after this some one published a pamphlet, speaking very abusively of the worthy doctor, who was asked, "Why don't you publish a book, and put him down at once?" His reply was prompt and to the point: "Sir, I have learned better. Some years ago I issued a whole quarto volumn against a skunk, and I got the worst of it. I never mean to repeat the experiment."

Get Money.—The following is the advice of an examining judge to a young lawyer, on admission: "It would be idle to trouble you further. You are perfect and I will dismiss you with a few words of advice, which you will do well to follow. You will find it laid down as a maxim of civil law never to kiss the maid when you can kiss the mistress. Carry out this principle, sir, and you are safe. Let your face be long; your bills longer. Never put your hands in your pocket when another person's pocket is handy. Keep your conscience for your own private use. Plaster the judge and butter the jury. Look as wise as an owl, and be as oracular as a town clock. But above all, get money; honestly, if you can, but, at anyrate, my dear sir, get money. I welcome you to the bar.

A Scientific Description.—A gentleman on board a steamboat with his family, on being asked by his children 'what made the boat go,' gave them the following description of the machinery and its principles: 'You see my dears, this thingembob here goes down through that hole and fastens on the jigmaree, and that connects with the—crinkumerankum, and then that man, he's the engineer, you know kind o' stirs up the—what do-ye-call-it with his long poker, and they all shove along, and the boat goes ahead.'

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS T. & C.—Gentlemen:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death continued taking just as she had done. I had very sever night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me, took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well in the night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary persons, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not purge, but in a few hours will, for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

Oaklana, Ind., 6th June, 1866.

J. C. Ayer & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous taint in my blood from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it burst out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out in my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disease grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla). I did so from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month and used almost three bottles. Raw and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 13th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Boy spoken by some doctor (the name) says he cured the common Ringworm by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Ezekiel Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City writes: "I must cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many in veterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was even cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newberry, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ulcerous tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

New Orleans, 29th August, 1866.

Dr. J. C. Ayer: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and resort to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in two weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disease would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

Independence, Preston Co., Va., 4th July, 1866.

Dr. J. C. Ayer: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. DEAN.

Jules V. Gotchell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me, and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Depy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla. Scarcely has he said that he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affects we have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital function into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the nervous of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unqualified excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. And all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effected the remedy we here set forth do more than to assure them that it has in all the cases that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

Poetry.

Why Stand ye Here all the Day idle.

BY REV. MORELY PUNSHON, M. A.

Two fields of toil—the outer and the inner,
Both overgrown with weeds;
Who to the labor hastes, to be the winner
Of all the laborer's meeds?

To bathe in radient mornings, daily spreading
Over the heavens anew;
To sit 'neath trees of life, forever shedding
Their bounteous honey-dew.

To rouse a spirit, formed from God, from slumber,
And robe it for the light;
The heirs of heaven from clay to disencumber,
Which clogs their upward flight.

To lift a world, 'neath sin and sorrow lying,
And pour in oil and wine;
To warble, in the dulled ears of the dying,
Refrains of hymns divine.

Work for a life-time, in each path upspringing
In low or lofty spheres!
Hark to the Masters summons, always ringing
In quick and heedless ears!

Cool brain, strong sinew, heart with love o'erflowing,
Strall all in sloth escape!
Like vine, which, fruitless through his wanton growing,
Ne'er purples into grape!

The daylight wanes and dies—'Why stand ye idle?'
Life hastens to its bourne!
The bridegroom tarries—will ye greet the bridal,
Or in the darkness mourn?

Lo! in the fields the yellow harvest drooping,
As lilies in the rain.
Where are the reapers, that they come not, trooping,
To gather in the grain?

Some, in the festive hall disporting gaily;
On slothful pillow, some;
Some in delays most blamely, and yet daily
Exclaiming, 'Lo, I come.'

And some, infatuate, 'mid the alien's scoffing,
Quarrel about their toil;
As wreckers, when ships four deep on the offing,
Grow murderous over spoil.

Meanwhile the harvest waiteth for the reaping
God's patience hath not tired.
Ye cannot say—extenuate your sleeping—
'We wait, for none hath hired.

Through the hushed noon-tide hour the Master calleth;
Ye cannot choose but hear;
Still sounding when the lengthening shadow falleth,
'Why stand ye idle here?'

Up! for a while the pitying glory lingers!
Work while it yet is to-day!
Then rest the Sabbath rest—where angel singers
Make melody for aye.

Selections.

THE FATAL DRAUGHT.

BY REV. PETER STRYKER, D. D.

"Sir, will you come and attend the funeral of my wife?"

Often had I received such requests—Alas! a large part of a pastor's duty is to comfort the bereaved, and the living bury their dead. But this was a peculiar case. The first glance at the stranger who stood before me, convinced me of this fact.—Poor man! he looked personification of despair. He was young, probably not more than twenty-five years old. He was evidently in rather poor circumstances, yet looking respectfully in his person and demeanour.

His answers to a few general questions which it was necessary for me to ask, revealed on his part a desire to tell me some of his history. I felt that it would be an act of benevolence to listen to his tale of sorrow; and I now repeat it, not because it has a tragic interest, but with the hope that it may accomplish some good.

James Jones (for so we will in this narrative call him) had been married about a year. He was industrious, his wife tidy, both of them affectionate, and very pleasantly did they live together. James had been brought up religiously. His mother was a pious woman, and very careful in training her children. After marriage, he and his wife regularly attended divine service upon the Sabbath day, and very frequently during the week, and became very much interested in the important subject of religion.

But there were unseen standing, waiting at the door, and one by one they entered—Fraud, Poverty, Intemperance, Anger, Death.

One who had professed great friendship proved treacherous. The money which the young mechanic had by economy and industry saved, was torn from him. His position in business was lost, and he and his young wife left penniless. This was both mortifying and discouraging.

With a weary heart James Jones left his old place of residence, and came to the great commercial metropolis in quest of work. Comfortable and respectable apartments were engaged, and in a few days wife and furniture brought to take possession of them. But another cruel disappointment awaited them. The rapacious landlord, thinking he could do better, had violated his verbal contract and let the rooms to other parties. This compelled the young couple to take temporary residence in a tenement house in a wretched part of the city.

But greatly as they were distressed by this trial, they rallied each other, hoping for better things and tried to be cheerful.

"Come, Mary," said the husband, "we are young, and strong, and hearty, and we'll soon get over these troubles."

"Oyes, James," she replied; "with the blessing of God, I doubt not we shall before many days be in much better circumstances."

The first effort of the young mechanic was to find work. He was a silver plater by trade, and although only a journeyman he had often been asked to do what is called "over-work." The poisonous solutions used in his business he usually had in his house, mixed and ready for use when demanded. As there were no children or domesticates around, he was not afraid of any accident through them; as for his wife, she knew all about the nature of these solutions, for she had often seen him prepare and use them. The very last time she had prepared one of these solutions, she playfully asked him if a draught of the poison would prove fatal. His reply was that it certainly would produce very serious injury, if not death, to any one who should taste it.

The day following this conversation he went out in search of employment. Weary and unsuccessful, he returned in the afternoon, and to his surprise and mortification found his wife partially intoxicated.—How happened this? They had both been strictly temperate. They were not accustomed to drink even the occasional glass. How, then, had this occurred?

The poor wife, although very tipsy, was quite able to tell the story herself.

It appeared that an Englishwoman in the house had enticed her, and prevailed on her to drink a full mug of beer. And unaccustomed as she was to strong drink, this was enough. It made her tipsy and foolish, and so her husband, weary and unsuccessful in his day's travel, on his return home, found her.

"Mary, how could you be thus foolishly intimate with an entire stranger and more especially in a house of such repute as this? And how could you ever drink that vile stuff, which you knew could do you no mortal good, and might do you a great deal of injury?"

So saying, the poor man, overcome with trouble, sat down and buried his face in his hands.

The wife was very quick tempered. Stimulated by the vile liquor she had so lately imbibed, and greatly enraged with the words of her husband, so true and so just, she immediately ran to the closet. Quick as a flash of lightening, she caught hold of the cup of poison. A click was heard, and looking up, the husband saw his wife with the empty cup in her hand. She had drained the contents of the cup, and now looked at him and wildly exclaimed:

"There, James Jones, how do you like that for a change?"

It was a fatal draught. The wretched husband flew for a physician, but before he returned his wife was dead. The spark of life had gone out. She was the victim of anger and intemperance. After telling me this tale of distress, the widowed husband said:

"O, sir, I am a most wretched man. Pray for me, and come and speak a few kind words at the funeral of my poor wife."

It would be but little satisfaction for you dear reader, to accompany me to the house of mourning, and join with a few friends in attending to the funeral rites; but there are lessons of instruction which we will do well to heed and practice.

Who was the murderer of that young woman? The landlord who for a trifling consideration deprived that young couple of their home; the rum-seller who sold drugged liquor which proved so evil in its consequences; the stranger who enticed another from the path of sobriety and safety; and she who, in intoxication and anger, drank the poison; all were guilty—guilty of violating the sixth commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."

The subject of cause and effect is very extensive. Let us see to it, when the great day of revelation appears, and all intricacies are unravelled, when treacherous memory will be revived, and truth in its various bearings and dates revealed, that we do not stand among the great throng who, by temptation and for paltry gain, have brought ruin upon their neighbor, and destroyed their body and soul now and forever.

Observe, that ONE mug of beer proved fatal, for its immediate effect led to the draught of poison. It was only beer, and but one drink of beer, that did the terrible mischief. So in every case, it is the first glass that accomplishes the evil. This makes the drunkard. This often leads the drunkard to the depths of crime as well as dissipation. If all would avoid the one glass, what a different world would this be! No intoxicate would then walk our streets or roll in our gutters. Families would not be disgraced, and hearts and homes rendered desolate. The scaffold would hardly be known. Our prisons and jails might be closed; our officers of justice would be gentle men of leisure, and civil law would hold a long and happy jubilee. Imagination can hardly picture the beautiful scene that would spring to view. Earth would again be converted into Eden, and innocence and joy bless our race.

And why not pray to God, and plead with man, and try with self to secure this blessed result? Why not, Christian philanthropist? Why not by example, persuasion and earnest influence, endeavor to cast to the ground that first glass, which so often leads to ruin?

Fashionable lady, do not with your irresistible voice and smile, ask that young man to take from your hand the one glass of sparkling beverage. It may lead him to drunkenness, debauchery, crime and eternal death.

Mature Christian do not lift that one glass to your lips, lest your child or some other young person who is influenced very much by your example, should see the act, and, imitating you, drink—drink deeply, and die a drunkard's death.

Dear youth, listen to our importunate entreaty! Think well before you touch the intoxicating bowl. "Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

There is a demon lurking in that one glass. His eye is fixed upon you. He has selected you as his victim. Only drink and he will take up his abode within you, and commence those insidious operations which will be likely to end in your eternal destruction. Refuse the liquor, though it be only a glass of ale or beer or light wine, for it contains the deadly poison. Tread on the head of the vile serpent as soon as you see him. Do not play with him. He may sting you before you are aware. In this age of great temptation the best sanctuary for moral virtue next to PIETY—and the two should ever go together—is in TOTAL ABSTINENCE FROM ALL THAT WHICH INTOXICATES.

Woman's Perception of Character.

A lady will look a servant who comes to be hired in the face, and say he is not honest. She cannot tell you why she thinks so. She says she does not like his expression, she feels he is not honest,—no consideration would induce her to take him into her service. He has the best of characters, and you engage him, he robs you.—you may be quite sure he will do that. Years after another man comes, the same lady looks him in the face, and says he too is not honest, she says so again fresh from her mere insight, but you also say he is not honest. You say, I remember I had a servant with just the same look about him three years ago, and he robbed me. This is one great distinction of the female intellect; it walks directly and unconscious, by more delicate insight and a more refined and more trusted intuition, to an end to which men's minds grope carefully and ploddingly along. Women have exercised a most beneficial influence in softening the hard and unfaithful outline which knowledge is apt to assume in the hands of direct scientific observers and experimenters, they have prevented the casting aside of a mass of most valuable truth, which is too fine to be caught in the material sieve, and the closest questioning of the microscope and the test glass, which is allied with our passions our feelings, and especially holds the fine boundary-line where mind and matter, sense and spirit, wave their floating and indistinguishable, and exercise their complex action and reaction.

The Occupation of Woman.

They are happiest, and will even remain so, who can find a place for their activity in administering, or helping to administer, a household, and we do not hesitate to say, in spite of the most enlightened remonstrance, not only that this occupation is more healthy and natural to a woman, but that it is in reality a broader field, calls forth more faculties, and exercises and disciplines them more perfectly than ninety-nine out of a hundred of the industrial avocations out of doors. It is only in the higher Branches that any thing like it can be obtained. Women are in a position to suffer much less than men by the excessive division of labour and the narrowing influence it tends to exert. The greater part of them have a sphere in their own homes which calls for more varied faculties and higher powers than the unvaried task of the factory or the workshop. Every woman must govern more or less in her own house, or ought to do so, and to govern is not an easy thing, nor are servants and children the easiest things to govern. But the nature of woman specially adapts them to govern, not, indeed, by a wise and far-sighted application of general ideas, but by choice of able ministers or immediate contact with the persons governed. Many women, even those whose minds are entirely uncultivated, show a power and a breadth of capacity in administering their household, and controlling into harmony difficult tempers and unruly wills which few men could rival.

AN OLD ABUSE REVIVED.

We had thought that if the habit of tight lacing had not become obsolete, the day had at least gone by when any sane person would attempt to defend the practice, much less to do it in print. But a correspondent of the Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine gives her experience as a "Tight Lacer" in reducing the size of her waist from twenty three inches to fourteen. The lady probably did not know that in so doing she shortened a fool's life a year for every inch taken from the waist circumference. Still less did she know (to her a far more appalling fact,) that for every inch thus lost she gained a pimple on her face, perchance on her nose, and that with her waist of waist-development, she lost not only the rose from her cheeks, but drove the lily from her forehead and planted a rubicund cluster of flaming flowrets on her brow and nose. Here is the lady's account of her experience during her achievement of a short life and a sorrowful one:—"I went and ordered a pair of stays, made very strong and filled with stiff bone, measuring only fourteen inches round the waist. These with the assistance of my maid, I put on and managed the first day to lace my waist into eighteen inches. At night, I slept in my corset without loosing the lace in the least. The next day my maid got my waist to seventeen inches, and so on, an inch smaller every day, until she got them to meet. I wore them regularly without taking off, having them tightened afresh every day, as the laces might stretch a little. For the first few days the pain was very great, but as soon as the stays were laced close, and I had worn them a few days, I began to care nothing about it, and a month or so I would not have taken them off on any account, for I quite enjoyed the sensation.

HOW TO KEEP FRESH MEAT.—Perhaps all of your readers are not aware that steak (pork and beef,) sausages, pudding, etc., can be kept fresh the "year round," by frying and seasoning when fresh, the same as for the table, packing down in crocks or tin cans, and pouring hot lard over them covering about one inch. When needed, scrape off the lard and heat through. This is valuable information to farmers and others, who kill a beef and dispose of a portion at a low rate, and then are unable to procure fresh meat during the summer. I defy any one to detect any difference between the preserved and the recently prepared.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY.

A gentleman connected with the Abyssinian expedition, writing under date of Antola, March 20th, gives the following account of an interesting discovery of art, illustrating remarkable events in sacred history:—

"About a mile from the camp of Attegerat is a native—half Jewish, half Christian—church, well worth going to see. It is a sort of irregular square building, rather dilapidated. The first thing that strikes you is an open court around three parts of it, evidently in imitation of the Court of the Tabernacle of the time of Moses; then there is the church proper, and within again is the inner sanctuary, or holy of holies. But it is the fresco paintings which form the great curiosity of the place. They are said to be the work of a youth, a native of Gondar, and are most remarkable and striking illustrations of the principal events in the Old and New Testaments. On one hand you have Pharaoh's army crossing the Red Sea, and the horror and alarm depicted in their faces as the water gains on them are vivid as life, while, on the bank, Moses stands waving a rod, and grinning down on the Egyptians. On the other you have the Virgin Mary and Saviour Christ instituting the last supper; the body of John the Baptist—his head in a charger; Herod slaying the first born; the crucifixion and funeral of Christ. On another portion of the walls you have St. George and the draggon; the ancient Theodorus spearing an elephant; a representation of two Abyssinian princesses. On another part our Saviour's resurrection, the stoning of Stephen, the crucifixion of St. Peter, with his head downward, and a variety of other subjects, all executed in a style which one certainly never expected to find in such a country, and which you could gaze upon for hours with interest and pleasure. I pushed open the folding doors into the inner sanctuary, where I learnt there was a piece of the Ark (reputed), but the guides made a rush at me and pulled me back. These natives seemed to me to grasp no more of the Scriptures than the historical portions."

CAN'T MAKE A BED.

When you see a young lady so very delicate that she can't make her bed, or put a couple of plates upon the table, and yet trots all over town daily with the speed of a race horse, to jumble nonsence with the Sniplates and Snippers, and Jenkinses, and Dumberries, just chalk it down that she's a piece of calico you can't invest a single penny or pulsation in. A girl who hasn't the muscles to lift three feathers and a pillow case, but can tire a locomotive and whole omnibus line out of breath, is an institution that, like prussic acid and old maids, is to be kept clear of. Young men will please button up the first fact in their memory.

In the case of the young lady to whom we refer, the young gentleman have buttoned the fact in their memory and generally avoid her as one to be pitied. Let her learn the useful arts of a ketegen life and see how much more there is in life than she mistrusts.

In the olden time it used to be different, as we learn from the following song whose moral we particularly command to the can't make a bed portion of the community:—

I do not blame a bachelor,
If he leads a single life—
The way the girls are brought up,
He can't support a wife.

Time was, when girls could card and spin,
And wash, and bake, and brew;
But now they have to keep a maid,
If they have aught to do.

I do not blame the bachelor,
His courage must be great
To think to wed a modern miss,
If small be his estate.

Time was, when wives could help to buy
The land they'd help to till,
And saddle Dobbin, shell the corn,
And ride away to mill.

The bachelor is not to blame,
If he's a prudent man;
He now must lead a single life,
And do the best he can.

MANUFACTURE OF DIGNITIES.—The London Spectator says:—"The manufacture of dignities has gone on pretty rapidly of late years. Within the last thirteen years the Crown has created sixty-one peers and seventy-one baronets; a few of the peerages however, being mere promotions. The peerage certainly does not perish at that rate; and, if the system goes on, we shall one day see every rich man a peer, or Pitt's idea shall be realized—that every man with ten thousand acres should sit in the Lords. Even as it is, there are very few men with that amount of land, particularly if held in one block, who are not labelled in some way. The demand for baronetcies is a special and very curious feature in English society. They really give nothing except an hereditary label, yet they are evidently objects of very keen competition. We wish it were possible to put two or three peerages and baronetcies up to auction, and see what they are actually worth in the estimation of millionaires."

HOW TO CURE A COLD.—The moment a man is satisfied he has taken cold, let him do three things: First, eat nothing; a cond, go to bed, cover up in a warm room; third, drink as much gold water as he can; and in three cases out of four, he will be well in thirty-six hours. To neglect a cold for forty-eight hours after the cough commences, is to place himself beyond cure, until the cold has run its course, of about a fortnight. Warmth and abstinence are safe and certain cures, when applied early. Warmth keeps the pores of the skin open, and relieves it of the surplus which oppresses it, while abstinence cuts of the supply of material for phlegm which would otherwise be coughed up.—Journal of Health.

THE OTTAWA BUILDINGS.

The following is a brief synopsis of the remarks of Mr. Mackenzie in the House a few days since, when the department of Public Works was under discussion. With the startling revelations respecting the Ottawa Buildings, it is astonishing that members can assent to the large sum of $5,000,000 for fortifications being placed at the hands of a Cabinet, the leading members of which were in power when such extravagant expenditures were made:

Mr. Mackenzie said he had intimated a few days ago that it was his intention when this item was brought up, to place the House in possession of some facts which he thought they ought to be acquainted with. As to the manner in which some of the items in the Public Works Department had been conducted, it will be remembered that some months ago he called the attention of the House incidentally to the extraordinary amount of public money paid to one of the officers of the department—Mr. Page, the Chief Engineer. He pointed out that while this gentleman's salary was nominally $4,000 he actually received last year $7,437; the previous year $6,045; and the year before that, $4,374—a total during these three years of $17,476, a sum much larger than the Premier of the Government received during the same period. He thought it was time the public that the services of a public functionary paid for at such a rate should be well discharged. But his (Mr. Mackenzie's) impression was, from the facts which he would bring under the notice of the House, that this officer was either incapable of discharging the duties connected with these buildings, or that he disposed an utter lack of that attention to his duties which the House had a right to expect at his hands. When the contract was renewed, some years ago, with the contractors for these buildings, a schedule of prices was arranged, which it was understood should govern all works connected with the building. In the return recently brought down, it was stated that these prices were arrived at by calculating the quantities of each class of works according to the schedule rates, and that the items to which none of the schedule rates would apply, prices considered fair and reasonable were fixed. As the return did not specify which of the items were paid for at the schedule rates, he had moved for another return to supply that information. This supplementary return brought down to-day, showed that the works, instead of being paid for at schedule rates, had been set down at lump sums agreed upon between the Contractors and the Chief Engineer, and closed with this extraordinary paragraph, by Mr. Page:—"I beg to remark that, had it been anticipated such unusually minute details would have been called for, matters might have been in such a position that the class of information now asked for might have been supplied." He (Mr. Mackenzie's) impression had been, that the accounts as to public works should have been so kept that full information in regard to the expenditure on all of them should always be accessible. The Mr. Page, in addition to his salary of $3,400, had received $5 a day to superintend these buildings, and 1864 his time had been almost wholly devoted to them. And not only was he sole superintendent of the buildings, but when an arbitration was necessary to settle the claims of the arbitrators, he was appointed sole arbitrator to settle his own accounts. He would now give some specimens of the accounts for the buildings, sanctioned by the Chief Engineer. For shelving in the Post-office of the House the amount certified and paid was $1,450. (Cries of Oh, oh!) He had endeavoured to apply the schedule rates to that work, and, according to the rates, it would have amounted to $650, so that there had been an absolute overcharge for that particular work, of $800. A small bit, for lowering the mail bags cost $170, while at the schedule rates it should have been $11. The two screens separating the east and west corridors from the Post-office corridor cost each $310, while their value under the schedule rate was $180 each.—For fitting up the Post office in the Senate $1,200 was charged. At schedule rates the work would have been $520. The lift there for lowering the mails cost $170, while the real value was $11. The screen in front of the retiring room at each end of the building, was charged $345, and should have cost $210. The screens cross the corridors were put down at $310, when they were only worth $180. The platform upon which the Speaker's chair was placed, merely three steps, exclusive upholstery and carpet, was paid for at the rate of $130—(cries of 'Oh, oh!')—while the utmost possible value attached to it by the schedule rates would have been $70. The wood work of the fitting up of the throne in the Senate was $447, and was worth, as near as he could estimate, $200. Some common rough shelving in the vaults for keeping records and paper, was put down at $512, and at schedule rates should have been $389.—Some work in the attics, shelving, doors, and glazing for windows, was charged $394, and should have been $136. Fitting up a record room in the Senate should have cost $90, but $210 were paid. Fitting up stationery in the Senate should have cost $56, but $184 were paid. The wooden post on which the rails of the bar of the House rested was worth $5, and $25 were paid; and when it was removed from the end of the hall to its side, $25 was again charged and paid.—(Cries of 'Oh, oh!') Having mentioned some other similar items, Mr. Mackenzie said these were but a few specimens of the bright manner in which the public money had been squandered. In 1863, when the commissioners made their report, the amount overpaid to the contractors on all the buildings was $75,000. After this white that amount was owing to them, they were paid regularly, as the work proceeded, at schedule rates; but when they again demanded an arbitrator, Mr. Page, and his two coadjutors awarded them something like $90,000 on these buildings in addition to what they had received under their contracts. He could not see how any man could understand on what principle these extraordinary sums had been arrived at, and how an officer employed by the Government, and paid so large a salary by the Government, should have allowed such charges, was to him inconceivable. He left it to be the duty of the Minister of Public Works to have these charges investigated, and to see that Mr. Page had allowed prices for these works which he ought not to have allowed, he (Mr. Page) should pay the excess himself. (Hear, hear.) A change had been made in the roof over the reading room, and over the corresponding portion of the building in the Senate wing, so that the snow should not rest on them as formerly, and Mr. Page had allowed for this change about $7,000—enough to build a first class house. He did not observe here the cost of the front door, but he was told it absolutely cost $350.—They supposed the handles on the doors were fine porcelain. Here was a piece of one of them he had picked up, and it was a common brick. (Hear, hear) Having observed in one of the returns the name of R. H. McGreevy as the contractor, and having understood that Thomas McGreevy was the contractor, he had moved for a return of the contract with Robert McGreevy. The return stated that this Thomas had transferred his contract to Robert, and on report of Mr. Chapais, then Minister of Public Works, an order in Council was passed sanctioning the transfer. He (Mr. Mackenzie) doubted very much the regularity and propriety of sanctioning a transfer of this kind from the former contractor, now a member of the House, to his brother, who had been concerned with him in the erection of these buildings from first to last. Among the items of work done by Robert McGreevy, he found that for the wardrobes in which members hung their hats and overcoats, one hundred in number, $1,681 were paid. He had asked a number of practical men, thoroughly acquainted with that kind of work, what they were worth, and they had estimated them at various rates from $1.75 to $2.50 each; while the amount actually paid on the certificate of Mr. Page was $8. In the first return it was stated that the schedule rates governed the prices as far as applicable, yet in no single instance had they been applied. In fitting up the shelving from Quebec was used, $3,305 were paid, which any one who looked at it must regard as a piece of most barefaced charge. So far as he could ascertain, this had been the process. The contractor was asked how much he would do certain work for, and said $500 while in fact it was worth $100, Mr. Page had brought him down to $260, and represented that he had made a fine bargain. In this chamber there were five porches—each had cost $65. Some of the doors of the Chamber had been moved from one place to another, and for this, and filling up the old doorways, $440 was charged. The usual work of the bar in the Senate cost $120. There were fair specimens of the way in which the work on these buildings had been carried on, and paid for by the Public Works Department, and he thought that they showed the necessity for a reform in that Department. He had pointed out, with reference to the canals, a circumstance which justified the suspicion that there was more than no supervision on the part of the officers of the department—Mr. Page, the Chief Engineer. He pointed out that while one gentleman's vacancy was nominally $4,—there actually received last year $7,437,—a

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the last ten years never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pleurisie or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, childbirth, cholera morbus, billious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thicks and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the consolidable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the dilated vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children By noticing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, an acute extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, fainting, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and will administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE In a most every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

Poetry.

Tae Deil's Reply to Robert Barns.

O wat's me, Rob! hae ye gane gyte?
What is't that gars ye talk delyte
To jeer at me, and ban, and flyte,
In Scottish rhyme?
And, mawsey, gie me a' the wyte
O' this crime?

O' auld nicknames ye hae a fouth,
O' sharp, sarcastic rhymes a routh,
And as you're bent to gie them scouth,
'Twere just as weel
For you to tell the honest truth,
"And shame the deil."

I dinna mean to note the whole
O' your unfounded rigmarole;
I'd rather baud my tongue, and thole
Your clashmaclavers,
Than try to plod through sic a scroll
O' nonsicals havers!

O' warlocks and o' witches a'—
O' kelpies, spunkies, great or sma',
There is not ony truth ava
In what you say;
For sixteen fights I never saw,
Up to this day.

The truth is, Rob, that wicked men,
When caught in crimes which are their sin,
To find a help are unco fain,
To share the shame;
And so they shout, wi' might and main,
"The deil's to blame!"

Tittis, I am blamed for Adam's fa'—
You say that I maist ruin'd a';
"I'll tell ye ae thing, that's no twa,"
It's just a lee!
I fasht na wi' the pair ava,
But let them be.

I'd nae mair hand in that transgression
You deem the source of a' oppression,
And woe, and death, and man's damnation,
Than you, yoursel';
I filled a decent situation
When Adam fell.

And Rob, gin you'll just read your Bible,
Instead o' blin' Jock Milton's fable,
I'll plank a croon on ony table
Against a groat,
To find my name ye'll no' be able,
In a' the plot!

Your mither Eve I ken'd her brawly—
A dainty quean she was, and wally;
But destitute of prudence wholly,
The witless bizzie!
Aye bent on fun, and whiles in folly
And mischief busy.

Her father had a bonnie tree,
The apples on't allured her e'e;
He warn'd her no' the fruit to pree,
Nor clim' the wa',
For if she did, she'd surely dee
"As dead's a maw."

She didna do her Father's biddin'—
She didna mind her husband's griddin'—
Her ain brow house she wadna bide in,
But stray'd awa';
Depending on her "art o' bidin',"
To blin' them a'.

As for that famous serpent story,
(To lie I'd baith be shamed and sorry,)
'Tis just a clever allegory,
And weel writ doon;
The wark of an Egyptian Tory—
I ken'd the loon!

Your tale of Job, "the man of Us,"
My reekit claes, and reested gis—
My horny loofs, and freckit phis,
Wi' ither clatter,
Is maistly, after a' the biss,
A moonshine matter.

Auld Job—I ken'd the carl weel—
An honest, decent, kintra chiel;
Wi' head to plan, and heart to feel,
And hand to gie;
"He wadna wrang the vera deil"
A bruon bawbee.

The man was ga yan weel to do,
Had horse, and kye, and ousen too,
And sheep, and stots, and stirks enoo
To fill a byre;
O, meat an' claes a' maistly now,
His heart's desire.

Forbye, he had, within the dwalens,
Three ainsome queans, and five braw callants,
You wadna, in the haill braed Lallans,
Noo find their marrow,
Were you to search frae auld Tantallan's.
To braes of Yarrow.

It happened that three breckless bands
Of cattran cam frae distant lands,
And took what fell among their hands,
Of sheep and doddies;
Just like your reivin' Highland clan,
Or border bodies!

I tell you, Rob, I had na share
In a' the tulyie here or there;
I lookit on, I do declare,
A mere speciator;
Nor said, or socht, less or mair
Aboot the matter!

Job had a minstrel o' his ain—
A genius rare, tho' something vain
Of rhyme and lear; and then again,
(Just like yersel')
Of drink and lasses unco fain—
The neer-do-well!

He'd sing of lairds and ladies fair,
Of love, and hope, and mirk despair,
And wondrous tails would whiles prepare,
And string thegither;
For a' he wanted was "a hair
To mak' a tether."

So, with intention fully bent,
My doings to misrepresent,
That "Book of Job" he did invent—
And then his rhymes
Got published in Arabian tent,
To suit the times.

You poets, Rob, are a' the same,
Of ilka kintra, age, or name;
No matter what may be your aim,
Or your intentions,
Maist of your characters o' fame
Are pure inventions.

Shakspeare mak's ghaists and witches plenty,
Jock Milton, deevils, mair than twenty;
Tom Puck will soon be crouse and canty
Wi' Bob the Ranter;
And you yersel' are mair than vauntie
Of "Tam o' Shanter."

Your dogs are baith debaters rare,
Wi' sense galore, and some to spare;
Yea, even the verra "Brigs o' Ayr,"
You gar them quarrel—
Tak' Colla hen to deek your hair
Wi' Scottish laurel.

Yet, Robin lad, for a' your spite,
And taunts, and jeers, and wrangfu' wyte,
I fin', before you end your flight,
And rin your nun,
You're no ase cankert in the bite
As in the gin!

For when you think he's doom'd to dwell
The lang forevermair in hell,
You come and bid a kind farewell,
And—Gude be here!
Ev'n for the verra deil himsel'
Let fa' a tear!

And, Rob, I'm just as wae for thee,
As ever thou canst be for me;
For 'less ye let the drink a be,
I'll tak' my aith,
You'll a' gae wrang, and shortly dee
A drunkard's death!

Sure as you mourn'd the daisy's fate
That fate is thine, no distant date.
Stern Ruin's ploughshare drives elate,
Full on thy bloom;
And crush'd beneath the furrow's weight,
Shall lie thy doom!"

Kratslatt's wife discovered her old hen setting in the back yard, and "lust up her nest." Soon after the poor wife came in much excited and said:—"My dear Kratslatt, I took the eggs from 'Browne,' and she has gone and set on an old meerschaze." "Let her set," said the bibulous old fellow, "if she sets on an axe may be she'll hatchet!"

If Adam had asked Eve for a kiss, could the latter, without profanity, have replied "I don't care, Adam, if you do?"

The most worthless of all purses is that filled with borrowed money.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured then, when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eyelid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued shaking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c, and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system: at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c, gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Jose phus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the great cat boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

DRESSING FOR CHURCH.

Has any body heard the bell?
You have?—dear me, I know full well
I'll never dress in time—
For mercy's sake, come help me, Luce,
I'll make my toilet very spruce—
The silk is quite sublime!

Here, lace this gaiter for me—do;
"A hole!" you say? plague take the shoe
Please, Lucie, try to hide it—
Just think, it's Sunday, and, my soul,
I cannot wear it with a hole!
The men will surely spy it.

They're always peeping at our feet
(Though, to be sure they needn't peep,
The way we hold our dre ses);
I'll disappoint them, though, to-day.
"And cross my-self," pray did you say?
Don't laugh at my distresses!

Now, Lucie, pray feel my wat rfall—
Do you think it large? ain't it too small!
What bother these things give!
My rats and mice, do tney sit straight?
Please hurry, Luce, I know I'm late—
"There's Willie," as I live!

How splendidly the silk will rustle!
(Please hand my "self-adjusting bustle!"
My corset and my hoop.)
There now, I'll take five shirts or pin—
Do hurry, Luce, and help me fix;
You know I can not stoop!

"How shall I say my prayers to-day?"
As it girls went to church to pray!
How can you be so foolish?
Here damp this rib on in Cologne;
"Why I for?" to paint, you silly one?
Now, Lucie, don't be mulish.

Now then, my hat—how he abhors
This thing—it's big as all out doors—
The frightful sugar scoop!
Thank heav n, my cl ak is handsome tho',
It cost enough to be, I know—
(Straighten this horrid hoop!)

My handkerchief and gloves you'll find
Just in that drawer. Luce, are you blind.
(Does my cheek paint well?)
It's all the fashion now, you know;
(Pray does the paint and powder show
Through my loose veil?)

Thank you my dear. I believe I'm dressed;
The saints be praised! the day of rest
Comes only once in seven,
For if on all the other six
This trouble I should have to fix,
I'd never get to heaven!

Selections.

The Last Days of King Theodore—Narrative of one of the Captives.

The Pall Mall has the following interesting letter from one of the Abyssinian captives on the last days of King Theodore:

CAMP BABBA DALANTA, April 19, 1868

On the evening of Tuesday, the 7th of April, we received an intimation that we were to descend the mountain the following morning in order to have an interview with the King. We immediately concluded that we were not to return, and our apprehensions were not lessened when we learned that all the native prisoners, some 50 in number, were also summoned below. At daybreak Mr. Flad came to us, accompanied by Biwaddad Hassanée, the new Chief of the Amba, and were directed to dress ourselves quickly and make our way down. As we were passing out of the compound, beyond which we had not set our feet for 19 months the fears of our servants sufficiently indicated the fate they believed to be in store for us. However, off we went, and in about half an hour reached the centre of Salunge, where the King was seated on a stone, dressed in a richly brocaded silk shirt, woven with gold thread, and white silk trousers—in short, presenting much the appearance of a harlequin. To our relief, he politely accosted us, and seeing that Cameron was much exhausted and fatigued, motioned him to a seat. He then moved forward a few steps and directed Rassam Blanc, Cameron and myself to seat ourselves near him. The rest of the prisoners remained standing at a respectful distance behind.

While a tent which he had ordered to be prepared for our reception was being pitched, the King entered into a desultory conversation with Mr. Rassam, in the course of which he alluded to the story of Damocles, indicating thereby the troubles which always impend over the head of monarchs. Twenty minutes were spent in this manner at the end of which we were ushered into the tent which had been got ready for us, and where breakfast was brought to us after a short time. In the course of the day our tents and baggage were brought down from the Amba, and we were ordered by the King to put ourselves up in the way we formerly used to do. Before this, however, he had been boasting much among his own soldiers, trying, as I believe, to keep up their spirits, which were rather damped by the prospect of a speedy encounter with our troops. Among other things they told a body of 150 men whom he was despatching to Aroge, that directly they saw the English approach they were to fire off their pieces at them. The Englishmen would reply but directly they had fired one volley they would be unable to load again in time to with stand the Abyssinian spear; "in which case" added he, "you will enrich yourselves completed to which the rich dress I am wearing is but an insignificant prize." Before proceeding to the top of Selasse Hill from which he is in the habit of making his reconnoissances, he ordered the execution of seven prisoners, including the young wife and infant child of one of his servants who had escaped from Magdala a few months ago; these were ruthlessly slain, and their remains flung over the nearest precipice.

We saw nothing of his Majesty the next day, but in the afternoon received a message to the effect that he had seen the British troops descending the Bashilo, and had remarked among them four elephants and some white animals, which he supposed to be Barbera sh up. A short time afterward a friend of ours (for we had a few friends at Magdala), came to Mr. Rassam, and implored us to keep within our huts, for the King was in a fearful passion, and was then chasing an order to kill all his native prisoners, who were confined in a few houses a couple of hundred yards off. The repeated discharge of firearms, which we heard soon afterward, confirmed the sad story, and it was with any misgivings that we asked ourselves, "What next?" At dusk, however, the King returned, and we returned to our tents comparatively at our ease. From what I have heard, it appears that the King rushed down mad with rage and brandished and calling out one of the prisoners, hacked him to pieces with his own sword. Another speedily met the same fate. The third was a boy about ten years of age. His youth and innocence (for it was his father who had been the offender) were no protection; he was mangled in the same way as the two others. The cutting and slashing went on in this manner for some time; when the King, finding this mode of execution too slow for his impatient spirit, ordered out the musketeers. The remainder were then quickly shot down, and thrown over the low cliff the force of the shock in several cases opening the chains of the wretched victims. Those whose quivering limbs showed any signs of life, were fired on from above until the murderous work was completed. As we gazed on that dreadful heap of corpses, animated but a few days before with life and hope, no one could harbor the slightest feeling of sympathy which otherwise the fate of one would have elicited, who, like a brave man, had met his own doom some short hours since.

Early the next morning (Good Friday) we were informed by a message from the King that we were immediately to return to the Amba, as being a place of greater security than Salamago, in case of a skirmish. Before he left he informed Mr. Rassam that, in case he sent a messenger, or even if one of our servants were missing, the covenant between them would be broken. This looked much as if he wished to pick a quarrel with us, as it was quite impossible for us to person, to prevent our servants going when they felt disposed. However, as the means of averting his anger, a conciliatory answer was returned through Mr. Flad. A few minutes afterward a messenger arrived, bearing a letter from Sir Robert Napier, dated April 3, and demanding our release in civil terms. This the King refused to receive, and we immediately returned to our prison house, not sorry to escape from the dreaded presence of the incomprehensible monarch.

About 10 p. m., we were aroused from sleep by the arrival of Messrs. Flad and Waldmeier, who were the bearers of a message from the King, to the effect that his troops had been defeated by the English, and that he wished to be reconciled to them. Mr. Rassam replied that the only way to bring about this object was to send an envoy with proposals of peace on his part and he would be happy to despatch one of the officers attached to the mission on his own part, naming me, at the same time, as the person whom he would be willing to send. Mr Flad and his companions then took their departure, but, owing to the vacillating temper of the King, did not return until after day-break. I was then told to prepare myself; and, as soon as I was dressed, descended the hill in company with Mr. Flad, who had been sole messenger the second time.

The King was sitting on a stone, dressed in ordinary manner. He received us very graciously, and immediately ordered one of his best mules to be saddled for my use.—Noticing that I was rather exhausted after our rapid walk and almost sleepless night, he added to his gift a horn of mead, in order to refresh us on the road. We were then dismissed with the message, "I had thought before this day I was a strong man, but I have now discovered that there are stronger. Now reconcile me." We then left him, accompanied by Dejaj Alaine, his son-in-law, for the British camp at Aroge, where we arrived after a two hours' ride, and were warmly greeted by the many friends I had not seen for so long a time, and had scarcely expected ever to see again.

After breakfast and a short stay in the camp, we returned to his Majesty, bearing a letter from Sir Robert Napier, couched in firm but conciliatory terms, and assuring the King that, provided he submitted to the Queen of England and brought all his prisoners and the other Europeans to the British camp, honorable treatment would be accorded to himself and to all his family. When we arrived he was sitting on the brow of Selasse, overlooking the British camp, and apparently in anything but a pleasant humor. Having been previously joined by Mr. Waldmeier, we presented ourselves before him, and delivered to him the letter, which was twice translated to him.

At the conclusion of the second reading he asked in a deliberate manner, "What does honorable treatment mean? Does it mean that the English will help me to subdue my enemies, or does it mean honorable treatment as a prisoner?" I replied to him that on the first point the Commander-in-Chief had said nothing, that all his wishes were contained in his letter, and that the English army had simply come into the country to rescue their fellow-countrymen, and that object effected, they would then return. This answer evidently pleased him but little. All his hopes of re-establishing himself by British aid were dashed to the ground, and he had henceforth to lead the precarious life of a brigand chief. His lips, always thin as a sword blade, quivered nervously, the horseshoe on his forehead grew deeper, but, controlling himself, he motioned us to seat ourselves at a little distance from him while he dictated an answer to his letter, and when it was finished called us forward, delivered it over to us, and bade us depart. The gift of the incoherent epistle was simply that he had hitherto steadily ordered himself to no man, and he was not prepared to do so now.

Our second stay in the British camp lasted about a couple of hours, at the expiration of which time the Commander-in-Chief left himself called upon to dispatch us, however reluctantly, to the fortress. We took our departure, hoping for the best, but fearing the worst. This time no letter was handed to us, but simply a verbal communication of the same purport as the former note. It was growing dusk as we neared Selasse for the second time and we encountered a European accompanied by several Abyssinians. This proved to be Mr. Meyer, one of the German artisans, who communicated to us that the King had liberated Mr. Rassam, Dr. Blanc, Consul Cameron, and the remaining Magdala prisoners, and that they were now descending the hill; news which was corroborated by the accompanying natives. On receipt of these tidings we turned the heads of our mules, and, in company with Mr. Meyer, arrived in the camp as the bearers of good news, not only to ourselves, but to every one of those who so eagerly surrounded us. Shortly afterward Mr. Rassam and his party arrived, and it was with heartfelt gratitude that we laid our head on the pillow that night, secure at last after so many dangers.

In the course of the following morning the remainder of the Europeans, accompanied by their families, arrived. The King also, it was Easter Sunday, sent a present of a thousand cows and 500 sheep to the Commander-in-Chief, who, seeing that His Majesty had complied with perhaps the most important terms of the communication addressed to him, naturally, his own submission, had no option left but to decline them. From that moment the King must have clearly seen that two courses were open to him—either to yield himself unconditionally to the British General, or to make a stand on his Amba and fight it out to the last. He chose the latter.

The details of the storming of Magdala you will have seen described by pens much more competent for the duty than mine. Suffice it to say that after two hours' shelling, the 33rd stormed the fortress and found the King dead by his own hand, and surrounded by about a dozen faithful adherents who stood by him to the last, some of them dead, and but few unwounded. Among them was Ras Engedi, who had followed the King with unwavering fidelity for so many years, and had reaped captivity as his reward, from which he was released but three months. So strong had been the will and so indomitable the energy of his master, however, that he was still able to cut him to his side at this supreme moment a few, while Ras Engedai, perhaps forgot the indignities of former years, and only remained the happy days of youth spent in the quiet mountaineers of Tchankai.

HANS, THE CRIPPLE.

A soldier's widow lived in a little hut near a mountain village. Her only child was a poor cripple. Hans was a kind-hearted boy. He loved his mother, and would gladly have helped her to bear the burden of poverty, but that feebleness forbade it. He could not even join in the rude sports of the young mountaineers. At the age of fifteen years he felt keenly the fact that he was useless to his mother and to the world.

It was at this period that Napoleon Bonaparte was making his power felt throughout Europe. He had decreed that Tyrol should belong to Bavaria, and not Austria, and sent a French and Bavarian army to accomplish this purpose. The Austrians retreated. The Tyrolese resisted valiantly. Men, woman and children in the mountain land were filled with zeal in defence of their homes. On one occasion, ten thousand French and Bavarian troops were destroyed in a single mountain pass, by an immense avalanche of rocks and trees prepared and hurled upon them by an unseen foe.

A secret arrangement existed among the Tyrolese, by which the approach of the enemy was to be communicated from village to village by signal fires, from one mountain height to another, and materials were made ready to give instant alarm.

The village where Hans and his mother lived was in the direct line of the route the French army would take, and the people were full of anxiety and fear. All were preparing for the expected struggle. The widow and her cripple son seemed to have no part to do but to sit still and wait.

"Ah! Hans," she said one evening, "it is well for us now that you can be of little use; they would make a soldier of you."

This struck a tender chord. The tears rolled down his cheeks. "Mother, I am useless," cried Hans, in bitter grief. "Look round our village—all are busy, all ready to strive for home and fatherland—I am useless."

"My boy, my kind dear son, you are not useless to me."

"Yes, to you; I cannot work for you, cannot support you in old age. Why was I made, mother?"

"Hans! Hans!" said his mother, "these repining thoughts are wrong. You will have to find the truth of our old proverb:

'God has his plan
For every man.'"

Little did Hans think, that, ere a few weeks had passed, this truth was to be verified in a remarkable manner.

Easter holidays—the festive time of Switzerland—came. The people lost their fears of invasion in the spirit of the occasion. All were busy in the merry-making—all but Hans; he stood alone on the porch of his mountain hut, overlooking the village.

In the evening of easter, after his usual evening prayer, in which he breathed the wish that the father of the rich would, in his good time, afford him some opportunity of being useful to others, he fell into a deep sleep.

He awoke in the night, as if from a dream under the strong impression that the French and Bavarian army was approaching. He could not shake off the impression; but, with the hope of being rid of it, he arose, hastily dressed himself, and strolled up the mountain path. The cool air did him good, and he continued his walk till he had climbed to the signal pile. Hans walked around the pile; but where were the watches? They were nowhere to be seen; perhaps they were tired with the festivities of the village. Near the pile was an old pine tree, and in its hollow stem the tinder was already laid. Hans paused by the tree, and, as he listened, a singular sound caught his attention. He heard a slow and stealthy tread, then the click of muskets; and two soldiers crept along the cliff. Seeing no one, for Hans was hidden by the old tree, they gave the signal to some comrades in the distance.

Hans saw instantly the plot and the danger. The secret of the signal pile had been revealed to the enemy; a party had been sent forward to destroy it: the army was marching to attack the village. With no doubt of his own peril, and perhaps recalling the proverb his mother had quoted, he seized the tinder, struck the light, and flung the blazing turpentine brand into the pile.

The two soldiers, whose backs were then turned to the pile, waiting the arrival of their comrades, were seized with fear; but they soon saw there was no foes in ambush—none but a single youth running down the mountain path. They fired and lodged a bullet in the boy's shoulder. Yet the signal fire was blazing high, and the whole country would be roused. It was already roused from mountain top to mountain top. The plan of the advancing army was defeated, and a hasty retreat followed.

Hans, faint and bleeding, made his way to the village. The people with their arms were mustered thick and fast. All was consternation. The inquiry was everywhere heard, "Who lighted the pile?" "It was I," said at last a faint, almost expiring voice. Poor crippled Hans tottered among them, saying, "The enemy—the French were there." He faltered and sank upon the ground. "Take me to my mother," said he, "at last I have not been useless."

They stooped to lift him. "What is this?" they cried; "he has been shot. It is true; Hans, the cripple, has saved us."

They carried Hans to his mother, and laid him before her. As she bowed in anguish over his pale face, Hans opened his eyes and said: "It is not now, dear mother, you should weep for me; I am happy now. Yes, mother, it is true,

'God has his plan
For every man.'

You see He had it for me, though we did not know what it was."

Hans did not recover from his wound, but he lived long enough to know that he had been of use to his village and his country; he lived to see grateful mothers embrace his mother, to hear that she should be considered a sacred and honored bequest to the community which her son had preserved at the cost of his own life.

Great men grow like these whom met Hans cannot exist in the history of all. To all, however, the Tyrolese motto may speak, and all will experience its truth. Now-a-days stand useless members of God's great family. There is work for everyone to do, if he will but look out for it. So long as there is ignorance to instruct, want to relieve, sorrow to soothe, let there be no drones in the hive, no idlers in the great vineyard of this world.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

John Alexander, a native of Derry, Ireland, and for many years Crown Lands agent in the County of Simcoe, died in Barrie a few days ago. He had amassed a fortune variously estimated at from $100,000 to $150,000, and the entire sum has been left to good and charitable purposes. His old servants were all remembered, and after them came the following: To the resident minister of the Barrie Presbyterian church an annuity of $400. To finish the Presbyterian church in Barrie the sum of $2,500. To fence, lay out and improve the Presbyterian burial ground in Barrie, the sum of $900. To improve the street leading to the said burying ground, $200. Towards building and fitting up a Protestant common school, or common school house for male and female scholars, on the site of the present common school house, the sum of $5,000. To enlarge the Town Hall and Market House in Barrie the sum of $3,000. For a steam fire engine, hose, and water tanks, for the town of Barrie, the sum of $5,000. For improving Collier street in Barrie, by grading, making sidewalks, planting trees, &c., the sum of $1,000. To assist in paying off the debt in the English Church in Barrie, or for improving the grounds thereof, the sum of $1,500. Towards the debt on the Wesleyan Church in Barrie, the sum of $1,000. To the Presbyterian congregation of Barrie the house and lot occupied by the Rev. Mr. Finger, for a manse for the resident minister. In addition to the above there is a sum of $600, subject to certain conditions, which, if not fulfilled, is to be divided equally between the Grammar School and male and female Common Schools in Barrie for prizes.

There are certain other sums of money, subject to certain conditions which, if not fulfilled, are to be handed over to the trustees of Knox's College, Toronto. The residue of the estate, if any is to be given to Knox College.—Daily Telegraph.

Some one blamed Mr. March for changing his mind. Well, said he, that is the difference between a man and a jackass—the jackass can't change his mind, and a man can—it's a human privilege.

A man who'll maliciously set fire to a shed, said Mr. Slow, and burn up twenty cows, ought to be kicked to death by a donkey—and I'd like to do it myself." Slow is very severe sometimes.

Napoleon once entered a cathedral and saw twelve silver statues. What are those? said the emperor. The Twelve Apostles, was the reply. "Well, said he, take them down, melt them, and coin them into money, and let them go about doing good, as their master did."

A Puppy Pun.—A certain lady had a custom of saying to a favorite little poodle dog to make him follow her, 'Come along, sir.' A would-be witty gentleman stepped up to her one day, and accosted her with, "I it me, madam, you called?" "O, no, sir," said she with great composure; "it was an other puppy I spoke to."

ALEX. GRAHAM.
JAS. STRATTON.

Peterborough, Nov. 6th, 1867.

THE undersigned hereby begs to return thanks to the public for the liberal patronage they have heretofore extended to the above firm, and as he now will continue to conduct the business both in Printing, Stationery, &c., he trusts that by a strict attention thereto, he will continue to merit a share of public confidence and patronage.

JAMES STRATTON.

Peterboro, Nov. 6, 1867.

NOTICE.

The business having fallen entirely into my hands, and being desirous to have all accounts arranged during the holidays so as to enable me to meet just claims, I solicit the payment of all arrears at an early date. I will be found at the Book Store for the purpose of settling claims. All accounts due to the Examiner office and Book Store connected therewith must be paid to me. I have taken this method of informing all interested, as I have heard of parties enquiring to whom should they pay their accounts.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

This body finished their deliberation on Saturday, barely in time to return with stages and conveyances that take them to their homes. This session of the County Council, as is well known, is the most important one of the year, and we may remark that the past session was no exception.

In equalizing the different Rolls it was felt that the assessments, as a whole, are too low, in too many cases they are not one third of the real value, and this was considered as standing in the way of Assessors making the necessary declarations on returning their roll to the Clerk. The Committee on equalization, therefore added ten per cent to the entire value of the County, with the exception of the assessment of the Village of Ashburnham which was allowed to remain the same as last year. We are of opinion that this village is still too high compared with other municipalities.

Another important act of the present session is the passing of the By-law to erect bridges over Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek, which will be a means of inducing the trade of the back country by this way. The estimated costs are $10,000, and the Committee appointed to superintend the work are limited to that amount—cannot exceed it—but it is confidently asserted that even a less sum will complete the work. For many years this County has been aiding in keeping in repairs a road to Bobcaygeon that lies wholly in Victoria, round by Cowan's Bridge. This road will not be required in future, and it is believed that the amounts expended on that road will about keep the bridges in repairs from time to time. The town being largely interested in bringing in the trade of the County north, gives a bonus to these bridges of $5000, which is considered one half the expense of the whole, and the Committee are instructed to require of the Municipality of Emismore that it guarantee the costs of putting the travelled road through that township in a good state of repairs. The Committee will meet in Emismore on the Eighth of July to take into consideration the location of the bridges, and also of the road through Emismore between those bridges, and the only object in the way now is the guarantee from the Municipality of Emismore, but this, no doubt, will be given. Messrs. S. S. Peck, W. A. Scott, Peter Pearce, I. Garbutt and James Miller, are appointed by By-law to superintend these bridges and the road connecting them.

Another matter that came up in the discussion on Roads and Bridges, was the useless expenditure of government money on the Backborn road. It appears that the road is a complete failure, although it cost some thousands of dollars. This is too often the case with government works. It would be far better to give the money to the County and permit them to spend it, more work would then be done and better done than under government supervision, which is simply no supervision. The County would receive value for the expenditure, and means of egress and ingress to the settlements secured, and roads through the arable part of the County secured also.

The Council has also adopted a memorial to the government on the subject of a lock at Young's Point. This would open up means of summer communication with Burleigh, north of Dummer, and Methuen, by way of Lakefield, at a very trifling cost. We fear, however, that the government will remain satisfied with the present inactive state, as they value the wild beasts higher than they do settlers.

A memorial has also been sent to the Crown Lands Department on the subject of settlement of the wild lands of the County. At present, territory equitalent to about one township is offered for settlement. What a liberal offer that is? The timber on that is reserved so that the settler can barely take enough for his own buildings. The Council asks merely that something be done to put the land in the market, even on government terms, stingent though they be, in order that emigrants and others may have an opportunity of selecting a piece of it if they think it worth settling on. The timber is the great bug bear in the way of settlement, but surely the settler might be allowed to take the timber and pay for it at the same rates as are paid at present. Very few indeed will go back to settle even for a year on land not fit for cultivation. The matter could be left in the hands of a competent agent who should be recommended by the County Council. Surely Mr. Richards is not sold to some other interest than that of his department.

Let us hope, however, that the memorial may lead him to consider the matter more fully, and then he may be able to devise some better way of inducing settlers into the wild lands that are at present so much sought after, but cannot be obtained.

The Council on the last day granted the sum of $150 each to the Peterboro and Norwood Grammar Schools. This they well never have cause to regret; an educated people must be a free people and tyrants govern the ignorant. We are glad to see our County Councillors taking this view of it and lending their mite to the cause of education.

A Sad Bereavement.

It has become our melancholy duty to chronicle the decease of Mrs. Sheriff Hall, under circumstances that makes the case particularly painful, that they did not witness her suffering and receive her last advice. Mr. and Mrs. Hall left home about a month since with the intention of visiting the old country, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Sandfield Flemming, and after remaining a few days in Halifax, proceeded on board the S. S. "Washington City." Mrs. Hall, it appears, during the voyage was very ill with sea sickness, and when within a day and a half's sail of Queenstown, expired through exhaustion, leaving a large number of sorrowing relatives and an extensive circle of friends to mourn their loss. Mrs. Hall was dearly loved in her family, highly esteemed by all who knew her, and will be mourned by the indigent and poor, whose wants and sufferings she labored incessantly to relieve. Her mourning relatives have our deepest sympathy in the sad bereavement.

The Protestant Home Committee at their first meeting after the melancholy intelligence reached them, unanimously agreed to give public though feeble expression to the deep grief they feel in the unexpected death of their beloved and truly valued friend the late Mrs. (Sheriff) Hall. It is in her capacity as "President of the Peterborough Protestant Home" that the Committee desire first to offer their tribute of respect to her memory and to endorse their appreciation of the excellent and efficient manner in which she discharged her important and difficult duties from the moment of her appointment at its opening to the very last hour of her sojourn amongst them. It is not the language of flattery, but simple truth and justice, to say that "whatsoever her hands found to do, she did it with her might," and sought faithfully to carry out the trust committed to her. Indefatigable and large hearted, of sound judgment and discretion, her suggestions were invariably received with kindness and her decision adopted without dispute. Truly her loss will be felt far and near in the community, and each member of this Committee feels in particular how difficult it will be to find another as admirably adapted for the position as she whose removal from their midst they now deplore. This Committee humbly hope and believe that the dear friend who was always ready to relieve the destitute, shelter the homeless, succour the fatherless, and reclaim the erring, having ceased from her labors here, is now enjoying rest in that Eternal Home in Heaven, open to all through the all prevailing merits and intercession of Christ Jesus the Lord.

Within the sacred domestic circle they dare not intrude, the event is too recent, too peculiarly sad to permit them to do more than offer to those who can best appreciate her worth and their own irreparable loss, their united sympathy and heart-felt prayers that whilst bowed beneath this heavy stroke they may not only recognise the hand of the Smiter but be enabled to believe that word of Divine Truth:—"I love thee, pass under the rod."

In behalf of the Committee,

H. HAULTAIN,
Sec'y P. P. Home.

FIRE IN KEENE.—We learn that about nine o'clock on Thursday morning last, fire was discovered in the stables of the Drummond House, which in a very short time consumed not only the stables but the sheds attached. Through the exertions of the Villagers, further distruction of property was prevented. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, as the house and stables have been unoccupied for several months. No Insurance.

BIBLE CHRISTIAN.—We would remind our readers of the Anniversary of the Bible Christian Sabbath School, on Monday evening. Also

Of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church on Wednesday. And

The Dedication of the Orange Hall, Lakefield, on Wednesday.

THE ORGAN QUESTION.—The Synod has left the organ question over for another year. In our opinion it would have been better to have left it in the hands of each congregation. They have also left the subject of marriage with a deceased wife's sister as it was. There were several advocates for removing the hindrance to such marriages.

Our readers will bear with us in republishing the List of Conviction this week.—This is caused by some convictions having been omitted last week, as they could not be found, and consequently the list was thought perfect. It was afterwards found not to be, and hence its appearing this week.

LACROSSE.—A game will be played on the Cricket Ground, Ashburnham, to-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock. A full attendance requested.

The Dismissal of Mr. Carroll.

We observe that the removal of Mr. Carroll from the post of Crown Land Agent here is meeting with the condemnation an act so utterly at variance with everything fair and honorable so richly merits. It seems incredible that an efficent officer against whom a shadow of complaint could not be urged, and who, as is well known not only discharged his duties faithfully, but rendered services in promoting the interests committed to his care far in excess of the amount of remuneration received by him, should be dismissed for merely political reasons. Yet we assure our contemporaries that this is the fact nevertheless.

Previous to the late election, though efforts were made to induce Mr. Carroll to aid in the election of Tory candidates in more than one constituency, his reply was that he had always been a reformer and as his political principles had undergone no change, it was too much to expect him to prove recreant to his principles and unfaithful to old friends. Ministerial pressure was put in force and threats used, but the answer of Mr. Carroll was prompt and manly—"I am compelled to forfeit either his principles or his office he prefered to lose the latter," was the reply. And this is the style of man whom the Premier of the rickety combination and his crotchety commissioner of Crown Lands in their pettyness of heart went their spleen on. Did the Premier feel rebuked by the answer of the subordinate?

No one doubts but that Mr John Sandfield McDonald has been made the Dupe of his valley name-sake of Kingston, and it is equally certain that he is now paying the penalty of treachery to his party, and he may rest assured that when the Tories give him the last kick, which they will do before long, there will be very few reformers to regret his ignominious death. Had he remained true to his party to-day his government would be strong, his influence everywhere felt, and the affairs of the country in the hands of men in whom the people have confidence. As it is everything is mismanaged, the Premier ignored by J. A. few new friends and no old ones, all the result of joining hands with those who were really considered the curse of the country, and would have had to retire but for rickety reformers who proved recreant to their life long Principles, John Sandfield, McDougall and Howland, not the least among them.

We had the following document placed in our hands on Tuesday afternoon for our signature, by Messrs. Higgins & Devlin:—

"APOLOGY.—We wish to make a full apology for all we wrote in our issue of June 11th inst., which may in any way be considered injurious to Patrick Mungovan, Esq., and to state we think him an honest man, worthy of being trusted, and a good subject of this country."

The first clause we offered to sign but the last we could not agree to sign, as we know nothing of Patrick Mungovan in any way either publicly or privately, except his name. We never had any business transactions with him. We never knew anything about his business. We do not know how he transacts business, and therefore refused to sign anything for or against his honesty. As to his being a good subject of this country we certainly cannot say yea or nay, we mean as to his loyalty. We are entirely ignorant of the man, only as to what he wrote. We certainly never accused him of dishonesty nor do we know that he is dishonest. All that we have written refers to what he wrote, not to his business; and it is for what he wrote against Protestants and their children that we considered him unsafe. We would be sorry to do him a pecuniary injury, and regret that our words should be taken in that sense; yet before we would sign a testimonial of moral character for a man of whom we know nothing, we will stand the result of a law suit. We never called him a Fenian, nor do we wish it to be so understood, yet we cannot testify for or against his being a good subject of this country.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, June 22nd, 1868.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment. Present—His Worship, the Mayor, and Messrs. Doherty, Helm, Kennedy, Chamberlen, English, Stevenson, Dickson, Clixton and Toole.

The minutes of the last meeting were read over and confirmed.

Communications were read from the County Clerk, giving an extract from a report of a Committee of the County Council on the matter of the Bridges across Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek. From Rev. Mr. Kelly, asking the Council to supply the expenses of sending to Kingston the child of Peggy Oakley, as he provided for it in the Hotel Dieu Hospital there. From Walter Sheridan and John McFaul, asking leave from the Council to put up a fence across Church street at a dangerous part of said street.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Doherty, the matter was referred to the Committee on Streets and Bridges.

Petitions were read from Patrick Rudkins and others, asking for a sidewalk on King street; from E. Lemay, asking for a crossway on Brock street. Both were referred to the Committee on Streets and Bridges.

On motion of Mr. Clixton, the Mayor was requested to apply to the proper officers of the County Council and require a receipt for the debentures handed by the Town Clerk to the County for $5,000 granted towards the construction of the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges, said receipt to be in accordance with the terms of the resolution adopted by this Council, containing the conditions on which said debentures were to be issued or delivered.

On motion of Mr. English, the Treasurer was instructed to pay David Whaler the amount of his account for oiling and cleaning the hose, amounting to $3 00.

On motion of Mr. Clixton, a reward of $100 was agreed to be offered for such information as may lead to the conviction of the person or persons who broke the trees in the streets of the Court House Hill.

Mr. Clixton introduced a By-law No. 211, and to amend By-law No. 153, which upon motion was read a first time.

On motion of Mr. Kennedy, the Mayor and Mr. Clixton were appointed a Committee to consult with the ladies of the Home as to the best mode of receiving Mrs. Ryan as a guest of the town and to take such steps as may be necessary toward paying her expenses to and from Toronto and for the purpose of furthering her humane object.

On motion of Mr. Helm, the fine and costs upon David Carlisle were remitted.

A communication from David Carlisle was read and on motion was received.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That Messrs. Clixton, Doherty, Kennedy, the Mayor and the Mover be a special committee to enquire into the present working of the Market By-law and report to this Council.

Moved by Mr. Helm, seconded by Mr. English,—That the clerk be instructed to make report for the benefit of the Street Inspector of all improvements to be made on the streets as passed by this Council.

Mr. Toole read and submitted a Report of the special committee on Mr. Hill's petition recommending the addition prayed for to be done next year.

The council adjourned for one month.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

THURSDAY

The Council met. The Warden in the chair. All the members, except Mr. Buck, present.

The minutes of yesterday were read, approved and signed.

The Warden read a communication from Charles J. Bloomfield, Esq., inviting the members of the County Council to attend a meeting at Cuisse's Hotel, this evening, to consider a prospect for the construction of a woolen railway from Lakefield to Haliburton.

The Warden read the Auditor's Report, submitting estimates. The Report was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Committee on Petitions then reported.

On motion of Mr. F. Peck, the Report was adopted.

The Warden informed the Council that the Treasurer of the Town of Peterborough had deposited with the County Treasurer, Debentures of the Town of Peterborough to the amount of $5,000, for the purpose of aiding this Council in the construction of bridges over Chemong Lake and Pigeon Creek, in terms of Cap. 43, 31 Vic., Statutes of Ontario.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Young, Mr. John Leaky, Sub-treasurer of Dover, addressed the Council in reference to a loss he had sustained in the discharge of his duty as Sub-treasurer.

Peck, seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That this Council go into committee of the whole on the second reading of a By-law to repeal By-law No. 304, entitled a By-law to restrain the Warden and Treasurer from using or disposing of any of the debentures authorized under By-law 306, until further action of this Council, and for other purposes.—Carried.

The committee filled in blanks and added a clause.

This By-law was then read a third time and passed and signed.

On motion of Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. McDonald, Mr. Bloomfield addressed the Council on the subject of a proposed woolen railway from Lakefield to Haliburton.

Moved by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Millar,—That it is the opinion of this Council, after examining the documents submitted to them, and the explanations given, a woolen Railway from Lakefield to Haliburton, would be quite feasible, and if constructed, would tend naturally to facilitate the settlement of the back country, and as a scheme that should receive the support of the government of Ontario.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Lang, the Council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of the By-law appointing Commissioners to act jointly with commissioners from Northumberland and Durham to superintend the repairs of the Hastings Bridge.

The blanks were filled in with the names of the Reeve's of Asphodel and Belmont.

The By-law was then read passed and signed.

The Council adjourned till 8.30 to-morrow morning.

SATURDAY.

The Council met. The Warden in the chair. All the members present except Messrs. Buck and Scott.

The minutes of yesterday were read over, approved and signed.

The warden read over the opinion of the legal adviser of the county on the legality of the Council separating the Township of Bruton from the Municipality of Burleigh, &c., which was to the effect that as there were no inhabitants in Bruton, the Council had no power to act. Before the Council can do any thing in the matter there must be a petition from two thirds of the inhabitants.

The special committee on the petition from Harcourt and Dysart then reported, recommending the annexing of Harcourt to Dysart.

The report was adopted on the following Division.

Yeas,—Messrs. Pearce, Rowe, Peck, McDonald, Young, Miller, Rogers, Whelan, Ferrier, Coughlin Lang, Garbutt and Walton.

Nays,—Messrs. Carroll and Moher.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Peck, the report was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. McDonald, a By-law was introduced to separate the Township of Harcourt from Burleigh, &c., and attach it to Dysart.

The By-law was read a second and third time and passed.

Moved by Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Rowe,—That the Treasurer be, and is hereby authorized to pay one hundred and fifty dollars each to the Peterboro' and Norwood Grammar School, with the understanding that this Council do not intend to make any further grants to said schools.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Miller, seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That the Warden be instructed to communicate with the Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham to ascertain whether they will join this County in the purchase of the bridge across the Otonabee river, known as the Monaghan bridge, which connects these two Counties, as it would be a serious loss to the inhabitants of part of Otonabee and South Monaghan, and the Village of Ashburnham and Town of Peterborough, were the bridge to be closed.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Rogers, a By-law to provide for certain accounts and claims was read a first time.

On motion of Mr. Pearce seconded by Mr Millar, the bridge across the Otonabee in the Ashburnham, was ordered to be repaired by having defective planks replaced, and a piece of timber placed along the centre of the bridge. Mr. Rogers to be placed in charge of said bridge, with power to keep in repair.

The Committee on Finance then reported. The report was read and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. F. Peck, a By-law for levying and collecting County rates, was read a first time. It was after read a second and third time and passed.

The By-law to pay certain accounts and claims was then read a second and third times and passed.

The Warden read a communication from Mr. McWilliams, Court House care taker, in reference to remuneration for the same.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Moher,—That sum of one hundred dollars be granted to the care taker of the Court House for the present year.

Moved, in amendment, by Mr. Lang, seconded by Mr. Ferrier,—That the salary remain at present amount.

Amendment lost; original motion carried.

The Council adjourned.

HAMALL'S SERENADERS.—By an advertisement in another column it will be seen that this troupe is to be here on Friday and Saturday evenings. Mr. Hamall is highly spoken of as a singer.

CRICKET.—Two friendly games of cricket, one with the Norwood Club last week here, and one with Cobourg this week, Peterboro came off victorious, beating Norwood by 13 and Cobourg beat Peterboro by 7.

VANDALISM.—Some one, whose destructiveness is larger than it ought to be, wantonly broke several of the young trees lately planted on the way to the Court House.—The Town Council have offered $100 reward, if found they will pay the penalty of their foolish and useless act

WESLEYAN.—This body have agreed to make an effort to Endow their College.—We wish them success. It is the right scheme, and should be supported. Mr Punshon is about to undertake the work of raising the money. In this way other Denominations will aid them in the work by going to hear the great Orator and Preacher.

Miss Rye, who has brought from London 100 young women, is now at Cuisse's Hotel, the guest of the town. She is here to find out how many domestic servants Peterboro would be likely to require and what amount would be given to bring them out. A deputation of Ladies from the Protestant Home Committee, the Mayor and Mr. Clixton met her at the station and took her to the Hotel where she remains till to-day.

It is announced that Governor Eyre, of Jamaica will contest the seat of John Stuart Mill, Member of Parliament for Westminister, London, in the coming election.

The official returns of the Bank of England, show that the amount of specie in the vaults has increased £245,000 stg since the last report.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner

SIR:—In the last two issues of your paper you have seen fit to give place to remarks and statements in reference to the Butchers of this town, and their dealings with their customers. While we do not admit the right of any one to complain of our private transactions, we do wish to stand well as a community endeavoring to earn a living, with those who may require to deal with us. The position of matters as we understand them are as follows:—The Commissioners of the Town Trust have a building which they call a Market House; it contains some eight divisions called stalls, only seven of which are, however, capable of being used as stalls, even with the very limited accommodation granted to occupants of stalls. The Town Council, in their wisdom, choose to pass a By-law requiring that all persons selling fresh meat in town shall sell it in this Market House alone. Now, let us see how the Commissioners of the Town Trust, and particularly the gentleman who has created the present bobbery, use the By-law above referred to.—They say the Butchers must have the stalls or give up their present means of livelihood, and consequently they must pay for said stalls and rent as we may choose to fix. Upon this assumption, and basing their calculations on the accidental circumstances of the extreme high prices obtained last year, they fix a rate of rents as the upset rent at which these stalls are to be offered for sale by Auction, and go through what they hoped would be a sale, but which sale proved an abortive attempt to fleece the Butchers, being offended at the Butchers because they had the effronting to differ with said Commissioners, and think themselves able and competent to say what they could afford to pay for their stalls. These same gentlemen, at a meeting held after said anortive attempt to sell, say—or rather the testy Commissioner suggested, as a punishment to the refractory Butchers who dared to think for themselves—"We will raise the upset prices of stalls fifty dollars each and then see how they will like it.' Now, sir, let us apply the principal of dealing with Butchers to some other dealers, and we will see how it would effect their transactions. Suppose this same Town Council should see fit to pass a By-law that no one should buy wheat except at stalls in a Market House in which there were only seven, and that for this privilege the owners of such a Market House should choose to say to Mr. Clixton, you shall not have a stall here unless you pay so much, and in addition to such a rent as might so be imposed. The Town Council would also impose taxes on such rental as they now do on the rents of Market Stalls; would there not then be a combination as Mr. C. chooses to call the course pursued by the Butchers, between such persons as wished to buy wheat.

It is a great pity that people have not the common honesty to look a matter like this fairly in the face, and consider how natural it is for us who have to contribute to resources of the town, that they should also be at liberty to at least get such a return for their labor as will enable them to pay such rent and taxes as may be imposed, but also to support their families in such a manner as their means enable them to do. The Butchers do not desire to insult any person, and least of all a lady, but they think it no insult to say to a lady that they do not wish to sell a certain article at less than a certain price; there is no consolation to purchase if the prices do not suit. It will be a great loss to the town if Mr. Clixton should retire from the various offices he now so disinterestedly fills, and we humbly beg to reconsider his request, and that he will so far resist the evident power of control over his actions as a public man, as to permit him to continue his connection at least with the railway matters he has so very disinterestedly managed for the past ten years. Certainly, should he discontinue his connection with that Company, a loss would be the result. As to his comparisons to a great and illustrious man, there is an old saying that "comparisons are odious." The statement made by Mr. Clixton that three of the Butchers had been offered a bonus of $75 each in cash to give up their stalls, is simply untrue no such offer was ever made. The Butchers will endeavor to do their duty to their customers, and can with pride refer to the condition and quality of the meat that is offered for sale by them. They will continue to do this, and to furnish good meat even should Mr. Clixton see fit to resign all his offices and betake himself to the land of our American neighbors, to which reference is made in the letter in your last issue, signed "Fair Play."

We are the obedient servants of the public,

THE PETERBOROUGH BUTCHERS.

Peterboro', June 15, 1868.

The Denominational Colleges.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

DEAR SIR:—At the recent Synod of the Presbyterian Church, and at the Conference of the Methodist Church, the subject of the stoppage of the Legislative Grant to their respective Colleges was discussed, and acts proposed. The learned Principal of Queen's College broadly announced to that deliberate body, that all attempts to carry on that institution without the Legislative Grant must fail, at the same time calling upon the members of the Synod to use their influence upon "public sentiment, so as to obtain justice for the institution." A weak believer in voluntaryism is Principal Snodgrass, but it is to be hoped he will be taught this tough lesson by and by; and is he so short-sighted, while advocating "justice" to his institution, not to discover that he may do it at the expense of justice to others. The Legislature, without any undue influence from without, deliberately adopted the course it has done, as the best to insure "justice" to all classes of the community as time will assuredly verify.

The Methodist Conference, whilst, by their resolutions, adopting the views that it is the duty of the Legislature to "sustain and improve" the Colleges named in the Act of 1853, "by endowing them," and calling upon the whole Wesleyan body and the public to unite in spreading these views. They also adopt the desirability to raise by voluntary subscription $100,000 as part of the endowment for Victoria College. A capital resolution is this, the very best of the whole, as it shows the faith of the Conference in the voluntary principle, note itself as being the few collections caused by a little assistance from Clergy Reserve and Legislative funds. The body is sound upon voluntaryism, if it would but lean upon itself. It needs no crutches in Canada, and stands forth as what can be done in evangelizing the country, by christians trusting to their own resources. If the Legislature keeps to its declaration, which I hope and trust it will, Victoria College will stand go on, and when our Methodist friends realize that it is dependent solely upon themselves, their elastic liberality towards its support will tell on its increased efficiency, otherwise the voluntary principle is at fault. Like wise men they are beginning to make a virtue from a necessity. Their example we hope will not be lost upon the "Auld Kirk" folks, who only want a will to be perfectly independent of state support, the learned Principle to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Yours truly,

J. E.

CROWN LAND AGENCIES.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—We are apt in viewing the fearful struggle of our American neighbors for political ascendancy, involving as that ascendancy does, a complete "cleaning out of the kitchen," or in other words, a dismissal from every office of the party beaten, so as to make room for the victors, to congratulate ourselves that a much better state of things exist in Canada. That here a really good public servant has leave to retain his situation, although another administration from that which appointed him ascends to power. This we consider is right, so that we look upon the removal of a public officer merely on account of his politics as an injury to the public weal. Our past history furnishes us with but comparatively few instances where such act has taken place. I fear, however, that examples are becoming much more frequent than formerly, when partizan members of our government recklessly do violence to the feelings of the community, venting their party spleen against a political opponent by ousting him from office merely because he is an opponent, and filling the vacancy by a political friend to whom he may be under obligations for assistance during a political campaign. In no department in the public service is this unwarrantable conduct more pursued than in the Crown Lands department. That most important branch has unfortunately for a long time been presided over by incompetent and corrupt ministers whose main objects in administering the affairs of the department seems to have been, not the interests of the settler or the intending settler or emigrant, but to bestow good situations on their partizan allies, or exclusive advantages in land or timber to their quondam friends. They have not only to favor those whom they personally know, but they have to grant a favor to members of the House who may require them, and hence this most important public department, which ought to and more than any other in the development of the country, ought to be a mere institution to bestow private favors from public sources, or as an engine to crush a political foe and oust him from office in order to place a friend to his stead. Long as we have been used to the bungling ignorance, incompetency and delays in the Crown Lands Department, it seems at present worse than ever. I have heard from several individuals who like myself have not received as yet answers to the simplest questions from the Department. The present Commissioner of Crown Lands appears the most incompetent of any we have had for some time. Having but little mind of his own he is led to do a manifest wrong at the diction of a master spirit with whom he is associated in the Government, and he appears in the humiliating position of being obliged to carry out what he is forced to acknowledge a wrong. I refer to his late act in dismissing Mr. Carroll from the Crown Land agency on the Burleigh Road. The only reason assigned by him for that dismissal is that Mr. Wheeler Armstrong having been appointed for a portion of the service necessary to have two agents in one locality. It is not hard to guess how Mr. Armstrong came to be appointed, but why was Mr. Carroll removed? This question is answered by his opponents in a different way from that assigned by the Commissioner in his letter to Mr. Carroll. The truth is I believe, Mr. Editor, Mr. Carroll's dismissal from the Crown Land Agency in this County is primarily chargeable to the Premier of Ontario. Mr. Sandfield McDonald has long been a Reformer, and when Premier of Canada, he was the means of having Mr. Carroll, who is also a Reformer, appointed to the Land Agency. We all remember how unceremoniously Mr. Graham was dismissed to make room for Mr. Carroll, and as long as Mr. McDonald retained his Reform principles, matters went on "smooth as a marriage bell," but since entering the coalition government he has declared his friends, Mr. Carrol among the rest, to do some of the dirty work he himself was doing, and for both because he would not, he is visited in this summary manner by dismissal. In Mr. Carroll's head and front of offending is that he is a consistent Reformer, and that he will not fall in with the views of men who have left Reform principles, among whom is the great body of his co-religionists around here, as we learned last fall, and he suffers as a martyr to political principle. I am well aware that my views will be controverted, but let those who differ from me address, if they can, other reasons for his dismissal. Until they do so, I shall feel at liberty to think as I do.

I am, Mr. Editor,

Yours truly,

A LOVER OF FAIR PLAY.

Peterboro, June 23, 1868.

On Thursday morning while the son of Mr. Wm. Dicks—a lad of about 13 years of age, was working a saw in Fee's shingle factory, Lind-say, he left arm some how or other came in contact with the saw, severing the arm below the elbow and ripping up the bones nearly to the wrist. The wounded limb was amputated.

The Windsor Record asserts that a quantity of Fenian arms was a few days ago surreptitiously thrown over the lake and smuggled into Bells Haven, and from thence into the country. Mr. McMicken, Stipendiary Magistrate was appraised of the reported transaction.

Telegrams from New York announcing the nomination and confirmation of the Hon Reverdy Johnson as Minister to England, vice Mr. Adams, resigned, were duly received in London. The Daily News has an editorial article on the subject, stating that the long experience, training and high character of Mr. Johnson are a guarantee that he will represent the United States as a whole and not sectionally. The "Times" closes a lengthy article with the following words:—"No Envoy could be sent here who would be hailed with more confidence as the honored spokesman of a great nation. The unanimous ratification of his nomination by the Senate is an unexampled testimonial. His intellect is admirably trained to discuss the pending or probable issues with precision, impartiality, dignity of character, breadth of learning and charm of manner."

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic wafers in curing Coughs, Colds, and all Bronchial affections has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry, the demand for them has steadily increased for the last twenty years, until now the average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box

THE ERIE CANAL.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1867 amounted to over three million dollors, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathaic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the constitutional lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, encrusted extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and will administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant medicine.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

APPRENTICE WANTED—To learn the Printing business. Apply at this Office.

A LITTLE DEAR.

She spread the goods before him,
With half-opened eyes,
Their quality and value
Extolling to the skies.
How wide—oh how bewitching!
Those hands—how soft and white!
Those eyes—how fascinating!
That face—how fair a sight!

"The goods are very pretty,—
No doubt what they appear,
But then, I think," he added,
"You are a little dear"
With cheeks all flood with blushes,
She turned her head away,
And innocently answered,—
"That's what the fellers say."

USEFUL RECEIPTS.

CREAM CHEESE.

To a quart of cream, or, if not desired very rich, add thereto one pint of new milk; warm it in hot water till it is about the heat of milk from the cow; add rennet (1 tea-spoonful); let it stand till thick; then break it slightly with a spoon, and put it in the frame, in which you have previously put a fine canvass cloth; press it gently with a weight; let it stand for a few hours; then put a fine cloth in the frame, and shift the cheese into it. A little powdered salt may be sprinkled over the cheese. It will be fit for use in a day or two.

Another.—Put a quart of good cream aside to become sour and very thick; then lay a piece of this cahco inside a small hair sieve, taking care that the cahco comes quite to the top, and rather above it, in order that you may be able to pull out the cheese without any difficulty. Let the sieve stand upon a dish; pour the cream into the sieve, and leave it to strain. Throw away the whey from the dish as it runs. In about three days the cheese will be of a proper consistency, and fit to eat. It is a delicate relish, and very delicious. The cream will not go into the sieve at once; pour it in during the day, as the rest comes from the whey leaving it. At Dieppe little baskets are sold (heart shape) for making cream cheese, and answer the purpose exceedingly well, being very open, so that the whey drains quickly through the curd into the dish.

LIGHT TEA BUNS.

Take half a teaspoonful of tartaric acid, and the same quantity of bi-carbonate of soda, and rub them well into a pound of flour, through a hair sieve, if leisure permit. Then work into the flour two ounces of butter, and add two ounces of crushed and sifted lump sugar, also a quarter of a pound of currants or raisins, and (if liked) a few caraway-seeds. Having mixed all these ingredients well together, make a hole in the middle, and pour in a half pint of cold new milk; one egg, well beaten, mixed with the milk is a great improvement, though your buns will do without any. Mix quickly, and set your dough with a fork on baking pans. The buns will take about twenty minutes to bake. From these ingredients you ought to produce a dozen.

GINGERBREAD LOAF, TO BE EATEN WITH BUTTER, IF LIKED.

Stir a cupful of melted butter into two cupfuls of treacle, a tablespoonful of ginger, and a teaspoonful of cinnamon; sift some flour, and stir in just enough to make a stiff batter; dissolve a small piece of alum, the size of a kidney bean, in half a cupful of water; stir it in, and then add more flour. Put in as much flour as will make a dough nearly stiff enough to roll out on a board; have tin pans buttered, and the oven quite ready; mix a heaping teaspoonful of soda with half a cup of boiling water, and stir all up quickly; put the cakes in the oven at once, and use them when quite fresh. They should be brushed over with syrup when taken out of the oven.

PINE-APPLES.

Pare and slice the fruit; make a syrup of a pound of sugar and half a pint of water to every pound of fruit, and when it is clarified and well skimmed, drop in the apples and let them simmer slowly for half an hour.

PINE APPLE MARMALADE.

Pare and grate the pine-apple, and take equal parts of fruit and sugar and put into your preserving kettle, and cook slowly until it is clear. It is very nice and keeps well.

PINE APPLE CIDER.

Cut the rind of one large pine-apple, or two small ones, into small pieces; put them into a pitcher with two quarts of water.—Tie a piece of thin cloth over the pitcher, let it stand to ferment. Then strain it and sweeten to your taste. Put into bottles, cork tightly, wire them well, and lay on the side. It will be ready for use in forty-eight hours.

A TIDY.

The following directions make a simple and elegant one: Take a piece of thin muslin, ten inches square; in the centre draw any design you choose—a plain leaf or other simple figure—and work it in chain stitch with scarlet wool; turn down the edge as if for a hem, and work around it button-hole stitch with the same wool; finish with a ruffle (not too full) an inch and a half wide. The ruffle should be fluted. Double zephyr is the most suitable wool to use, and a half ounce will be a great abundance for an ordinary tidy.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured the when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eyelid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonee Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death continued nursing just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c, and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but I did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Parker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c, gradually left me, and I am healthy and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Synod of the Canada Presbyterian Church.

SECOND DAY.

DEBATES ON THE SUBJECT OF MARRIAGE WITH A DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER.

Rev. G. McMullen, Woodstock, gave notice that when the subject of the marriage of a deceased wife's sister came up he would move, seconded by Rev. John Laing, Cobourg, the following resolution:

"Whereas, marriage with the sister of a deceased wife is prohibited by the law of the land, and has been forbidden by this church, and hitherto treated as incestuous, being followed by excommunication; and, whereas, though implicitly forbidden by the Westminster Confession of Faith, chapter 24, section 4, which reads: 'A man may not marry any of his wife's kindred nearer in blood than he may of his own; nor the woman of her husband's kindred nearer in blood than her own; nevertheless, whereas such marriage is not contrary to the word of God, therefore, resolved that Presbyteries be instructed to consider the subject, and to report to the next Synod their judgement, as to whether it should not be left to sessions to deal with such cases in such a manner as they may deem to be for edification, having in view on the one hand, the prevention of such marriages which, in the opinion of this Synod, are inexpedient and offensive to a large number of the people of God, and, on the other hand, to prevent the permanent exclusion from church fellowship of persons so married, together with their children, who, in other respects, give creditable evidence of a saving interest in the covenant of grace."

SECOND DAY.—AFTERNOON SEDERUNT.

An application was received from the Presbytery of Toronto, asking for leave to receive the following named students on trial for license:—Messrs. James B. Bakie, James A. F. McBain, Hugh Currie, Andrew Muir, John E. Croly, Ansen Forster, Nathaniel Clarke, Edward Reeve, Wm. Mitchell, Mr. John Campbell, and Mr. James Barron. The application was granted.

The subject of marriage with a deceased wife's sister was then brought up by the reading of an overture from Knox church, Woodstock. The overture sets forth the matter as follows:—

"Whereas, by the 4th article of the 24th chapter of the Confession of Faith, marriage with a deceased wife's sister is prohibited as contrary to the word of God: and whereas the passages of Scripture cited in proof thereof do not prohibit the marriage in question; and whereas, other passages of Scripture seem to teach, with very considerable clearness the lawfulness of such marriage in the sight of God; and whereas the present law of the Churchon this point, consistently administered, consigns all persons so married to helpless exclusion from Church fellowship;" and it then goes on "respectfully to recommend that such clause be removed from the standards of our Church.

Rev. Mr. Wilson, Kingston, raised a point of order. He did not think that an overture couched in such terms could be received by the Synod. It declared that the Confession of Faith was unscriptural, and he thought no Presbytery had a right to make such a declaration.

Rev. Mr. McMullen, Woodstock, asked if the Presbyterian Church had no right to reform any portion of its creed when it saw necessity for so doing.

The Montreal Presbytery which had been out for half an hour, asked for leave to sit for half an hour longer.

Mr. Gordon said the members of the Montreal Presbytery felt themselves aggrieved in being kept out while such an important discussion was going on in the Synod.

Rev. Mr. Wilson moved that the further half hour be not granted.

Rev. Mr. Kemp moved that it be granted. Carried.

Discussion on the overture being resumed, Principal Willis and Rev. Mr. Gregg opposed its reception on the same grounds as Rev. Mr. Wilson

Rev. Dr. Ormiston, and Rev. Messrs. Wardrope and Kemp were in favor of considering the overture. The Moderator being appealed to, decided that the point of order had been well taken, and that the overture should not be received. The subject was then dropped.

Next in the order of business were the reports of the committee on psalmody.

Rev. Mr. Inglis read the report, from which it appeared that out of 175 congregations 15 use the psalms alone; 137 use the psalms and paraphrases; 19 use the psalms, paraphrases, and the United Presbyterian Hymn-book; and 4 use other books of praise. The Kirk Sessions who report disapprove of the introduction of hymns are 42, and those who approve are 98. The committee recommended that no revision of the paraphrases be made; that the Synod take steps to prepare a limited collection of hymns, including as many of the paraphrases as may be deemed advisable The Rev gentleman moved that the book of psalms and hymns sanctioned by the English Church be used in the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Mr. Cochrane, Brantford, seconded the motion.

Rev. Mr. Lowry thought the consideration of the subject should be postponed until the discussion on instrumental music took place. There was, he intimated, a disposition in some quarters completely to overturn what many had considered to be old systems and old terms, and to which they were conscientiously attached. If there was to be any change at all in these directions, he should consider it as attacking the fundamental doctrines and teachings of the Church.

Rev. Mr. Wilson spoke at great length against the resolution. He thought the proposition aimed directly at the standards of the church, and the groundwork of the law of Christ, and quoted from the Confession of Faith to show that the only acceptable way of worshipping God was laid down by Himself. He had authorized the singing of the psalms of David, and not the poetry of the present day. The speaker had no authority to call upon his congregation to sing poetry any man might compose; but when he called upon them to sing the psalms, he felt that he was backed by the authority of God. The proposed innovations were calculated to undermine the faith of their people in the word of God. He quoted Sir Walter Scott and John Knox, the latter having said, "All worshipping, honoring, or other service invented by the brain of man in the religion of God, without his own express commandment is idolatry." The speaker went on to show that the psalms, besides being divinely authorized, had been used by the apostles, and by all the early Christians, and that it was not until a late day that human composition had been introduced into this form of worship. If they departed from the established forms of the church in this instance, they would open wide the door of innovation, and no one could tell to what it might lead. He shuddered when he saw to what a state of things people had come in the United States when the New School Presbyterians had introduced as hymns the productions of Tom Moore, a Papist, and of Robert Burns and Harriet Martineau. He protested against our Sabbath school children being thus brought up in the teachings of such persons. From a Sabbath school hymn book which he held in his hand, he quoted the hymn beginning

"How cheering the thought that the angels in bliss
Will bow their bright wings to a world such as this," and held that this hymn was merely in praise of angels, and ought not to be used in the worship of God. Again, the hymn commencing

"Holy Bible, book divine," was a direct invocation to the Bible, and had no connection with the praise of God. They had only to change a word or two to suit the Roman Catholics, and sing

"Mary, holy and divine."

(laughter), and make it a real Catholic hymn. They ought to avoid, as much as possible, all such approaches to Catholic ideas. Such hymns in the Sabbath-schools were practically teaching their children idolatry.

Here several members rose, and protested against the remarks of the speaker, as some of them used hymn-books in their churches and Sabbath-schools, and did not wish to be charged with teaching such doctrines as Mr. Wilson had spoken of.

The Moderator—Mr. Wilson is out of order in condemning hymns which the Synod has no notion of adopting.

The Rev. speaker proceeded to show that a departure from the present established forms would ultimately lead to the evils which he deplored. He also remarked that he saw here in Montreal three crosses on one Protestant church, and one cross on one of the Presbyterian churches, and that these things indicated a growing corruption of the pure religion of their fathers.

It being now six o'clock the Synod adjourned, but with the understanding that Mr. Wilson shall have the floor when the discussion on Psalmody is resumed.

EVENING SEDERUNT.

Rev. Mr. Laing, Cobourg, proceeded to read the report of the Home Mission Committee, with a statistical appendix, from which we extract the following figures:—

Connected with the Committee's operations, there are 77 missions, with 150 preaching stations, and 56 supplemented congregations,—5,509 families, an adult membership of 6,155, average attendance 15,091. These Congregations contribute besides board for Missionaries $22,762, and receive $9,583.75

There is a slight decrease in the number of Missions, but an increase in the supply given to them, to the amount of $1,374.

Of Supplemented Congregations we have an increase of 11, with 510 communicants. Arrears due amount to $1,074.

The list of missionaries contains 11 ministers, 4 lay catechists, 22 divinity students and 14 student catechists.

Besides the regular grants, the Committee has paid for Kankakee $100; towards Buxton arrears $100, and to arrears in Grey $100; sundry expenses in addition amount to $156 70. In all $456.70 is paid.

Eight Presbyteries have increased their contributions to the amount of $1,013, while the contributions of the other six have decreased by $607, a net increase of $1,167. Ten Presbyteries have increased their expenditure by $1,439, while four have decreased theirs by $439, a net increase of $775. Eight Presbyteries expend more than they contribute, amounting to $2,457, while six contribute $1,910 more than they expend. $396 is the total excess of expenditure above contributions. During last year, $396 more was paid out than came in.

The Presbyteries contributing the greatest amount are Toronto $1,491; London, $1,213; Montreal, $953; and Hamilton $902 The rate per member is: In Toronto, 28 cents; London, 31c; Montreal, 22c; Hamilton, 22c.; the Presbytery of Kingston shows the highest rate, 51c per member; Ontario, 28c.; Cobourg, 24; while Grey contributes only 9c.; Huron and Brockville, 11c.; Paris, 13c.; and Ottawa, 17c. The largest amount expended is $1,012, by the Presbytery of London; $406 for Buxton and $100 for Kankakee. The next largest, $1,752 by the Presbytery of Montreal.

THIRD DAY—SECOND SEDERUNT.

The consideration of the report of the committee on psalmody was resumed, when

Rev. Dr. Wilson, who had the floor at the conclusion of previous sederunt, resumed the discussion by opposing the introduction of hymns, on the ground that it would disturb the harmony of the Church.

The question would divide congregations, and difficulties would be constantly coming up before the Courts.

Rev. Mr. Inglis asked leave to withdraw his original motion on a new hymn-book, that he might amend it so as to allow them to send down a copy of the proposed book for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of each Session.

Rev. Mr. Gregg said that Mr. Wilson had expressed himself as very desirous of peace in the Church. Let him turn his eyes to the proceedings at Pittsburg, Penn., recently, where George H. Stewart had been suspended for singing hymns. The whole world knew the noble Christian character of Mr. Stewart; yet the suspension of such a man was an example of the peace that would follow the adoption of the principles of Mr. Wilson. If this Church should attempt any such thing, it would isolate us from the whole Christian world. He held that the principles Mr. Wilson had advocated would lead them back to the darkness of the Middle Ages, and would enthrall them with the forms and ceremonies of Judaism. Mr. Wilson desired to follow the literal directions of the Confession of Faith. If that was carried out, ministers, when reading the Scripture, would have to begin at Genesis, and read the Bible clear through, verse by verse. Furthermore, they would be restricted altogether to the psalms for their singing praying and preaching.

Mr. D. McKay felt grieved the day before at some remarks of Rev. Mr. Wilson He worshipped in that Church and they used hymns, but they were on that account all spoken of as if they were idolators. Mr. McKay showed that many of the psalms required instrumental music; yet Mr. Wilson was also opposed to that, showing a literal observance of the rules for which Mr. Wilson contended.

Rev. Mr. Inglis amended his resolution, making it read as follows:—

"That the Synod, having considered the report of the Psalmody committee, and having had their attention directed to the book of psalms and hymns for public worship sanctioned by the Synod of the English Presbyterian Church, agree to send this book down to Presbyteries and Sessions, with a view to its apoption by this Church, and that the Presbyteries report at the next Synod.

Rev. John Ross strongly opposed the resolution. The great question of the day was the inspiration of the Scriptures, and the supremacy of the word of God Though he would not say that all churches who used hymn-books disbelieved the authority of the Scriptures, yet he did believe that the popular hymnology of the present day had much to do with the alarming increase of infidelity, and a doubting of the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures.

The Synod then adjourned.

FOURTH DAY—EVENING SEDERUNT

At the opening of the Synod a large number of spectators were observed in the galleries and body of the Church.

The Moderator announced that the business of the evening was the returns of remits to Synod anent instrumental music.

Rev. Mr. Gibson then presented the report of the Committee on the overture respecting instrumental music. Of the Presbyteries that had made returns on the remit to them, five desired that the prayer be granted: of which two simpliciter, and three with conditions Eight disapproved and one thought that liberty should be given to congregations which desired to have music unanimously or by a large majority. From the returns of the Presbyteries, it appeared that, of the Sessions in the Presbytery in Montreal, twenty-six disapproved and eighteen approved, and, of forty-three making returns, thirty four disapproved, eight approved, and one declined to make returns.

Rev. Mr. Middlemiss moved, seconded by Mr Fraser, that the Synod having heard and considered the returns of the overture from Knox Church, Montreal, anent the use of instrumental music in public worship, find that a majority of Presbyteries, though on various grounds, are opposed to the granting of the prayer of the said overture, and therefore refuse to grant the same; and, after full consideration, declare instrumental music in worship to be contrary to the principles and immemorial practice of this church, and that therefore it be not permitted in any congregation connected therewith. The motion concluded with an expression of a desire that the worship of praise should be improved as much as possible.

Rev. Mr. Laing raised the point of order that the only two amissible motions were to declare the decisions of the Presbyteries final, or to remit.—Overruled.

Rev. Mr. Gregg raised another point of order. The motion made a new article of faith that instrumental music was contrary to the word of God.

This motion was also overruled.

Rev. Mr. Middlemiss then proceeded to elaborate an argument that the use of instrumental music was contrary to the principles of their church. There were certain important principles underlying their faith,—first, that in the worship of God they should be regulated entirely and exclusively by God's own appointments. One class of Christians held that they were at liberty to introduce forms into their worship not directly sanctioned by God while Presbyterians taught that no such liberty was allowed. The Westminster Confession taught that the acceptable way of worshipping God was appointed by himself, and forbade all ways or devices not found in the word of God. He deprecated the principle of introducing forms devised by human wisdom or expediency. Would it be tolerated in any earthly subject should be prescribe the way in which his sovereign should be approached? Much less could men take counsel of their own hearts as to how they should approach the eternal throne. Yet he would not be understood as saying all other forms of worship were unacceptable to God. The ancient people were forbidden to offer sacrifices except in one place; yet the brethren knew well in how many cases this rule was departed from; and we read in God's word that Solomon loved the Lord and walked in all the statutes of his father, only he offered sacrifices in high places. Another principle was this—under the Jewish dispensation there were two forms of worship, those of the synagogue and tabernacle, but Christ sanctioned the former. The latter was local and temporary while the other was general. The Reformers joined issue with the Papists upon the question, which of these two forms of worship should be tolerated, they choosing the synagogue worship and the Papists that of the tabernacle. Therefore it was vain for one to argue in favor of instrumental music, because it was used in tabernacle worship. He would not say that it had been prohibited altogether from the synagogue, but the fact that it was not used in Christian worship for several centuries showed it was not sanctioned by the head of the church. There could be no question but that it was introduced only when the great apostasy had been completed and when the temple worship had been recognized as the model. The new dispensation was exceedingly simple compared with the other, and instrumental music had not a character of simplicity. Should they of this Synod commence the work of restoring the high places which their fathers had taken away?

Rev. John Fraser, Kincardine, in seconding the motion said, this dislike of innovation was not peculiar to the Highlanders of Scotland, and if it were, was there a sect in the Church of Scotland that did not sympathise with them. Unfaithful and deplorable would be the legislation that would engraft that foreign element upon the laws of their church which would aggrieve exceedingly the great body of Scotchmen who loved their Presbyterianism as deeply as the brown native rocks and hills. The Church believed not only that the use of instrumental music was uncongenial to the pure worship of God, but it was absolutely opposed and irreconcilably at war with such worship. It might be said that we should allow those churches to use instrumental music who desire to do so. But such a principle was not Presbyterianism; it was the principle of Congregationalism and disintegration, radically destructive to that unity which formed so important a constituent of Presbyterianism. Those who were in favor of instrumental music contended that it would raise them higher in spiritual contemplations; yet when was the worship of the Church more pure more spiritual and more godly, than in the times preceding the introduction of instrumental music? It had been stated that in some cases instrumental music was necessary to the existence of congregations, because the youthful portion would go to other churches. He would not admit that they should have recourse to the fantastic expedients of an organ to keep their audiences at home.—He had more faith in the consience of Scotchmen, and in their love for the religion of their fathers. He hoped the Synod would pause ere it gave authority to an innovation which would chill the love of so large a portion of the Church. Such a measure would injure the Church more than a disruption. Congregations would break away, and the doors of many churches would be closed. He would caution any party against the exciting work of innovation.

Rev Dr Irvine moved an amendment to the effect that, whereas several Presbyteries, and respectable minorities in others, approved the overture, it would be inexpedient to prohibit the use of instrumental music in public praise to congregations who either desired it unanimously, or by large majorities. He called upon the Synod to pass this amendment out of respect to that fraternal love which had just been invoked. The mover of the first resolution laid it down as a principle that we must not worship God in any way not appointed in His word; but he could not show that God did prohibit the use of instrumental music; but quite the reverse. The fact that God even permitted music in the temple worship showed that it was not morally wrong. He denied that there was on the part of Knox Church any disposition to contemn the authority of the Synod. Since the last meeting of the Synod, the organ in the gallery of that Church had neither been opened, as none desired, nor used, as others would have done; but it remained there till the will of the Church was ascertained, and, as we understood, would be removed if the decision of the Synod was against it. But in that case, in casting the organ out from the gallery they ought—in consistency with themselves—to cast it out from the basement and from every Sunday school attached to the Presbyterian churches where the organ was used to lead the singing of the children.

Rev. A. Melville thought the sooner the Synod came to a deliverance on this subject the better. The overture was said to be a wedge. It was, on the contrary, the first wave of the rising waters, which would overflow all who stood in the way. He contended that intelligent opinion was in favor of instrumental music; not that it should be used instead of the human voice, which should never be allowed, but in aid of the human voice, which was a very different thing. It was said that the organ was a mere performance, but he had seen singing by eight or ten well-killed persons, which was just as much a performance.

It being now ten o'clock, a motion was made that the Synod continue in session until this question was disposed of. Moved in an endment, that the Synod sit till eleven o'clock. Both motions were lost, and the Synod adjourned.

FIFTH DAY.—MORNING SEDERUNT.

The order of business recommending that the consideration of the overture anent instrumental music be continued until finished.

Rev. Mr. Melville, who had the floor at the conclusion of last sederunt, resumed the discussion by supporting Rev. Dr. Irvine's motion. He thought it perfectly proper, inasmuch as nature, in all her voices, had been called upon continually to praise God, for man to accept such assistance from nature as he could command. Nature was made for man, not man for nature.

Rev. Mr. McMillan, Cobourg, followed in support of Mr. Middlemiss' motion. It had been said that the poverty and suffering of the early church was the reason of the absence of instrumental music in its worship, but at the same time we know they supported a ministry, and could as well have supported instrumental music if they thought it right. He referred to Rev. Mr. Melville's remark last night that the opinion in favor of instrumental music was rising, like a flood and would soon sweep away all opposition. He would reply by quoting the scripture, "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against them" (Cheers.) Brethren had asked them to give their approval to that of which they disapproved, and if they did so they would be false to their conscientious views, and act a double part.

Rev. Mr. Cuthbertson moved that speeches be limited to fifteen minutes in length.

Rev. Mr. Laing thought it was not fair to limit the minority, or those in favor of the organ, to fifteen minutes when the other side had made several speeches of much greater length. He proceeded to say that he was in favor of the Synod's carrying out its laws as at present, and not allowing of innovations, or else to alter its constitution so as to allow the desired change. The matter had now come up on its own merits. His own opinion was, that the use of organs was undesirable, inexpedient, and indicative of a decline in the church. He was asked, was he to debar from fellowship from this church those who differed from him? He durst not do this unless he could clearly prove the authority of God and that he could not find. He moved the following resolution:—

"That the use of instrumental music, as an aid in the service of praise, is sanctioned by scripture, and is not inconsistent with the standards of this Church."

That though the general introduction of organs into churches is not expedient or desirable, chiefly in view of the strife and divisions which thus might be engendered; and the liability, through an improper use of the instrument, of interfering with the general singing of the congregation,—nevertheless the use or disuse of instrumental music as an aid in the service of praise, ought not to be made a term of communion in the Church of Christ."

"With the view of protecting Christian liberty of conscience and worship, and at the same time observing regularity of ecclesiastical procedure in making a change which affects the worship of the Church [illegible] conference to Presbyteries and Sessions in terms of the Barrier Act, proposing that the Synod grant the use of instrumental music subject to the following regulations":

The regulations provide that in cases where a unanimity prevails, as shown in the absence of a formal protest, instruments may be used.

He heartily agreed with Mr. Middlemiss in the first principle laid down by him last night. They were not only not to introduce what was forbidden, but also what was not sanctioned by the word of God. Yet he held that we have God's sanction to its use. He rejected all arguments about expediency or edification, and relied solely upon the testimony of the word of God. The psalms were used in the worship of God, before the Christian era in connection with instrumental music. Why should they not reject the psalms as well as instruments? If they rejected one, they should to be consistent reject the other. Instrumental music was ritualism, as it had been called. Ritualism was symbolism, and was done away with in the new dispensation; but no one would pretend to say that instrumental music was symbolical, and therefore was abolished by Christ. If there was anything in the old dispensation which was not destroyed in the new, it was still binding. He took the whole Bible for his guide, and found that musical instruments were used in the old dispensation; they were not abolished by Christ, therefore they are sanctioned in the new dispensation. He next denied that it was inconsistent with the standards of the church. These condemned only unmeaning, unintelligible services, such as chanting It was doing violence to these standards to put them upon a level with God's word in authority. They had a perfect right to alter these standards when they felt a necessity, and could bring the Synod to their views. He was in favor of unity in all things essential, but repudiated and condemned a dead, lifeless uniformity, which was contended for by the spirit of the other resolutions. Good and holy men of other churches used organs. Were they to condemn them as idolaters therefor, and because they would not sing psalms? Were those men who had shaped the standards of their faith infallible in their work, and were they the only men who possessed the Spirit of God. Mr. Middlemiss' motion was fatal to union, for the Presbyterians of the Lower Provinces used organs and could not unite with us. There was great fear that they would become merely a sect, shut up and away from all other Christian denominations of the world.—Let not the Synod do rashly what which it might hereafter repent as having been disastrous to its growth and prosperity. Mr. Middlemiss' motion also made a new condition of communion for those who used instrumental music. It would shut out not only Presbyterians, but members of all other churches. If, for this reason, one member of Christ's church should be shut out from their fellowship, it would be a rank and unbearable tyranny which he would not tolerate (hear, hear.) The church must some time take this step, and it might as well do it now. He had no fear of a disruption upon this question. The church had split up many times upon principles, but never upon such a trival matter as this.

Rev. Dr. Ormiston seconded the resolution most heartily. Though they might not be able to carry it in this Synod if they could keep the principles contained in it before the people they would educate the Church up to it. Those who were moving in this matter claimed to love their Presbyterianism as much as those opposed to them.

But he recognised such a thing as progress. Those who believed that we ought to do every blog just as they did in the time of John Knox were not in their proper age, and were living about two hundred years after they were born. We were now living in another age and under greater light, and should not be tied down to mere forms of centuries ago.

He had, however, much rather than an organ be never played in any of their churches, than that any number of his brethren should be offended thereby.—They had been appealed to, to respect the conscientious scruples of those who were opposed to this innovation. Very good: they mean to do so, and he would make the same appeal to themselves. They should all learn, however, to distinguish between conscientious scruples and life long intellectual convictions. It was decidedly wrong and in bad judgment to impose such restrictions on the conscience as a refusal to grant the request of the overture would involve. There was a liberty with which Christ had made his people free that was not enjoyed under the old dispensation.—He had not established any ritual of worship. He had not even established the use of the psalms, but his Holy Spirit was to lead them in their worship and guide them into all truth. This question was before them, and it must be met, Mr. Middlemiss' motion will not meet it. It must be met in a different manner. He proposed to meet it with a kindly treatment, and with a forbearing investigation which Mr. Laing's resolution contemplated.

Rev. Mr. Kemp moved, seconded by Rev. Mr. Cochrane, the following: "That the whole question of the use of instrumental music, as an aid in conducting public worship, be left to the discretion of congregations, subject to the ordinary review of the courts of the Church."

He claimed for his motion that it avoided that exceedingly troublesome thing called legislation. Both the preceding resolutions had, in his opinion, laid down a new law for their Church. Though neither side might be able to bring the other over to their views, they would probably both become convinced that this was a question in which Greek met a Greek, and that now comes the tug of war, and come to the conclusion that it was best to meet each other half way and shake hands over the matter. He could not admit that music was a lost art in the Presbyterian Church. He thought it was a libel upon their brethren on the other side of the line, to say that they were stunted in their use of instrumental music by ritualistic ideas. Mr. Kemp was proceeding to argue for his motion on the ground of Christian liberty, when the hour of adjournment arrived, and, after three or four notices of motion on the subject under discussion were read, the Synod adjourned till Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

A MIRACLE.

A young man named Joseph Le Clere, son of a farmer living in the Township of Somerset, Eastern Townships, aged about thirty years, and dumb from his birth, who is described as a "model of piety," though a little imbecile, left his father's house on the 2nd of May, and, to the great alarm and solicitude of his parents, could not be found anywhere up to the 18th of the same month. On the day ten men went out in search of the truant, and after some search found him on the banks of the Riviere Noire not far from its junction with the Becancour. He was without shoes, and lightly clad; but, although the weather for some previous had been almost wintry, he did not seem to have suffered from cold. To the eager questions put to him by the discoverers he made the following account of himself:—"Seeing that he had lost his way he lay down and considered how he might best employ his time. He then set to work to clear the bush and had actually succeeded in making about a quarter of an acre of ground tolerably presentable. He averred that he had never suffered the least from hunger; that a tall lady in white, very beautiful and amiable, had every day brought him two supplies of food, consisting of a sort of large round biscuits, far better than any biscuit he had ever seen before. She came to him flying, and at night covered him carefully with a large quilt, which kept him quite warm." All this, save the communication in the Union des Cantons, to which we are indebted for the story, he related in a simple, natural manner, without any sign of deception. The aforesaid communication concludes thus:—

"These are the certain facts. Who can explain them otherwise than by a mysterious protection of heaven? If not, we must start many suppositions, and it is more natural to believe that the Holy Virgin condescended to take care of the young man and to restore him in safety to his family as a reward for his virtue."

We have this verdict to the judgment or imagination of our readers.—Montreal Gazette.

PRINCE ALFRED AND SIR ROBERT NAPIER.—The Atlantic Cable has informed us that on Monday, June 22, Her Majesty's ship Urgent, sailed from Alexandria, Egypt, for England, having on board His Royal Highness Prince Alfred, Duke of Edinburg, and Major Gen. Sir Robert Napier. This is one of those announcements which excite, startle and please. Why it should have such an effect it is not easy to explain. There is unquestionably something in the coincidence. It is a curious circumstance that Prince Alfred, on account of whom England sorrowed, and Sir Robert Napier, on account of whom England rejoiced in the last week of April—the two men connected with the two most startling accounts of the day, so far as England is concerned—should meet in Alexandria and sail for home in the same ship. It is only truth to say that the Urgent will have a reception when she reaches England such as has not been given to any vessels within living memory. The victim of O'Farrell and the hero of Magdala will receive an ovation such as John Bull delights to give. It is not unfair to conclude that both the Prince and the General will be gainers by the fortunate meeting. The Johnny Bulls will not unnaturally arrive at the conclusion that the fates are with them.—N. Y. Herald.

CHARACTERISTIC SPEECH.—Dr. Cumming has been making a characteristic speech at Leicester, England. He admitted that Roman Catholicism was making progress in England, but he argued that in other countries it was "dying down to the very roots." Archbishop Manning had stated that he had made 1,000 converts in Westminster, and that he had admitted 11 clergymen of the Church of England within the last year into the Church of Rome. Archbishop Manning had also stated that if the Roman Catholic Church could strike down England, the whole of Europe would be at its feet, and he was setting to work with masterly power and skill to effect this object. He had 1,600 bishops and priests working in England alone; he had also 206 convents, 40 or 50 monasteries, and 1,300 cathedrals, churches and chapels.

The Church of Rome and the Marriage Laws.

(From the Canadian Independent.)

A very important case is pending in the Court of Chancery for Ontario, involving the question of the right of a Roman Catholic Bishop, in that Province to marry parties without the license or banns required by all Protestant ministers. A marriage had been so celebrated by Bishop Lynch; the wife had been deserted by the husband; she used him for alimony; when he set up the plea that the marriage was null and void (under "Lord Hardwicke's Act," 26 Geo. II., cap. 33.) The law of the case is argued in a series of articles in the Upper Canada Law Journal (September, October, November, and December, 1867), from which we condense the following statement:—

In favor of the validity of the marriage, it was urged that the free exercise of their religion being guaranteed to Roman Catholics at the capitulation of Quebec,—and marriage being a sacrament,—that matter was subject only to ecclesiastical regulation. On the other hand, the fact that the very first statute of Upper Canada (32 Geo. III. cap. 1) adopted English law as to "civil rights," was adduced to show that Lord Hardwicke's Act then came into force.

The privilege of celebrating marriages, first confined, as under English law, to clergymen of the Episcopal church, has been extended and by successive Upper Canadian enactments to ministers of all religious denominations (in 1798, 1830, 1847). But none of these acts expressly mentions the priests of the church of Rome. For their powers in the matter, we have to refer to the terms of capitulation, the treaty under which Canada was ceded to Great Britain, and subsequent legislation, imperial and colonial.

The terms and treaty referred to, guaranteed the free exercise of the Roman Catholic religion, only "so far as the laws of Great Britain permit" (Treaty of Paris), and "subject to the king's supremacy, declared and established by an act made in the first year of Queen Elizabeth." The "accustomed dues and rights" of the clergy were to be enjoyed, "with respect to such persons only as shall profess the said religion" (Quebec Act, 14 Geo. III., cap. 83). In the debates in Parliament, upon the passing of this act, it was explicitly announced that the position of the Romish church was one of "toleration," the English church being "established." The office of the R. C. Bishop is nowhere recognized in the fundamental statutes. The English law officers of the Crown in 1813, reported that all powers derived from the Pope in virtue of his supremacy lapsed to the English Crown at the conquest. Lower Canadian legal decisions restrict the claims of the clergy to parochial dues and tithes. So that, it is argued by the Law Journal, "the onus is on the R. C. Bishops to show that they have any larger authority than the officers of the other churches in the Province."

"Beautiful for Ever."

A case of romantic villainy is recorded in the English papers, in which Madame Rachel (who professes to make ladies beautiful for ever) and a certain Mrs. Borrowdale are the principal actresses. It seems that the last named lady was possessed of a considerable amount of worldly goods, but she was unfortunately deficient in charms and common sense. Becoming acquainted with Madame Rachel, that would renowned female promised not only to make her "beautiful for ever," but to find her a real no le husband. Of course Mrs. Borrowdale was intensely gratified and presented Madame Rachel with the sum of £1,000 as a small token of her gratitude and esteem In due time she was introduced to a quasi gentleman, whom she was mysteriously given to understand was Lord Ranelagh, who, however, for certain private reasons, did not wish his affection for the gullible widow to be made public at present. Time went on, the supposed nobleman being unremitting in his attentions. Strange to say however, he was constantly in pecuniary difficulties, and although he never himself applied to Mrs. Borrowdale for money, Madame Rachel informed her he was in trouble about money for his Volunteer regiment, and quietly suggested that she should loan him the sum of £1,400—which she at once did. The letters from "Lord Ranelagh" read at the trial were of the most affectionate description. We give following as a specimen:

"I will let you know all when I hear from you, my heart's life. Bear up, my loved one, and I shall be at your feet, those feet that I love, and you may kick your ugly old donkey. Two letters, naughty little pet, and you have not answered one. You are in sorrow about your brother. With fond and devoted love yours till death.—WILLIAM."

At length, after losing about £4,000, Mrs Borrowdale's eyes were opened, and she is now suing Madame Rachel, who has neither provided her with a husband nor made her "beautiful for ever."

THE ROAD TO RED RIVER.

Mr. Dawson, the engineer employed by the New Dominion Government to survey the route from Lake Erie to the Red River, has made his report. He recommends that the line should be opened to the cheapest and most expeditious manner at once. The total distance from Thunder Bay, on Lake Superior, to Fort Garry is 453 miles, comprising 332 miles of navigable water, and 121 miles of land travel. Ninety miles of the latter would be between Fort Garry and the Lake of the Woods, where there is abundant means of transport, and 25 miles between Thunder Bay and Dog Lake—where horses and wagons can be easily provided. The principal part of the land carriage would, therefore, be at each end, with water carriage intermediate. The cost of opening communication with Fort Garry in this manner, is set down at $166,000, over and above the small appropriation made last year. The total trade of the Red River and Hudson's Bay territory is estimated at $450,000 annually; most of which is now done with the State of Minnesota.

COLLISION AND LOSS OF LIFE ON LAKE ERIE.—A despatch from Cleveland of the 21st ult., says:—'The steamer 'Morning Star,' hence for Detroit, collided with the barque 'Conchashill,' 30 miles from here last night, at about 11 o'clock, and both were sunk. The total number of passengers on the steamer were forty, and of crew 30, and crew of barque numbered 23. About 20 persons are missing; the remainder were picked up by the steamer R. N. Rice.' The officers were all saved except one James Martin, clerk of the 'Star,' who was seen to go down with Mrs. Duckett, the wife of Capt. Duckett, a passenger. Among the saved Capt. Harbottle, of Hamilton, Ont. Among the missing are the two Misses Patchen, of Troy, N. Y. One of the boats of the 'Morning Star' is still out, and may contain other survivors.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION.

THE PARTNERSHIP heretofore existing under the title of Graham & Stratton, Printers and Stationers, Peterborough, is this day dissolved by mutual consent. All accounts due by said firm will be settled by Mr. Stratton, to whom all accounts due said firm must be paid.

ALEX. GRAHAM.
JAS. STRATTON.

Peterborough, Nov. 6th, 1867.

THE under-signed hereby begs to return thanks to the public for the liberal patronage they have heretofore extended to the above firm, and as he now will continue to conduct the business both in Printing, Stationery, &c., he trusts that by a strict attention thereto, he will continue to merit a share of public confidence and patronage.

JAMES STRATTON.

Peterboro, Nov. 6, 1867.

NOTICE.

The business having fallen entirely into my hands, and being desirous to have all accounts arranged during the holidays so as to enable me to meet just claims, I submit the payment of all arrears at an early date. I will be found at the Book Store for the purpose of settling claims. All accounts due to the Examiner office and Book Store connected therewith must be paid to me. I have taken this method of informing all interested, as I have heard of parties enquiring to whom should they pay their accounts.

JAMES STRATTON.

POLITICS IN ENGLAND.

As our readers are aware the liberal party in England have been so far successful as to defeat the Disraeli government several times on the Irish Church question, and it was thought that the Tory Premier would have resigned, and placed the affairs of the country in the hands of those who appeared to have the confidence of the majority in the Parliament. But no! Tories are the same everywhere; they cling to the Treasury benches as tenaciously in Britain as in Canada, and will be found actuated by the same principle. Their tactics are the same, and the same unmeaning cry of disloyalty, the crown in danger, is heard from the Premier of Britain, as from the Tory party in the Dominion of Canada.

It is well known that the established church in Ireland has completely failed in the work of its mission in that island, notwithstanding the immense sums that are yearly paid to the ministers of the establishment. In very many cases the livings went into the hands of influential families who appointed almost whom soever they would. Those Rectors, in too many cases, paid no attention to the spiritual interests of the people, and instead of even preaching themselves, as might reasonably be expected, they employed poorly paid curates, who had too much to do and too little to meet their daily necessities.

As to the missionary spirit of the Irish Church, it may truly be said to be a farce. Scarcely an effort is put forth by the ministers of the establishment to enlighten the natives, except by about half a dozen. The majority of them do not visit their parishioners once in five years, and much seldomer the people of other churches, not but that there are pious men in the establishment. These, however, have too much to do to become missionaries to any extent, while others have little to do and are satisfied with their inactivity, so that of late it has been found necessary both in Great Britain and Ireland to send missionaries to awaken the people of the establishment, as may be witnessed in the labors of the Methodist bodies whose churches are composed entirely of converts from the established church.—Notwithstanding this, we are told by the Tories of England that if the established church funds or tithes be interfered with, the crown of Queen Victoria is in danger.

The disloyalty cry is set up. Gladstone and his followers are seeking to overthrow the kingly power, and to establish something hideous in its stead. We do not feel surprised to hear poor fanatics raise the cry of "rebel" in Canada, but we were not prepared to find the Prime Minister of England resorting to the like subterfuge. It may be truly said that if the power of Queen Victoria is so easily a foundation, that the placing of the people of Ireland on the same religious equality endangers it, then we tremble for the future of Great Britain.

"The church in danger" is another of those senseless cries got up by the party in power, and echoed by the interested Bishops, Deans and Rectors to excite the populace, and thus, if possible, enlist bigotry and ignorance on the side of injustice. If the people just think for one moment they will discover the selfishness and baseness of those men who resort to such means to enrich themselves at the price of right. Why do not the dissenters die out? The great body of dissenters receive no state pay. Why is it that Methodists are largely on the increase? and they are supported by voluntaryism. The fact is the great fear of extinction as a sect, is the absence of spirituality amongst the ministers. If they possessed the spirit of their Divine Master, they would find that charity or love, not money, is the principal thing. There can be no question but that the Episcopal Church has done a good work in Ireland in days that are past, but so many have taken upon themselves the same minister for the money consideration connected therewith, that lately the church has been at a standstill. Let, however, the state pay and endowments, as far as possible, be taken away, then the drones will leave the hive, earnest, honest, pious men will take their places, and the church will come to life again. The established church, as is the rich man's church, and if he will not pay for a preached gospel, why ask the poverty-stricken coterie to pay for it for him.

More Blusters at Head Quarters.

The volunteers of the 57 Battalion received orders yesterday to assemble at Peterboro on Tuesday next, to perform their eight days drill. Was there ever anything so stupid as calling out the volunteers at such a season of the year? Already the hay harvest is commenced; by Tuesday the country will be just in the midst of it, and we believe that there has not been so heavy a crop in the e parts before. Farming hands are scarce and obtained with difficulty; wheat harvest will be on before the hay can be settled, and yet in the face of all this the powers that be, call out 400 men next week to drill. If they were asked at the front not a murmur would be heard; every man would be ready to go at a moments notice: but such unheard of mismanagement has never before come to our notice. Why were they not called out two weeks sooner, or even one week? their drill would then have been finished before harvest, and they could have returned home to their work in good time; but to call out 400 men for eight days in the midst of a busy harvest will entail a terrible loss on the general community of not less than $40,000 in this county alone; if the weather should turn out unfavorable three or four times that amount. When will a thoughtless reckless government learn wisdom? If such conduct should continue for another year we venture to predict the resignation of the whole volunteer force in disgust; we can almost see the Minister of Militia laboring for this object.

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR.

The subject of appointing Mr. Howland Lieut.-Governor of Ontario has been freely criticized by the Conservative press. They unanimously agree in protesting against "Yankee Howland" as they used to call him, and in proposing that some other person, especially a Tory, should get the high position. Mr. Howland is now of doubtful politics; has not given sufficient proof of his pliableness; is not of one of the forest families of the province; in fact is anything and everything but the right man. That the sky of transgressors is hard is thus once more verified in Mr. Howland's case. He was all right while he served their purpose, while he was lending his aid to strengthen the Tory clique and weaken the Reform interest. He was all right so long as he could be useful in keeping an unscrupulous Premier in power; not a word was then uttered against him, but no sooner is he spoken of as about to receive the Lieut.-Governorship than he is Yankee Howland again. It was right for Mr. Howland to go over to the Tories—that was all right. It was right, too, for J. A. McDonald to promise Mr. Howland a Governorship as the reward of his treachery to his party; of course this was all right so long as by this means the sweets of office were secured for the Tories a few years longer. No matter how base the sale, the purchase was all right; but the pay day comes and Yankee Howland now demands the stipulated reward of his betraying Reformers, and anon the cry of all wrong is echoed from one end of Ontario to the other. Better far for J. A. to break faith with Mr. Howland, than to have a renegade Reformer occupy so important an office. This is just what Mr Howland deserves; he has not the confidence of his newly made friends and he has lost the confidence of his old ones, but it will afford a little satisfaction to have our high-toned Tory suffer the continual gratings of a rickety Reformer, having climbed thus out of the most honorable position in their gift.

THE JUDGESHIP.

As will be seen in another place the decease of Judge Boucher, leaves room for the appointment of a successor, and as there are more than one aspiring to the office we may expect that now the final effort will be put forth. Robert Dennistoun, Esq., is already Deputy Judge by appointment, and of course has the first claim. Indeed we cannot see how any other can have a shadow of a chance. He has unanimously and warmly supported the government candidates during the past election contest, and we may say for years, is by nature and education a conservative, and hence on the score of politics has the strongest claim on Sir J. A.

Against his public and private character there can be nothing adduced; in this respect he compares favourably with any member of his profession, and as a citizen is highly respected; and when we add to this that the entire members of the legal profession of the County favor his claim, we can hardly think he will be passed over. Besides the office of a County Judge should be open to those who have long been in the county, all things being equal. There would then be something to look forward to as worthy of ambition, and as an inducement to an honorable career and an incentive to excel, which the appointment of favorite outsiders does much to destroy. Mr. Dennistoun has the united good will of the entire county for his getting the appointment; and although differing from him in politics, we believe no appointment will give such general satisfaction.

FENIANISM is dead, or nearly so, if we may judge from the lull in the Fenian camp; we do not hear a word of invading Canada at present. General O'Neil is engaged in a libel suit against the proprietors of the Irish Republican, a paper lately started in the Fenian interest, but which was not entirely obsequeous to O'Neil.—There is one thing certain that they may not be expected while they are making known their plans and place of intended attack. This calm may be the precursor of a dash. It is best to be ready for them, come when they may. This is the surest way to keep them at bay.

Messrs. Grant & York have obtained the contract for building the Lieut. Governor's residence at Toronto, at the sum of nearly $63,000. We are pleased to thus learn that Peterboro contractors have been successful; we need hardly say a repetition of the Ottawa building job in this case. Contractors have a right to proper remuneration for their labor and responsibilities. If the Government value dollar bills as highly as they do pine trees to the poor settlers of the north in Burleigh, we need not fear extravagance in this contract.

MUNICIPAL.

A case before Jas. Edwards and George Young, Esqs., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, during last week, induced us to make a few observations on municipal matters, not because we consider that the magistrates erred or the pathmaster, but because we believe there is some defect either in the By-laws of the municipality of North Monaghan or in the manner of carrying them into effect.

In the cases referred to Mr. Wm. Fowler and W. S. Scott and a son of Mr. Fowler were brought before the magistrates on complaint of the pathmaster, Mr. L. Berry, for refusing to perform statute labour when notified to that effect. From the evidence it appeared that those parties had been accustomed, for several years, to perform their statute labour on the boundary between Monaghan and Cavan. It was found out this year that the boundaries are County roads, and as a consequence that a township has nothing to do with those boundaries. The County Council have divided those County roads into divisions, and the Township Clerk had been notified by the County Clerk, and was requested to fill some kind of blank form. The Clerk filled the blank, but on showing it to the Reeve was informed that it was incorrect. The Clerk then filled out a new road list and sent it to Mr. Berry and on this list were the names of the parties referred to above. They refused to work on Mr. Berry's beat, and in consequence were complained against and fined.

In our opinion the By-law of the County Council is useless, except so far as for the expenditure of moneys appropriated by the County Council, and hence blanks referring to such Divisions cannot be filled by Township Clerks.

The boundary lines of Counties and Townships, being County roads, do not belong to the adjacent townships for statute labour purposes, unless so set apart by By law the same as other beats, hence where there is no such By law—of necessity the labour must be performed on some road wholly in the municipality. If there is no By-law defining the Statute Labour beats the whole municipality forms one beat, and parties can then be compelled to perform their labour wherever the pathmaster directs. When there is a By-law forming the municipality into beats, parties can only be compelled to work in the beat in which they reside.

The Council cannot change any individual from one beat to another by resolution of the Council; it must be done by By-law. No member of the Council has a right to direct the Clerk who shall be on a particular roll or list; and if the Clerk acts on the advice of another he is nevertheless responsible, for such direction can only be taken as advice, and no advice should induce the Clerk to act contrary to the intent or meaning of a known By-law.

We have been informed that it has been customary for members of the Council to give directions to the Clerk on what list certain individuals should be placed. Now, it is needless for us to say that if so it is illegal. The Clerk should make out his list according to the latest By-law in force. The magistrates, of course, gave their decision on the strength of the pathmaster's list, furnished by the Clerk, and of course took it for granted that he had furnished a correct list. The pathmaster warned out the people according to the same list; if it was wrong, more was the pity. If there is no proper By law defining the statute labour beats, there should; if there is one it is the Clerk's guide, and nothing else. If a council wishes to have work performed on a county road they can, by By-law form a part of the township into a beat for that purpose, but such beat will remain so until the By-law expires by effluxion of time or by repealing it. There can be no doubt but that there is something wrong.

THE LATE JUDGE BOUCHER.

Death has been again at work amongst us, and has taken away R. M. Boucher, Esq., County Judge. This has been expected for sometime as many of our readers are aware. Lately, however, he was able to ride out a little, and although there were no hopes of his recovery, yet his decease was not looked for so hurriedly. Put the disease (dropsy) by which he was afflicted rarely lets go the grasp of its victim, especially when in the decline of years. We do not propose to enter into his history, or any of the causes that led to his appointment, but merely content ourselves with enumerating his decease. He always appeared of an agreeable, affable disposition, and was kind and courteous towards all who had business to transact with him. His remains were taken to Seymour for interment yesterday, accompanied out of town by a large number of friends and the general public.

THE SILVER NUISANCE.—The merchants of Toronto have set themselves to work with a will to get rid of the nuisance of taking American Silver at par, and have bound themselves to pay a fine of $50 each for every violation of the agreement. Small American Silver will only be received at 10 per cent discount, and large at 4 per cent. This would now be a favorable opportunity for a similar plan in Peterboro. It is too bad that the whole retail traders of the town should suffer while two or three brokers and dealers in produce only are benefitted. Another trial should be made here, a little unity on this great question would effect much. At present, farmers and purchasers lose in taking and even in paying silver, whereas were it reduced to its value, no one would lose, while the mass would be largely benefitted.

FRANCE & LANNIER'S DRAMATTIC CONSTELLATION, will visit Peterborough, commencing this (Thursday) evening, in the Music Hall. They will remain five nights. The following remarks we clip from the Belleville Intelligencer:—

"The performance of "Arrah na Pogue" by France & Lannier's Dramatic Constellation in Ontario Hall last evening was a decided success. The audience was large and appreciative. The different characters were well sustained, and the whole play worked very smoothly and received the well merited applause of those present. The acting of Mr. Wheelock was particularly good, some thing better than can generally be found with travelling companies. In fact the whole cast was well taken. At the termination of the play Mr. Wheelock was called before the curtain, amid the plaudits of the assembly. They come among us without any great flourish of trumpets and intend to establish their reputation with us by the quality of their performances. We can assure our readers, that they can take their ladies to these performances without the slightest hesitation, as nothing occurs to offend the most fastidious. We wish the troup every success, and propose a crowded house for them to night."

Grammar and Union School.

The semi annual examinations of the above institution were held on Thursday and Friday last, and from the number of visitors who attended during these days, we may safely say that there seems a growing interest in the town in favor of our school. We are not in a position to give a minute detail of the different divisions; all appear to be well attended and to be in a reasonably efficient state of progress.

The Primary Department under Mrs. Flavelle, is very large, 147 being on the roll and about one hundred on an average attendance. She has had Miss Chambers assisting her, but the number is too large to be in one room.

The Third Division, under Mis Borrowman, is in a very healthy state, the room very well attended, and the progress may be under-stood from the fact that there are to be several promotions from her room.

The fourth division (Miss Beatty, Teacher,) is also well conducted; the pupils all appeared happy, and the number of promotions, 14 or 15, indicates a healthy progress.

The fifth division (Miss Cornoochan, Teacher) was the great scene of attraction on Friday afternoon. This division has been well attended during the term just ended. We may safely say that the average will be equal to that of any corresponding period in the history of the school, and the progress equal to that during any preceding term. At the close of the regular examination several of the young ladies of the senior class read articles from a "Literary Journal," which would do credit to the pupils of any institution. The idea of a "Literary Journal" originated with Miss Carnochan. The subjects were named by her on the Friday evening previous, and had to be written in addition to the regular course of studies; we are also enabled to say that the language, arrangement, style, etc., were verified to be entirely original before they could gain a place in the "Journal." The readings of the composition were above average, and although they occupied an extra hour, till 5 o'clock, there appeared no uneasiness on the part of the crowd of visitors that were in the room. At the close the pupils presented Miss Carnochan with an address and a very neat writing desk. She has resigned her situation as Teacher. We hope the Board may be able to obtain the services of an equally efficient one. We intend to give some leaves of the "Literary Journal" next week if we can procure a copy of it.

The boys' departments as a whole are reasonably well conducted, and we believe we may safely say that a period of progress has commenced under the management of Mr. Dixon, Principal, that will not end until the Peterboro Grammar and Union School shall be second to no other similarly situated school in the Province of Ontario.

BIBLE CHRISTIAN.

The anniversary services of the Sabbath School in connection with the Bible Christian Church came off on Sunday and Monday last, and from what we can learn, were a decided success. The funds of the school are in a satisfactory state, and the attendance is reported as very good. The Tea on Monday evening was largely attended both by parents and children, and an evident interest in the Sabbath School manifested. The Rev. Mr. Gilmour and Mr. Webber of Cobourg delivered addresses on the occasion, and an excellent choir added materially to the pleasantness of the services.

PRESENTATION.

Evans Ingram, Esq., on behalf of the members of the Bible Christian Church here, at the close of the Anniversary services of the Sabbath School, in a few well-merited words of praise of the Rev. Mr. Caudle's earnest labors for the advancement of truth and the extension of christian feeling and harmony amongst his people, presented him with a purse containing about $50. Mr. Caudle, after a stay of three years in Peterboro, is about to remove to another field of labor, and it must be cheering to have such a tangible token of the appreciation of his christian ministry. We learn too, that the Orangemen of Peterboro gave him a present of $20 the same day. The idea of giving a free will offering to ministers on the occasion of their removal is a good one. At such periods there are extra expenditures, not called for at other times, and as is to well known, ministers are rarely, if ever, paid in proportion to their labors and necessities; too many of them having to labor with their own hands to supply the people's lack of care towards them. A timely offering like the present is rarely felt by the people, and tends to encourage the faithful pastor. Mr. Caudle takes with him the good will of the whole church and of the community generally. His incessant labors in the cause of temperance, Sabbath schools and every good work will not soon be forgotten.

Since writing the above, we learn that the British Templars of this town presented him with three costly volumes of a work on Theology.

BAPTIST.—The members of the Baptist Church, Lakefield, lately presented their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Stock, with a sum of money, between $30 and $40. Mr. Stock is but lately come to Peterboro and vicinity to labor, and this token of their early sympathy with him we may take as a token for good. While the people partake of spiritual things it is not too much to extend to the pastor of the temporal things that are abundantly bestowed on the people by the Great Giver of all good.

CORRESPONDENCE.—We have received two communications from the Butchers on the subject of the stalls, and especially on the subject of refusing a lease. They declare most strongly that Mr. McFaddin never offered a lease to any of them. Mr. Webber says that Mr. McFadden offered him $50 for his stall, and when requested to give $1 to make the bargain sure, stepped off laughing. We do not publish the communications, as we feel satisfied by not doing so we will prevent a certain personalities, as is too often the case in such matters.

GRAND ORANGE LODGE—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—The following are the names of the officers elected at this session of the Grand Orange Lodge lately held in Halifax: Grand Master, Hon. J. H. Cameron, Toronto; Deputy Grand Master, D'Arcy Boulton, Barrie; Grand Treasurer, William Anderson, Mountain View; Grand Secretary, Andrew Fleming, Toronto; Grand Lecturer, J. R. Robertson, Toronto; Grand Director of Ceremonies, Wm. White, Tweed; Sir Herald Knight at Arms, Alexander Barr, Cobourg.

A BROOK'S BUSH GANG.

A MAN BEATEN TILL LIFE IS DESPAIRED OF.

For some time the outskirts of the town, known as the swamp, has been infested with nests of unclean birds that have caused no common disturbance to the immediate neighborhood, but are a scourge to the town, and especially to those miserable fools that come within their meshes. On Saturday night, however, they managed to bring matters to a point that forces the authorities to do something to rid the town of those scourges and curse of the place. A man named Henry Nethery, who it is to be feared was no green horn in their mysteries, came into town on business on Saturday, and, forgetting his mission got into the society of Mary Nix, a swamp angel of the most abandoned cast from appearance, and during the night Nethery was so inhumanly cut and beaten as to render little hope of his life. From the evidence before the magistrates, it appears that Nethery, Mary Nix, Henry Simpson, Jim Carr and Pill Higgins went to Jerrows about one o'clock and waked him up and got some cider (?) to drink. While there Jerrow learned that they were going to beat some one and fearing it might take place at his house, got the party away. Nix and Nethery went away together towards Mr. Patterson's tannery, and on the morning of Sunday, Nethery was found there covered with blood and almost dead. There are several cuts on his head, face and neck. Two stones were found near him covered with blood, and the wood-pile near him was smeared with blood and hair. Evidence points strongly to Higgins as the guilty party and Nix as accomplice.

Henry Sothais, a Frenchman, saw Higgins endeavoring to get the woman Nix to take off her dress which was covered with blood, and heard him say that if she did not it would be the means of getting them taken up. Higgins was also heard threatening that he would knock her if ever she told.

Several charges of vagrancy, being a nuisance, threatening to burn the houses of parties near their swamp residences if they said a word, and also of robbery are laid against them. Let us hope that enough will be proven to send them out of this for their natural lives. Our authorities are too lax in dealing with those miserable wretches; better far to send them up to jail and keep them there than to have at large a curse to many and cause of alarm to others who may be under the necessity to pass by where they infest.

Henry Simpson, Jim Kerr and Ed Higgins are remanded till Monday, and Mary Nix, as witness. Pete Cranston, Ann Brennan, Mary Fell, Jane Smiley and Joe Smiley are committed for vagrancy. Nothing is recovering.

THE NEW DOMINION MONTHLY, for July, has been received. The following are the contents:—The Crucible; Castles in the Air, poetry; The Seal-fishery of Newfoundland; She said Nay, poetry; Chronicles of a Canadian Family; Song; Admiral Blake; Ants, But Thou, poetry; Marie Howieson; The Adventures of Donald McDougal; The Forest, poetry; Salem Witchcraft; The Rationale of Recreation; Five o'Clock in the Morning, music; Early Recollections; Little Lu; My Tea Biscuits; Flowers for Windows Selected Recipes; The Temple of Minerchi (Illustrated); Montreal in the Olden Time.

This is an excellent Periodical for family reading, and comes so cheap that every one may have a number.

DOMINION DAY.—Yesterday was a general holiday, and passed off very quietly. All that could get out of town went to different places for amusement. The greater number formed themselves into pic-nic parties and went to Mud Lake; others went to Lakefield to the Sabbath School Anniversary and to the Dedication of the new Orange Lodge, while another class of citizens had a grand pic-nic in Mr Wallace's Grove, so that during the greater part of the day all was quiet here.

A man named James Scott, from Peterboro, is in custody in Belleville on the charge of removing a rail off the Grand Trunk with intent to throw the train off. He was found concealed in the grass near the scene.

We have been shown the result of an assay by H. White, Esq., of Toronto, of a piece of the rock from the Galway Mine, showing the large result of $418 per ton in silver, besides a quantity of antimony.

A Fenian Letter to a Travelling Confederate, Post-marked, Detroit, June 9th.

DETROIT, June 9th.

McH. came to day, and you will get this on the 11th at T——. You have done well so far. Since Mc saw you 10 days ago at 7 he has been closely watched, and came near arrest at H. Jack and his party are off. Erie doing well. Have all things ready in time. Write from M. and after you cross.

McN and party were here at meeting on the 1st, and all is well. They have gone West and will be ready at the time. There will be fully 20,000 in this division, which is twice what was expected. They will be entire y unprepared for the attack here, and with all their forces hundreds of miles away, they will have a good time in checking our march to the designated point—and a very good time there. Be cautious, and all is well—your disguise is so perfect that you can do all you wish.

New York City will do its duty, and so will Nos. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 9 and 10. The tooth picks are in store as well as the pebbles and saltpetre. Transportation is perfect. Our friend across the river thinks he will be "turned out" if he is detected! I guess he will, and soon too. It looks now as though there would not be opposition enough at this end to make it interesting. If you see the "Queen' Own" send them up here for our amusement.

Our companies here are drilling well—also at Port City, Flint and 39 other places. All is sure and faithful. Write and do all as agreed.

HES——

I have no stamps to put on, and to go and get one would delay it one day, as the mail man will be here soon to get letters.

THE FENIAN RAID.

Brighton, June 23.

The following in an extract of a letter received last night by a gentleman in Brighton, dated Oswego, June 19, 1868:—Dear Father, You may think it strange at receiving another letter so soon, but I told you in my last that there was something I wished you to know. I now take the liberty of telling you, and that is, that there will be a Fenian raid made on Canada at some place between Picton and Cobourg, and as near as I can learn, the place they intend to land is at Brighton. I have my information from a young man who holds a high position in the Fenian army. The time will be between now and the fourth of July. I think you had better take mother and the family back into the country, and where they will be safe, for just as sure as you are living there will be a raid and that before long.

(Signed) Your affectionate,
DAUGHTER.

The Government and the Catholic University.

(From the Economist.)

The discussion in the House of Commons on Tuesday night concerning the character of the government proposals with respect to Ireland is not creditable to the candour of the Government, but is of a character to excite amazement in all who have paid any close attention to the Irish debates of the session, and to the correspondence between Lord Mayo and the Roman Catholic Bishops as to the question of the Irish University. The situation is intelligible enough. Mr. Disraeli wishes to enjoy the advantage in the coming election of appearing to resist concessions which the Liberals are prepared to make to the Roman Catholics of Ireland. But in order to enjoy this advantage at all, he must, if he can, and as far as he can clear himself from the imputation of having offered concessions to Roman Catholicism in Ireland which the Liberals hold it to be quite inconsistent with their own principles to admit. The chief impediment to this is the line openly taken by the Government in the great debate, in which they intimated their hope that they were on the eve of a policy which would "end the sorrows of effete centuries," and the tangible proposition by which these general announcements were followed up,—to give State pensions to a Roman Catholic University at once postponing till a later period the proposal which they entertained to endow Roman Catholic Colleges, and yet to emancipate this denominational institution so paid by the State entirely from State control. In March, it was quite conceivable that the general line in which the Government spoke of obtaining ecclesiastical revenues by "levelling up," compare, for instance, the remarkable hint thrown out by Lord Stanley, that the idea of merely re-bestowing the endowments of the Irish Church was not likely "to find much favor" with the House of Commons, nor, therefore, one would suppose with the Government who could scarcely intend deliberately to propose what they knew would not "find much favour" in the House of Commons—would constitute the Catholics and detachment from Mr. Gladstone's party. Mr. Disraeli asked of elevating "the status" of the Catholic clergy, republic ed warmly any wish to better their independence by State stipends, but declared that their status might be raised without making them dependent on the State, and that he was on the eve of finding out how to manage this so as to "heal the sorrows of effete centuries." How he proposed to manage it, Lord Stanley's hint that the House of Commons could never be expected to favour the re-modelling of the Protestant endowments by the Protestant Church, and Mr. Disraeli's own hint that property once devoted to spiritual uses, should never be applied to any but spiritual uses, Lord Mayo's wish for equality by levelling up, and the practical proposal to give State money to an independent denominational University, together shadowed forth generation. What it did propose to do was a very different thing—to enlarge the governing body of the Queen's University, so that Catholics might have a guarantee for the impartiality on all question of degrees, and then to affiliate the body now known as the Catholic University as a subordinate college, entitled to send up its students to compete for the degrees and scholarships of the enlarged University on a perfect equality with the Protestants students sent up by the other colleges. But no scholarship, no distinction of any kind, would have been conferred, to which theological conditions had in any way been attached. Any distinction and any scholarship gained by any Catholic student on the proposed system might equally have been gained by any Protestant student if he had shown equal intellectual capacity. The Government of Lord Russell proposed to allow Roman Catholic students to come from a college where they had received a denominational education to compete on equal terms with the non Catholic students who had come from other colleges of a denominational or otherwise, as they might be—just as they do in the London University—but the Government of Lord Russell never proposed to devote a single shilling to the support of any sectarian teach; and moreover it kept in its own hands the power to nominate members of the Senate, a power to that the secular learning for the support of which they did propose to pay, should be properly and accurately tested by the University. Mr. Disraeli's Government proposed, in March last, a measure in which both these principles were openly neglected. It proposed to support Roman Catholic teaching and Roman Catholic learning, "qua" Roman Catholic by endowments from the State. It proposed also, ostensibly proposed, to give up all State control over the character of the learning, for the support of which it proposed to make the State pay. After the first creation of the new denomination al University it was to be cut adrift from the State (except as regards means—and be allowed to teach, and examine, and confer degrees, exclusively on its own principles, without any sort of interference by the Government to satisfy itself that the teaching was good and sound, the learning sound learning, and the degrees fairly and worthily conferred.

Struggle and writhe as it will, the Government of Mr. Disraeli cannot relieve itself from the responsibility of having to do with educating the principle of paying Roman Catholic teachers and helping Roman Catholic learning as such,—and this, moreover, without even insisting that the teaching and learning so assisted should be inspected and approved by officers of its own appointment. Mr. Disraeli proposed deliberately to "elevate" Irish Roman Catholicism in a manner to which all true Liberals and many Roman Catholics themselves must have objected. It is impossible for him now to claim, though it is apparently not impossible for him to demand, the hearty support of the Liberal Protestant feeling against the Liberals, on the ground that they are conceding to Roman Catholic feeling something much more just and much more tenable.

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING.—The New York World draws attention to the following noteworthy facts:—In Russia money is at 12 per cent. discount, in Italy 15 per cent., Turkey 20 per cent, the United States 40 per cent., and in Brazil 50 per cent. discount. Thus the nation I ere it even of the "sick man of Europe" is better than that of the "Great Republic of the West." In the matter of taxes the latter is equally striking. Taxation in France amounts to $7 97 per capita, in Great Britain $10 82 per capita, and in the United States $16 00 per capita. Persons contemplating to emigrate from the old world, would do well to bear this facts in mind, and also to remember that in Canada the taxation is much less than in any of the countries named.

HUMAN RELIGIONS.—The Director of the Statistical Department at Berlin, Germany, classifies the population of the earth according to creed, as follows: The whole population of the world is estimated at one billion two hundred thousand of whom Christs constitute 25.77 per cent.; Jews, 0.38 per cent.; Asiatic religions, 40.15 per cent; Mohammedans, 12 31 per cent; Pagan, 25 29 per cent. The three hundred and sixty-five millions of Christians be divided as follows: Roman Catholics, 50.7 per cent; Protestants, 22 6 per cent.; Greek church, 22 7 per cent.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The rumours about the resignation or removal of Secretary McCulloch have subsided, though certain parties are still endeavouring to effect a change in the treasury department.

NEW YORK, June 29.—The Tribune's special says: Delegates from the West to New York Convention have arrived here.—Mr. Montgomery of them express decided preference for Pendleton as the candidate.—Southern delegates are in favour of President Johnson.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 27.—The express train on the Jeffersonville, leaving Madison this morning was thrown from the track near Columbus, Indiana. Several persons were severely injured.

JACKSON, Miss., June 27.—The Democrats die majority, as far as heard from, is 15,000

NASHVILLE TENN., June 27.—A personal difficulty between John B. Brownlow, of the Knoxville Whig, and Mr. Kirby, of the Press, took place on Thursday afternoon.—Brownlow tried to shoot Kirby but his pistol snapped without hurting anybody.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Rumors are afloat that the steamer Kalamazoo plying between St Joseph and Kalamazoo Michigan, sunk on the 19th. Six persons, all on board, were lost.

THE STATUTES OF ONTARIO.—"A Magistrate" in the Hamilton Spectator wants to know what authority the Queen's Printer has for demanding 50 cents from a magistrate for a copy of the statutes of Ontario. "I learn that the Clerk of the County Council has, at last received a supply to be distributed amongst the magistrates of the county, but only on receipt of 50 cents for each copy, which is he required to account for to the Queen's Printer. Upon referring to the Acts of last session, I find that the Legislature made an appropriation of not less than $7,500 for the printing and distribution of these Statutes. I find nothing to warrant the exaction of this most unreasonable demand."

THE LIEUT. GOVERNOR OF ONTARIO.—We have reason to know that the Hon. Wm Howland was on Saturday gazetted as Lieut-Governor of this province. Mr. Howland owes his high honor to his indomitable pluck; he stuck to the Hon. Sir John A Macdonald, in spite of all the remonstrances of his political friends, and in return Sir John stuck to him; and so in spite of the opposition of some of the Cabinet. Sir John made him Lieut.-Governor.—Whig.

It is rumored in France, that in case of a war with Prussia, the neutrality of Italy will be rewarded by the withdrawal from Rome of the French troops, and by carte blanche being given Victor Emmanuel to complete the unification of his kingdom.

THE MURDER AT DELAWARE.—Delaware, June 17.—The prisoner Elizabeth Jones having been kept at the residence of the Constable, John Paraller, from Friday till yesterday, he being continually with her, gained her confidence, and on their way to London yesterday she made a full and voluntary confession of the murder of her cousin, Mary Jones, having committed the deed without the assistance of any one whatever. She states that her father had no hand in the affair till after the deed was committed.

A CLEVER FRAUD.—It is generally asserted now, and with apparent truth, that the New York Herald had no correspondent in Abyssinia at all, and that the despatches published in that paper, purporting to be from its "own correspondent" were fabricated in the Herald office New York. They were so well written and generally came so near the truth that they deceived almost every one.

It is said that Count Bismarck's disease is the result of the use of intoxicating drinks, to which he had recourse to procure sleep after his every day's protracted and exciting labors.

Frauds of a gigantic character have been discovered in the second auditor's bureau at Washington.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

THE ERIE CANAL.—This Canal is 350 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1864 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at the result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds spitting, bruises, rheumatism, toothache, chilblains, &c, is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the lower have been neglected, but we find there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else hereto re to raise the condition and relieve the suffering of the lower. Those who will not use it will be the more, then being the sufferers to avoid both use "Dr Ley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

"Jerusalem"—Exactly so—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he fell down in the morning he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt queer at night, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons can say better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By applying and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, eruptions of extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, heaviness of the belly, with fetid or slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, tongue coated, sleep, fainting, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, fightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction in any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in from twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OSWEGO, Ind., 6th June, 1859.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous taint in my blood, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. It manifested it burst out in blains on my ha ds and nose; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and sore with the sores, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disease grew worse. At length I was induced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your pamphlet that any thing you made would be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it all it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month and used almost three bottles. Now my health and skin seem began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I look on it to be one of the agencies of the age, and remain ever gratefully,

Yours,
ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Blagworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1868, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which had resisted his skill for years, by perseverring use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Dry Sore by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas with it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Zebulon Shook of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous sw lling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I must cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative and the most powerful remedy for which to employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous cloth, etc. I have cured many leucorrhœa cases of Long standing, by, and none where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derange ments."

Edward S. Marrow, of Sanbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor is one of the females in my family, which had baffled all the remedies we could employ, but at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla, (her physician th ught nothing but extirpation could afford relief but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual). After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 27th August, 1859.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Diseases, three of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were threatening his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in two weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla the ulcers healed and he is well again but of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been tortured for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured in only by my Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its effects, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it here are not unexpected.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 4th July 1 59.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle relieved me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. BEAM.

Jules Y. Gelchell of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than deranged state of the Liver. My beloved pastor the Rev. Mr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. I try the blessing, and that cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Scirrhus, Cancer, Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cure of these frightful maladies has been effected by the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affects as have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disease to which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in Advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has proved all the virtues that it did here when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they are furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

J. H GIBSON, M.D., Dunham, C. E.
C. E. COTTON, M.D., Cowansville

JACOB'S RHEUHATIC LIQUID

Is an internal as well as an external remedy, and is the only one that always gives entire satisfaction, and all who once use it will never consent to change it for any other.

We have not space to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by thousands who have used it, and voluntarily certify to its merits. Buy a bottle and satisfy yourself that it is the best remedy ever offered.

THE BEST Tonic Hair Dressing ever discovered. It effectually cleanses the scalp, prevents the Hair from falling or turning prematurely gray and when the follicles and glands are not destroyed, will produce a new and luxuriant growth of hair where it has already disappeared.

It is the cheapest as well as the best, being only 25 cents for a large bottle. Buy it, try it, you'll like it and recommend it to your friends.

Proprietor of the

OTTAWA CANCER INFIRMARY,

Sparks street & Maria street, Ottawa, C.W.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eyelid or elsewhere, or small warts or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y & C—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c, &c, and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c, gradually left me, and I am hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

FLOWERS.

BY MISS F. A. S.

Sweet and fair in themselves, and fragrant with poetic associations, are the flowers, and chiefly the frail, fair flowers of spring. As the sun grows warm, we look for them, on the hillsides, in sheltered nooks and in sunny garden spots. The snowdrop, the herald of flower wreathed spring, expands its blossoms amidst the snows and bitter winds of the north and leads thought to the verdant hours to come. How sweet to inhale the balmy breath of morn, rendered doubly fragrant by the perfume of the flowers; they speak in silent but all powerful tones, in every clime of the earth. The child wanders gaily through the woodland culling its little hands full of blossoms, rejoicing in their beauty, and feeling a something like pain in sorrow for them, and a voice whispering words of love and fear as she kisses the dewy-wood leaves. The poor laborer, whose hands have toiled in weariness all day, and whose mind has not risen above the commonplace duties of the burthen-turned his footsteps homeward as the shades of evening approach. He turns aside from his path to gather a few flowers—roses or violets it may be—how the dull expression of his face changes it lights up with pleasure; he gazes now upon the lovely little blossoms with with a new feeling; he sees a beauty in the landscape and in the setting sun that was unnoticed before, and his thoughts are carried upward from nature to nature's God. The traveller, far from home, where no kind voice falls upon his ear, in the land of the stranger, depressed by care, or it may be wearied with trade or speculation, he sees a little spray or perhaps he knows the perfume of some far distant flower of his boyhood days, is wafted to him, and how rapidly he is carried back to those bygone hours; memory recals the old familiar garden and the loved ones of his father's home; he awakens to new impulses gladdened, refreshed by the passing scent of a tiny flower. Beautiful flowers! the sleepy sunshine, the soft and gentle showers, the clouds that float in the azure depths of heaven, the winds that roam over hill and dale and find no home, and the crystal dewdrops, all wait upon thee, and are ever pressing above and around thee, as if to tell thee how they rejoice to minister unto perfect bloom. They gather up the dew of a few summer nights and the sunshine of a few summer days, when the wind that so lately gently caressed them scatters their leafs abroad and they are gone forever, but they have performed their mission though short their life. How many young hearts have grown glad with a deeper light as they gaze upon them; how many cold hearts have been warmed with a glow they could not refuse? souls that were weary and worn have thought anew of the never fading bloom and beauty of the garden of God. In every little flower that grows we see beauty and perfectness that shows the divine workmanship and the skill of His unmistable pencil in the varied hues of each little leaf; they have kindred and associations with all that is best within us; they speak to our hearts in a language that the heart alone can understand, drawing the affections and lifting the soul from the creature to the Creator, weaving the transitoryness of a earthly beauty, as above and so far from that home where the "flowers immortal bloom."

Misfortunes of the Stuart Family.

BY MISS A. R.

It awakens a feeling of sadness within us when we look back and contemplate the misfortunes through which the Stuart family has gone. I can fully realize the deep regret with which they must have been familiar when the ancient Stuart line—the noble Stuart line, I think I can safely say—had to part with the crown which so long had adorned the heads of that noble race of people; they fought bravely for their rights and maintained them through many trying vicissitudes. I often look back and admire, with enthusiasm, the noble and warlike Bruce and Wallace; had it not been for these two heroes of Scottish history, Scotland would have been long before attached to the English crown; I think nothing can surpass the daring valor of those two brave men. Sir William Wallace being deeply wronged, took up the sword for his country when it on all sides by the English. Gathering a few of Scotland's bravest men together, he marched along carrying victory with him wherever he went; it was not long before the victorious Wallace had swept everything before him, and he would doubtless have been on the King of Scotland had he not been betrayed by a false friend, Sir John Mountfith, but there was another brave spirit to take up Scotland's cause, this was the noble Bruce who gained the battle of Bannockburn over the English, but although Scotland was saved by those brave men it had to surrender after a time to the English.

From the marriage of Margory Bruce daughter of the great Robert with Walter, the Steward of Scotland, sprang the line of Stuart Monarchs. Their son Robert II. was the first of the famous but unhappy race. During his reign was fought the battle of Otery Chace, between the Percies and the Douglases, Robert II died in 1390. His son then assumed the sceptre under the name of Robert III. James the son of Robert, being on his way to France, was taken prisoner by the English and kept in prison for 19 years. Although a captive in England James I. had acquired such a knowledge of the English laws as were of great use to him when he returned to Scotland to wear the crown. This prince was barely murdered by a band of conspirators, who burst into the monastry of Blackfriars, at Perth, 1437. His son James II. was only six years old when his father died. During his minority, the house of Douglas threatened to overthrow the throne of the Stuarts, and to prevent this James II. nearly murdered the Earl, after inviting him to join him at supper—James III. was only 8 years old when his father died, he was sickly and imbecile, and left the government of his country too much to favorites, the prince was shocked after doing his duty to the field of battle. James IV. now ascended the throne, this prince married Margaret, eldest daughter of Henry III. It was in this reign that the battle of Flodden was fought between the Scots and English. The Scots were totally defeated, and James amongst the slain. James V. his son, succeeded, he married Mary of Guise because she was a Romanist, and from this marriage was born the celebrated Mary Queen of Scots. At the age of six she was sent to France and placed in the stately convent of beautiful France, although she required every accomplishment, yet she contracted prejudices which her occasioned great misfortunes as a Queen. She married at a early age the Dauphin of France, and lived in the gay country of Bourbon until the death of her husband in 1560, this dissolved the only bond of union that remained between Scotland and France, she left France with the utmost regret. After embarking she kept her eyes fixed on the coast till darkness concealed it from her view. She then ordered a couch to be spread on the deck and the weather proved favorable, in the morning she still saw the distant coast, and exclaimed, "Farewell France, beloved country. I shall never see thee more." Mary was now solicited in marriage by many of the princes in Europe, but rejecting them all, she at length fixed her affections on Henry Stuart, son of Earl of Essex, a young nobleman of weak understanding, her subjects were opposed to the match, but she married him in direct opposition to Elizabeth, the death of her husband was caused by violence, some supposing it to be done under the direction of a favourite of the Queen's, named Bothwell this man she married on the 15th of May 1867.

Bothwell did not long enjoy his new dignity; the nobles raised an army and marched to meet Bothwell On a day appointed a battle was fought which terminated in favor of the nobles, and the King and Queen taken prisoners. The King was imprisoned for ten years, at which time he died; the Queen was confined in the castle of Lochleven, but she was afterwards freed by one George Douglas. On receiving notice of her escape, her friends ran to arms, and in a few days her court was filled with a splendid train of nobles whose followers constituted an army of six thousand men. During the engagement which followed, Mary stood on a hill and beheld all that passed with a degree of emotion which could scarcely be described. When she saw the army, which was her last hope, thrown into irretrievable confusion, her spirit completely sunk. In the utmost consternation she commenced her flight, and stopped not till she reached Galloway. She crossed the Solway frith, and on her arrival at Carlisle penned a letter to Queen Elizabeth representing her distress, and imploring her assistance. The counsel of Elizabeth was anything but favourable; Mary demanded a personal interview with Elizabeth, but she was refused; in order to prevent her royal kinswomans escape, Elizabeth removed her to Bolton, in Lancashire. Meanwhile the fatal axe was dropping nearer the neck of the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots. At last a conspiracy against Queen Elizabeth was discovered, and Mary was accused of taking part in it. The first step was taken at Fotheringay on the 12th October, when a letter was placed in Mary's hand from Elizabeth, charging her with a share in Babington's plot. Mary defended herself as best she could, declaring that she had no hand in this plot, and said that her only desire was to regain her freedom. The only evidence against her was that of her secretaries, Kane and Curle, who lay in close custody, and who in spite of the Scottish Queen's demands were never confronted. All this was cruel and harsh; her request for the aid of a counsel for a trial in full parliament, for an interview with Elizabeth, all met a cold refusal. On the 12th October, in the Star Chamber at Westminster, sentence of death was pronounced. At last after many pretensions, Elizabeth signed the death warrant of Mary Queen of Scots. Alas, that an English Queen could stoop so low. The warrant was at once sent to Fotheringay castle. Mary heard this solemn news with the utmost composure, and calmly said the soul is unworthy the joys of heaven which repines because the body must endure the stroke of the executioner. Then laying her hand on a bible which lapp and to be near her, she solemnly protested her innocence of Babington's conspiracy against Elizabeth's life. Carefully robed in black satin and lawn, with a crucifix Mary of Scotland walked calmly about 8 o'clock on a winters morning into the hall of Fotheringay, where a low black scaffold was erected. After a tearful parting from her old steward, Sir Robert Melville, a gold laced kerchief was bound upon her eyes by her maid, and she bowed her neck on the fatal block. The poet Bell in the following verse has well described the troubles and anxiety from which even royalty is not free. Describing her death, he says:—

Beside the block a sullen headsman stood,
And gleam'd the broad axe in his hand, that soon must drip with blood,
With silver and steady step there came a lady
through the hall,
And breathless silence chain'd the lips and touched the heart of all.
I knew that grief had decked it out an offering for the tomb,
Alas, the change! she placed her foot upon a little throne,
And on the scaffold now she stood—beside the block alone
The little dog that licks her hand—the last of all the crowd,
Who seemed the selves beneath her glance,
and round her form appeared,
Her neck is bared—the blow is struck—the soul is passed away.
The bright, the bright, the beautiful, is now a bleeding piece of clay.
The dog is moaning piteously, and as it gurgles over,
Laps the warm blood that trickling runs unheeded to the floor.
The blood of beauty, wealth and power, the purest blood of a queen,
The noblest of the Stuart race, the fairest ear is borne.

(Then weigh against a grain of sand,
Lapped by a dog; Go think of it in silence and alone.
Then weigh against a grain of sand the glories of a throne.

Time will not permit to do more than glance at the further misfortunes of the Stuart family. James II. of Scotland, and I. of England, was the son of Mary Queen of Scots, and from him was descended James the pretender. It was in the reign of George I. that James the Pretender lived, £100,000 was offered for his head. The pretender was in France and had received a promise from the King of France that he would assist him in his war against England, but the death of Louis XIV. blasted all his hopes. However, he raised an army, and flattered himself that he would gain the throne, but on the approach of the English army, he embarked for France, leaving his army to its fate.

The Earl of Derwentwater and Lord Kenmur suffered death, and the estate of several were confiscated. It was in the reign of George II. that the exiled Stuarts made a bold push for the throne. Charles Edward, the young pretender, the bonnie Prince Charlie, who had high hopes. He came with seven officers to conquer a great empire. At the head of 700 canssmen he commenced a southern march; his little army swelled to 1,000 men. If Charles had then passed on to London, the throne of the Guelphs might have fallen. But his ranks were thin and six weeks passed before he could muster 5,000 men. Entering England by the western border he took Carlisle in three days. Several skirmishes took place; the last battle was fought at Culloden Moore in 1748, in which Charles Stuart was defeated, and was under the necessity of fleing to the mountains. A reward of £30,000 was offered for his head Charles Edward passed his latter days in Rome. He died of apoplexy in 1788, and 19 years later died; his brother Henry, Cardinal of York, the last male heir of the Stuart line.

SYMMETRY GONE MAD.—A story is told of old Lord Selkirk in the days when symmetrical arrangement was considered the acme of gardening. One day he found a boy shut up in a summer house at the end of a terrace at St. Mary's Isle, and was informed by his gardener that it was for stealing apples. On reaching the other end of the terrace, where there was another summer house, Selkirk beheld the gardener's son looking dolefully out of the window. "Eh, John, what is this? Has your boy been stealing too?" "Na, na, my lord," was the answer, "I just put him in for seemetry.

A gentleman having got out of all patience with one of his servants, an Irishman, called him in, and after giving him a sound scolding, wound up with the stereotyped phrase, "Now go at part." The servant stood scratching his head for a moment, and then said, with a look of much concern, "Sorry am I that we must part, yer honor; but if we must, may I make so bould as to ask where yer honor's going?"

A few years since, at the celebration of a national anniversary, a poor pedlar, who was present, being called upon for a toast, offered the following: "Here's health to poverty; it strike to a man who has all his friends desert him."

HEAVENLY LIGHT.

It was a very sad day to Mrs. Graham, and to Harry Graham too, when the doctor told them that little Joe would never again see their faces, or look upon the beautiful flowers which Harry loved to bring him every morning, for he was blind. He had been ill for a long time, and at last, when his eyes had been affected by the disease, he had been kept in a dark room in the hope that they might be cured; but when he did get well, his sight was gone.

Now Harry thought he could not do too much for his little blind brother. His father was dead, and his mother took in washing to support the family, so Harry had to work too. He brought all the water and wood which his mother used, and went for the clothes and took them home again. But still he found time to take care of Joe. He picked up some little wheels which some one had thrown away, and made a wagon, upon which he placed a basket for his brother to sit, and no king upon his throne was ever half so happy as the little blind boy when his brother drew him about in this rude wagon. It was a good deal of trouble to make, but when it was finished, Harry was never seen carrying the cloth a backwards and forwards from his mother's customers without the little wagon and Joe.

He also picked all the flowers he could find for his little brother, and told him the colors, and said, "You can smell them, Joe, though you do not see them."

And when the birds sang, Harry would say, "Aren't you glad you can hear the birds, Joe? I am sure I would rather hear them, than see them without hearing them."

Every evening Mrs. Graham taught Harry to read, and soon he could read well enough to read for Joe. Many were the books he read to him, for many of the kind people in the vill ge were interested in the boys, and gave or lent them books. And, above all, he read to him from the best of books—from the Bible, which is the word of the living God.

Harry went to Sunday school too, and as Joe grew old enough, he loved to repeat to him the lessons he had learnt there.—One Sunday a person he came running, full of eagerness, to tell Joe something he had learned.

"O," he exclaimed, "my teacher says that you will always be blind, that you will see in heaven; and she says, if you love Jesus now that he will make you happier than if you saw everything in the world. Mother, will you find me the verse that says Jesus is the light of heaven?"

Mrs. Graham found it, and Harry read; "And the city had no need of the sun; neither of the moon to shine upon it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." The Lamb means Jesus, said Harry; "my teacher says if you love Him now, He will make so happy that it will be like having heaven-ly light even in this world.

The poor blind boy did learn to love Jesus, and he walked in the heavenly light for many years, until Jesus took him to enjoy it more perfectly in His glorious home above.

BE PERSONAL.

When I first took a Sunday school class I feared to be personal with my pupils, to talk pointedly to each scholar before the rest. My teacher never talked to me thus, and I was afraid of offending by too close questions and too practical application of the truth. I soon found such sowing brought forth little fruit. The scholars gained in general knowledge, but they did not feel "that is meant for me." They did not turn to Christ.

One day after prayerful consideration of the subject, I said "Boys, it is no use for us to be afraid of each other; I came here to try and show you the way to heaven; you come to learn it, do you not? Then we must get so that we can talk as naturally about Christ and our own hearts as about our studies or our plays. So do not be afraid of my close questions. You will have to get used to them, but they won't hurt you; you may question me too."

At first, some answered promptly when asked some questions; others blushed, and turned their heads away. But ere long the restraint wore off, and nearly all could talk easily. The means, I trust, though humble, were blest. Soon my heart was cheered by a gracious awakening among my dear pupils. Before a year had passed nearly all were rejoicing in a Savior's love. Now no questions could be to close. A new scholar came into the class who was not used to such teaching, and did not like it. After a few Sabbaths he said to a classmate, "I do not like so many questions about myself; I do not like to answer them. What shall I do?"

"O, you'll have to learn to like them, that's the only way you can get rid of them. That's the way the rest of us did. Now closer the questions the better. They make us think so much more. I don't know as I should ever have turned to Christ if it had not been for such questions."

Fellow teachers let us be personal.—Make each pupil feel at every lesson, "that is for me. Christ died for me. He calls me. He is knocking at the door of my heart."—Union Magazine.

THE VITAL POINT OF A SERMON.—Telling of one of his addresses to a heathen audience in Kaffraria, W. Talor says: "We got into our subject very satisfactorily. They appeared to understand it, and nearly all seemed to agree that our words were true. But we had not reached the vital point of convincing them of their lost condition, and of offering a personal Saviour when the time came for dismissal.

"We resolved that hereafter in preaching to the heathen we would, regardless of the time required, never stop short of giving the whole plan of salvation necessary to an intelligible offer of Christ."

A General Council of the Catholic Church.

Pope Pius the Ninth, as the public are already informed, has issued a Bull calling a general Council of the Catholic Church to meet in Rome on the 8th December next. This announcement is of great importance not only to Catholics but to the entire christian world. No such council has been held since the famous Council of Trent. The assemblages of Bishops last year and some fourteen years ago were only conferences in which the Bishops acted merely as advisers of His Holiness.—The Pope maintained and exercised his functions as the head and mouthpiece of the councils. In a general council he will stand in a very different position. The eight hundred Bishops who compose it become for the time the mouth of the church and their united decision in matters of faith is held to be divinely inspired and infallible, and binding not only on the church, but even on the Pope himself. Whatever it decrees is held to be the decree of God by the whole multitude professing the Catholic faith. It is presided over by the Pope or his legates.

It is contended there have been altogether nineteen general councils of the Catholic Church, of which a meeting of the apostles in Jerusalem, in the year 50 of the Christian era, is held to be the first. The eight following were called by Christian Emperors between 325 A. D., and 1869 A. D. The Popes have since called ten between 1123 A. D. and 1545 A. D., and the date of the Council of Trent. Three hundred and twenty-four years will have elapsed between the Council of Trent and the one now summoned. The Catholic Church has never before by seventy years been so long without a General Council. In the Dark Ages, a period of two hundred and fifty four years elapsed without a General Council. From that time the twelfth century had three councils; the thirteenth, three; the fourteenth one; the fifteenth, two; and the sixteenth, one.—The seventeenth and eighteenth centuries had none, and more than half the nineteenth will be gone before the long silence is broken. Since the century of the Reformation Rome has not spoken by a General Council. She endeavoured at Trent to deal with the problems of that great overturning, and from that hour her infallible lead has not until now thought good to evoke again the reserved authority of the Catholic Church. When the silence of more than three centuries shall be broken, Christendom will be alive, with curiosity at least, to hear what Catholicism has new to say.

Pius the Ninth is an old man of seventy-six years; a man of piety, but not without vanity, and by no means discreet. He came to the Papal throne June 16, 1848, and has been Pope, therefore, for twenty-two years. It is a Roman idea that a Pope will never reign more than twenty-five years. Possibly the Holiness feels that the time is short in which to make his reign memorable, and that but one expedient is now possible to him, that of calling a General Council. The first step by which Pius the Ninth sought to achieve something worthy of his position, was the policy of liberal reform which he seemed ardently pursuing previous to the revolution of 1848 which drove him from Rome and set up a republic. Upon his restoration he ceased to favor reform. He turned his eye to aggrandizing the Catholic Church, and began with a brief restoring the hierarchy of this Church in England. In 1854 he invited Bishops from all parts of Christendom to meet him at Rome, and with their consent made a declaration of the dogma of the immaculate conception. In 1851, 1854 and 1855 respectively, he concluded concordats with Spain, Baden and Austria. Last year he called together a grand assemblage of Catholic Bishops at Rome for the canonization of certain Japanese martyrs. More than two-thirds of the Bishops received their benefices from Pius the Ninth. The times are critical in the extreme for Catholicism. Not only is the temporal power failing, and every sovereign in Europe, save the notorious Queen of Spain, hostile to the Papacy, but the dread spirit of freedom is said to be pervading the Church itself. A few years since liberal Catholicism rallied in a Catholic Congress under the presidency of the eminent scholar and theologian, Dr. Dolinger until a Papal brief forbade the daring innovation. In all these circumstances we see the reason why His Holiness, almost on the brink of the grave, has consulted this Council of the Catholic Church.

The objects that will engage the attention of the Council it is not possible more than to infer from the signs of the times. We shall watch for future developments with interest, for certainly no event of greater importance to the Catholic church, and perhaps to Protestantism also, has occurred during the centuries that have elapsed since the grand council of 1545.—Ex.

THE ZOUAVES MOVEMENT.

We think it is Cornelius O'Dowd, but at all events some recent magazine essayist, who offers the opinion that the world is arriving at a state when men will be brought to esteem much less by the force of the principle of nationality than by the force of opinion; and therefore it is perhaps neither useful nor wise to enquire too closely into the legality of emigration for military purposes. So long as the thing is done quietly, and without causing international scandal or remonstrance, it is perhaps better to wink at these proceedings, even if they trench a little upon the letter of the law, rather than make a pretence at repression and punishment which experience will show to be without effect. If, therefore, our Canadian youth choose to enlist under the banners of Pius the IX., as some of their fellow subjects enlisted under those of Garibaldi, it is hardly worth while to complain. At the same time we do think that at a moment when our War Minister is professing that he requires all our military strength, and even finds it necessary to augment that strength, it is hardly decent that money given as a premium to young men as an inducement to acquire military knowledge for the defence of the country, should only be used as an outfit for the voyage by which these same men place the knowledge imparted at public expense at the service of another power. We are informed, and we suppose rightly, that a majority of the young men who have embarked for service in the Papal regiments have only recently passed through the military schools, and taken a premium for doing so. We cannot think that in actual circumstances this ought to be permitted. The instruction is afforded and the premiums are given, not to make soldiers in the abstract, but to make soldiers who may be of use in the defence of Canada; and we hold that a rule should be established, by which no man who will present a bill for the departure, forbearance in other lands, of men whose services should be considered as pledged to this country.—[Montreal Herald.

The Route of the Inter-colonial.

(From the London Prototype, Conservative.)

It is not to be wondered at that the Government should find some difficulty in determining the route by which to build this great work. What amount of truth there may be in the rumours so long afloat about the Cabinet being divided upon the question we know not; but it would be strange, indeed, if our western representatives in the Government did not enter a demurrer against the route said to be supported by Mr. Cartier—the circuitous and expensive Robinson line—which can be sustained by no valid argument, and which will meet with the united opposition of the people of Ontario. Mr. Cartier may, perhaps, have influence enough to press his colleagues into acquiescence with his views, suppose any diversity of opinion exists. He stands in a strong political position, and from his well known tenacity and inflexibility of character, he might possibly hold out to the extent of bursting up the Government. But it would be a dangerous experiment, and might be the first step in weakening French Canadian influence in this portion of the American continent—That he holds a supreme controlling influence in Canadian politics is due mainly to the fact that the people of Ontario are split up into two antagonistic parties. Were we a unit in politics or almost a unit, as the French Canadian representatives are united upon the principle of protecting our own interests, Mr. Cartier would be shorn of much of his strength, and would not find himself in a position to hold out for measures, such as the Northern route for the Intercolonial, which is inimical to the interests of the west, and, we might say, to those of the whole Dominion. Of course, we are speaking hypothetically, for we have no means of knowing the views of any member upon the point at issue.—But suppose matters should stand in the cabinet as rumour represents them to be, that Sir John A. Macdonald, Hon. Wm. McDougall, and Hon. Mr. Tilley, are opposed to the adoption of the long and circuitous route—the route that will absorb a superfluous amount of capital and be attended with the least commercial advantages—and suppose that Mr. Cartier should press his views to the extent of producing a rupture in the Cabinet, what are the people of Ontario prepared to do?—What are the representatives in Parliament, of both political parties prepared to do? What are the Reformers of the west—Her Majesty's opposition—prepared to do? Are we prepared as a people, unitedly, to support the men who might make a stand in defence of our interests—to merge our past differences—for a point of principle it would be difficult to draw the line between us now—and from one great united party on the principle of an economical administration of public affairs, and the protection of western interests? Our divisions in the past have been the source of our weakness. Our union in the future would give renewed strength. The line of duty is clear, clear both as regards Conservatives and Reformers; but will the latter pursue it? We very much doubt it. We very much incline to the opinion that they would endeavor to oblige any split that might take place in the government to their own advantage as a party, even upon such an important question as the Intercolonial, instead of raising to the patriotic duty of uniting with us in defence of the public interests. But it might not be so; and if not so, Mr. Cartier would soon find out his position. It is not desirable that any sectional antagonism should arise, for every Province ought, if possible, to have its due weight in the councils of the country, but it is perfectly practicable for the representatives of the people of Ontario, aided by what support they could command from the Maritime Provinces, to take the government of the Dominion into their own hands, and put an end forever to all grounds of complaint as regards the undue exercise of French Canadian influence in our affairs. Mr. Cartier had better be aware of this, and not push matters to extremes. He and his compatriots have had a long run of power, and we do not wish it to end, if exercised with proper bounds; but he must have a due regard for western interests, or it may slip from under his feet. It would be a safer and sounder policy on his part to consult public opinion in Ontario with regard to the Intercolonial Railway, than persist in forcing this railway through the barren wilds of the northern counties of New Brunswick, thereby entailing a vast unnecessary expenditure, destroying all chance of the road being self-sustaining as a commercial enterprise, and imposing upon us an annual tax, in addition to all our other burdens, for the purchase of grease to lubricate the wheels of the empty trains.

A young woman was taken in charge in the streets of Chicago the other day who was laboring under the illusion that the spirit of her dead husband was pursuing her and demanding, with skeleton arms outstretched, her money. She had already thrown three hundred at the feet of the apparition and fled, but still pursued. The insanity of the woman is the last act of a tragedy that occurred three years ago.—At that time she was the bride of an old divorced man, who at once doted upon and was very jealous of her. One evening he locked up five hundred dollars which he had given her in a moment of tenderness. She tauntingly replied that she had given it to her lover. He demanded the name of the man, threatening to blow his own brains out if not informed. She told him to blow away. The next moment the lady found at her feet his brains scattered over her night dress. Her guilty conscience now pictures up the old man, continually haunting her and demanding his money, as on the fatal night.

SUICIDE IN AMARANTH.—A correspondent says that James Stevenson, of the Township of Amaranth, shot himself on Sunday afternoon last. A few weeks ago, as noted in the local papers, he made an attempt to cut his throat, but did not succeed. There were two respectable residents of Amaranth in the house at the time he committed the fearful act which terminated his existence. At the time he made the first attempt to destroy himself, he had left home to work on a new farm, but got on the spree, the effects of which led him to death. The unfortunate deceased was a shoemaker by trade, and a native of county Armagh, Ireland.

CARIBOO AND CANADA.—As a pleasing evidence of the popularity of the New Dominion in regions as yet beyond its way, we may mention that a telegram from Barkerville, British Columbia, was received in this city, says that the Ottawa Times, to the following effect:—"Cariboo celebrates to-day (July 1st), and sends congratulations. 'God save the Queen and the Dominion!' The people of Canada will heartily reciprocate the sentiment, and gladly assist in hastening the day when British Columbia may be made part and parcel of the Dominion.

THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1868.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Our streets are quite cheerful and gay; red coats are in every direction; about 405 out of 450 made their appearance the first day. When we consider the way the companies are scattered, and that some of the men are, in fact, all over, at different seasons, lumbering, working and travelling, the present muster is very good. They perform their drill from 5 to 8 a. m., and from 5 to 8 p. m., and are fine looking fellows as a whole, and what speaks well for the 57th Battalion, the men are so far conducting themselves reasonably well, we hope they will continue to do so.

There seems to be peculiar hardships in bringing out our Volunteers at this particular season of the year. The hot weather must be almost unsupportable to men who are used to different labour, and that at best from clothing as they can be. The great grievances, however, are the busy times, the difficulty of procuring men to take their places, and the small pay $1 a day, and pay for their own board out of that. If the Government calls them out at such a time as the present they should be paid at least what a man to take their place at home would cost, and under the circumstances, it may be a matter for consideration, whether the town and county should not supplement their pay. The amount they have to pay for their board would not increase our taxes much, and would show those who nobly come forward to prepare to defend us, that we have an interest in them, and are ready to bear a part of the burden of their expenses; about $1,000 would do this. Other counties are doing so, and we don't believe that Peterboro' will be behind in encouraging our noble Volunteers.

Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges.

The committee appointed by the County Council to superintend the construction of the above bridges met on Tuesday in Emismore, and viewed the different proposed routes between the two bridges the object of that township. They also concluded that the sum of $1,000 would be necessary to put and road through the township in a passable state. On Wednesday a public meeting of the people of Emismore was held, when the committee placed before them the subject of raising this $1,000, and we understand that it was almost unanimously agreed to. The Council afterwards met and passed a By-law through two readings providing for raising said one thousand dollars. This By-law will be submitted to the Rate payers on the 12th of August, when it will no doubt be confirmed. If so, the Committee will meet on the 13th, and arrange to advertize for tenders, and locate the road and site of the Bridges. We may therefore look upon the construction of those Bridges, as a fixed fact, for the Ratepayers of Emismore cannot be so blind to their own interests as to reject the By-law, after so much struggling to get arrangements so far completed. The Council also agreed that no tolls should ever be placed on the road.

WHO CAN GET INFORMATION.—Our attention has been drawn to the fact that our local member keep the papers, &c., in connection with those lands that are to be given as free grants, of course offering to give information on application to him, and we were requested to draw the attention of the public to the fact; why does he do so? It is well known that he narrowly received his election; at least one half of the electors do not care to go to the man against whom they voted, to seek information, nor do they consider that they should be compelled to do so. Why not allow these papers and information to be in the hands of some agent to whom the public could go without begging favors?—Perhaps it is intended to make the free grant system a kind of vote making machine, if so it is just as well that we should know it. It does not give satisfaction, however.

Girls in the Grammar School.

The Chief Superintendent of Education has decided not to recognize girls as eligible to attend our Grammar Schools, and we are ready to believe that he has done so after reasonable consideration of the legal application of Grammar School funds, as he has concluded to make the distribution according to the average attendance of boys only, upon the grounds that any other basis of apportionment would be illegal. Now, it is a well known fact that a large number of the educators of the youth of Ontario hold views differing from Dr. Ryerson's on this important subject; very many being of opinion that the present state of the country, the necessity to give the future mothers of Ontario at least the best education the country can afford, and believing that at present in most of the towns and rural districts, the Grammar School is the only available means of affording that education they advocate the admission of the girls to these Schools. It may be that in cities higher Schools for young ladies can be easily established and maintained. But very few of the towns even are able to do so. It is also well known it all must go to the cities—Toronto and Montreal—to complete their English education, comparatively few will go, as only the few are able to bear the necessary expenses for that purpose. A very large number, therefore of our young women will be compelled to do with whatever they can pick up in the Common Schools. By shutting them out of the Grammar Schools they are debarred from availing themselves of the superior instruction of the Head Master, and thus refused the means of obtaining even an English education such as could be obtained under the Head Master, while the boys have every advantage without let or hindrance. It cannot be denied that the growing intelligence of the civilized world is in favor of educated mothers, not only for the rich man's child, but the poor man's child. If, however, man in his haughty desire for preeminence thinks that mathematics or classics are not of any use to women in educating his children, then let him say that they shall not be allowed to study these things. But if he were even so really to say so, he dare not say that they are not to have, because they do not require it, the best English education the country can afford. Would it not therefore be better to cease to make the study of classics a sine qua non in the Grammar School except in the case of boys.

We feel persuaded that the removal of girls from the Grammar Schools is a work of only influence to force the young ladies to the cities. There can be no doubt, however, that it will be the means of forcing many to remain satisfied with what ever they can procure in the Common Schools from want of means. This is not equal justice to all; this indicates a lingering desire in matter superiority, or else for the monopoly of the cities in educational matters at the expense of their daughters, sisters, and wives. Surely this will not be allowed to continue; and we trust that Boards of Grammar Schools, Trustees, Teachers, and the community will not cease to agitate until our daughters have equal rights with our sons in the Grammar Schools of the Dominion.

THE WEATHER.—On Tuesday morning a copious rain fell that revived the whole face of nature. It was heavy for a while but we do not hear of much injury having been done by it. The weather is still very warm and there are indications of a little more, which would do no harm, the ground is so very dry yet. May harvest is now on the farmer; no abundant crop being the reward of his labor. Hands are difficult to be obtained at any wages, but favorable weather will do much to make up for a paucity of hands.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to acknowledge with thanks, the following donations received in June: Mr. White, (Monaghan) quarters of veal and lamb; Mrs. Lewis Davis, two hams; Mrs. W. G. Thompson, clothing; Mrs. R. Hamilton, butter and lard; Mr. Richardson, raspberry vinegar for the sick; Miss Roger, quarter of veal. The Committee would also tender their best thanks to the Peterboro' Orange Lodge for a kind donation of $10.

On our first page this week will be found two Essays from a literary journal, by pupils of the Fifth Division of the Union School, read at the late examination. They constitute their first attempts, and are given merely to show what the pupils have been doing, and what may be realized from well directed efforts. Next week we intend to insert two more by other pupils. They are not set forth as perfect, but as the composition of girls not 16 years of age.

THE 12TH OF JULY.—The Orange Lodges, we understand, have agreed to remain at home this year instead of going to Port Hope as intended. They have been forced to this conclusion from the fact that almost three-fourths of the volunteers here being Orangemen, are now called out to drill. We will therefore have a little fun in Peterboro on the celebration of the anniversary of Orangeism, and a dinner in the evening in the drill shed at which the Band will be present.

EXCURSION.—The steamer Otonabee will leave Keene on Monday morning to connect with the train for Cobourg and with the Norwman for Port Hope. Parties, therefore, going to join the Orange demonstration in Port Hope can do so at the low fare of $1.25 there and return. Many will no doubt avail themselves of this opportunity of a trip to Port Hope.

COLORS.—We understand that the Ladies of Peterborough have taken the matter of obtaining and presenting a stand of colors to the 57th battalion, on Monday next, before their separation after performing their drill.

There is also a movement on foot to present Major Kennedy with a horse, on account of his continued labors in the volunteer movement.

The steamer Corinthian struck in Lachine Rapids on Saturday night. The passengers were taken off by the "Maid of Canada." She has on a shoal out of the rapids. The cause of striking was probably the dense smoke from the burning forest.

The Rev. J. G. D. Mackenzie, M. A., of Hamilton, has been appointed Inspector of Grammar Schools for the Province of Ontario, in the place of Professor Boston Young, resigned. We believe the latter gentleman has accepted a Chair in Knox College.

We have good authority for saying that Mr. Denniston will receive the Judgeship, indeed may say has received it.

UNION AND GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The Board met on Tuesday evening—Present—Dr. Burnham, Col Haultain, and Messrs. Stevenson, Dumble, Gilmour, Helm, Cameron and Coulter. The minutes were confirmed.

The Secretary read letters from Miss Carmichael, Miss Chambers, and Miss Rutherford tendering their resignations. The resignations were accepted.

Two or three letters of applications for the North Ward School, and for the position of Assistant Teacher in the Primary Department were read.

The Secretary was directed to advertise in the local papers for two weeks.

The name of Miss Hatton, of Port Hope, and Miss Murray, of Montreal, were spoken of for the 5th division. The testimonials of Miss Hatton being considered all that could be desired, the Board agreed to accept her application. We may remark that Miss Hatton is highly recommended both as to qualifications and teaching and governing abilities, and has had several years experience in teaching.

The Property Committee were instructed to have certain changes and repairs made in the Lanting during the recess, so as to enable a division of labor in the Primary Department, there being too many (137) during the past term in it.

The Treasurer was instructed to pay Mr. Rutherford's account of $6.55 for carting wood.

The Principal read his report of the late Examination, from which it appeared that there were 502 pupils on the Register during the month, with an average of 424. In the Grammar School, 90 boys, average 59, for the half year. The girls are not recognized as Grammar School pupils. There have been 60 promotions; 37 boys and 24 girls. During the examinations for promotions the answering in the rooms as represented thus:—

Mr. Harbin's	"	"	60 "
Mr. McPaul's	"	"	52 "
Miss Beattie's	"	"	55 "
Miss Borrowman's	"	"	52 "
Mr. Taylor's	"	"	42 "

The Board deserves the best thanks of the citizens for their earnest efforts to procure the best teachers in order that the educational requirements of our increasing population may be reasonably provided for, and it is to be hoped that they will realize their hopes in the present appointments.

THEATRICAL.

France & Lunnier's Dramatic Constellation have been in town for more than a week performing every evening to full houses. It rarely happens that inland towns are visited by dramatic companies of sufficient talent to retain the interest of theatre going people for more than a night or two. France & Lunnier's Constellation, however, is an exception. They reflect for the character of their pieces, and permit no expressions that it is thought would offend the ear of any one. The scene, "The Down Express Train," in the play "Under the Gaslight" was exceedingly well done; indeed the characters were well sustained throughout the whole play. Mr. Wheelock and Hattie Armorld Lee were very pleasing both in manner and address, and were always received with applause. The Constellation is considered by those who have attended regularly superior to any that has visited this place. Tomorrow (Friday) evening, and last night but one of the season, benefit of Mr. J. F. Wheelock, will be produced Dion Boucicault's Great Drama, entitled "Arrah-na Pogue," to be followed by the laughable farce of "The Pleasant Neighbor," under the patronage of Lieut.-Col. Poole and the officers of the 57th Battalion.

APOLOGY.—In our issue of the 11th June last, we were led in the heat of the moment to speak of the Canadian Freeman newspaper in unjustifiable terms. In our editorial article upon Patrick Mongovan we said of the Freeman that it was "a new paper whose Editor delights in collecting slanders against Protestants, and has become the mouthpiece of Fenians." We also published a letter in the same issue signed "Vertitas," in which our correspondent speaks of the Freeman as a "Billy sheet" and a "Fenian sheet." We desire to express our regret for these utterances, and merely make a full apology for the same.

MISDEM.—As far north as the thriving village of Minden, Dominion Day was duly kept. The people from the bordering townships congregated at the village, where the day was passed in pleasure taking of various kinds, including the usual racing games for youth, and even an attempt at horse racing among the men. Canoe racing was much in vogue, as it gave quite an impetus to the pleasures of the occasion last Dominion Day. Flags were waving from the dwelling of the Reeve of Minden, the new parsonage, and from the several stores. The state of the road from the long drought was the greatest drawback prominent. If the free grant system could be brought to a certainty around this and other places in this northern part of our County, the activity on such joyful times would be quite surprising to the people of the front.

Rain fell heavily on the 6th inst.—COM.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—Our town people who contributed towards the new parsonage at Minden will be gratified to learn that the building is completed. It is a very good family dwelling, contains nine rooms, is of the cottage style, and situated on a level, about half a mile north of Minden village, on church property. By a happy coincidence the full occupation of this parsonage was on Dominion Day, when minister and churchwardens dined together in the new house, thus celebrating the pleasant event. It may be set down as worth nearly $600, having cost in paid labour $400. There is a debt of some $60 on the parsonage.

NEW BUTCHER.—We notice with pleasure that Mr. Henry C. Wilson has returned to Peterboro'. Having bought out Mr. Boyd, he is now ready to supply all who may favor him with as good meat as the country can afford.

Mr. EDITOR,

I send you a short account of the way in which Dominion Day was celebrated in the ambitious and thriving village of Lakefield. I think you will agree with me in saying that the time was profitably spent. At eleven o'clock a tea for the benefit of the Presbyterian Sunday School was served in the upper part of the Carriage Factory, after which eloquent addresses were delivered in the church. The tea was very well attended, although at an unusually early hour for such an occasion, and the day extremely warm on account of the fogs of the previous week, while partaken, of tea at a boiling temperature, and the thermometer 92° in the shade. About the close of these services the simple but sacred ceremony of dedicating the new Orange Hall was performed. Probably some may be inclined to jeer at the seeming sacrilege of the word "sacred," as applied here, but any body of men whosoever or whatever they may be, who band together for the purpose of protecting and defending that freedom from the thraldom which chained and enslaved our brethren, should consider services connected with their cause sacred. But pardon me for this digression. The dedication ceremony being over, all repaired to the adjoining woods. D. G. Hatton, Esq. Co. Master, being called to the chair, offered a few brief remarks, very much to the point, and which every true Orangeman should keep in mind. The chairman was ably followed by the Rev. Mr. Cantlon, Co. Chaplain, and the Rev. Mr. Burns, Prov. Grand Chaplain, both of which speakers done something to relieve the minds of those who have got hold of the idea, that there is something awfully mysterious in the secrets and doings of Orangemen. After giving three hearty cheers for the Queen all quietly dispersed.

Yours, R. A.

A Fenian Law Suit.

The New York Tribune of Saturday has the following:—

General O'Neil, who is President of one of the "wings" of the Fenian Brotherhood, had criminal information filed yesterday against Mac and Scanlon and Dr. David Pell, editors of The Irish Republic, for provoking him to commit a breach of the peace," by publishing a certain statement in a letter written and signed by Captain William H. Grace, of the National Hotel, Washington. The statement in question is to the following effect, viz:—

"Every Irishman here in Washington only knows too well, to his sorrow and humiliation, the broken assumption of O'Neil, and the capital he endeavored to make out of the Ridgeway affair. He came here and started in the "boom" business; but was soon put to rights before he was supplied by the War and Treasury Departments for presenting before them unjust and dishonest claims, and his name was posted up in each Department as one forbidden to transact any business with the Government."

Messrs. Scanlon and Bell were arrested in their office at 12 o'clock, noon. They employed as their counsel to the Police Court, O'Neil also appeared with his counsel. The defendants were held in $1,000 bail each for their appearance July 10th.

The New York Sun says it is rumored that the examination of this case will bring to light portions of the history of the invasion of Canada not heretofore made public, but to which a large number of persons are likely to be deeply interested.

THE RECIPROCITY QUESTION.

Commenting upon Mr. Beaman's proposed reciprocity legislation, the St. Paul, Minnesota, Press says:—

We refer to the comments of the Eastern press, that this proposition is brought forward with no expectation of action during the few remaining days of the present session, but as a basis of discussion by the Congressional Committees of Commerce, and perhaps of diplomatic action during the recess. It is probably anticipated that the jurisdiction of Canada will be extended westward at no distant day otherwise we should earnestly hope that the proposition above referred to, should be amended in their territorial scope. Whatever arrangement on this subject is good policy east of Lake Superior, should be made contermino us with the whole northern frontier.

If the Northwest Territory and British Columbia were within the toll would be proportionately enlarged; but there is some uncertainty on this subject, which calls for an amendment to the first section of the bill. Of course, this legislation may be examined by Canada and the Eastern Provinces, with the expectation that our relations to Northwest British America shall be the subject of a direct and important negotiation with Great Britain. But we and we are quite willing that it shall be so—we waive our objection to the present measure.

The Ottawa Citizen says that at Montreal the excessive heat on Saturday occasioned several deaths. A man, name unknown, was found insensible in St. Catherine st. He died in about two hours afterwards of apoplexy. Margaret Tuss, one of Miss Rice's girls, a native of Emsdale, died the same evening in the House of Refuge from the effects of sun stroke. John Day died on Saturday afternoon from apoplexy, caused by sunstroke. The deceased was a native of Ireland and had only been eight days in this country. D. L. Beer, one of the crew of the steamer "Pride of Wales," was drowned on Saturday evening while bathing. A boy named John Mooney, of Lacolle, was drowned on Saturday evening while playing. The weather became uncomfortable last evening and today is moderate.

An extensive seizure of smuggled goods was made near Detroit, on Wednesday last. The Deputy United States Marshal arrested a resident man whom he saw crossing the river in a small boat, and on his person was found a quantity of mittings. The premises occupied by him and another colored family were searched, and in them were found secreted 1,700 pounds of mittings and 400 lbs. of the oil of cloves. The value of the seizure is worth about $10,000. The arrested parties were merely employed to transport the goods across the river. It has been ascertained that the smuggled property is owned by parties in Cincinnati and Pittsburg, and was intended for the Southern trade. It was purchased in Montreal.

THE CROPS IN EUROPE.—Accounts from England continue to the detriment of the growing crops are generally favorable, the only exceptions being such as are peculiarly the capital of the "grumblers" who in no circumstances can satisfy. The weather has been favorable, and harvesting in some of the earlier wheat districts will be general before the middle of July. Reports from France say that wheat fields are already beginning to ripening for the sickle. If the next month hold equally good, "corn, wine and oil" will be once more plentiful in la belle France. Both in north and south, as well as from the rich plains of the Loance in the west, the accounts are every day more favorable, and the price of cereals is steadily falling.

SIX POUNDS OF GOLD.—Attempted Robbery.—The Adams Express Company going from New York Friday night to the Sub Treasury of the city thirty kegs of gold coin, weighing about 400 pounds each, making over six tons. While on the transit an attempt was made in Hartford City, Ct., to throw the train from the track by placing a sleeper across the track, but before a slight concussion no trouble was experienced. It is supposed that parties in New York must have telegraphed the fact to their confederates that a large amount of gold was on the way, but the attempt failed.—Boston Journal.

FREE GRANTS.

INSTRUCTIONS TO CROWN AGENTS.

The Government of Ontario has issued the following instructions to locating agents under the Free Grant and Homestead Act of 1868, which may be of interest to our readers:—

"1. In any location under the act you will be guided by the following instructions.

"2. The policy of this act is to confine these grants to land considered suitable for actual settlement and not to speculators to lands chiefly for their mines, minerals or pine timber, and in the preparation of the sections for this has as far as practicable been kept in view.

"3. You will, until further instructed, limit the locations to land included in the surveyed lots, but as the government are most desirous that only lands suitable for farming, and not valuable chiefly for their mines, mineral or pine timber, shall be located you will previously to locating any lot (although included in the enclosed list) as certain that it is really fit for cultivation and not a pine timber lot, or known or reported to be valuable for its mines or minerals.

"4. The conditions upon which locations are to be made, are set forth in the above mentioned act.

"5. The government reserves the right to construct roads through the lands they select, and authorize them to take possession and when permanent arrangements have been made location tickets will be issued.

"6. As the law limits free grants to one hundred acres, it is to be understood that irregular lots, or two small lots combined containing more than that quantity (100 acres) are only to be assigned to persons who can pay for the surplus at the rate of fifty cents an acre cash; the settler purchasing lands to forfeiture of the condition attached to the free grant location are not faithfully complied with.

"7. Locators, in addition to obtaining the free grant of one hundred acres, are to be allowed to purchase an additional one hundred acres at fifty cents an acre in each subject to the same reservations and conditions and the performance of the same settlement duties as are prescribed in respect of free grant locations by the 6th and 10th sections of the free grant act, except that actual residence and building on the land purchased will not be required.

"8. Squatters who have settled on the public lands previous to the passing of the Act 28th February, 1868, will not be located for the said lands free grants, but will have a pre-emption rate at a rate to be fixed hereafter.

"9. You will at present administer the required oath to intending settlers enter the lands they select, and authorize them to take possession and when permanent arrangements have been made location tickets will be issued.

"10. All Crown Land Agents are by the terms of an existing order in Council directed not to receive moneys, for payments on public lands, but parties desirous of making such payments are to deposit the amount in any agency of the government banks (the Royal Canadian Bank or the Bank of Montreal) to the credit of this department, and produce the certificate to the Crown Lands Agent who will forward the same to the department. You will observe the directions of this order, and make the same known to all parties desirous of purchasing or making payments."

The Abyssinian Expedition.

ESTIMATE OF THE DIFFICULTIES OVER COME.

On June 18th, the members of Her Majesty's government in England were sumptuously entertained by the Merchant Tailors' Company, London. A long and scientific and political speech was made by Mr. Disraeli in which he took a good that Church and State were one and indivisible. Those present cheered Mr. Disraeli to the close, but the toast of the Army and the Navy brought Sir John Packington, who in the course of his remarks said:—

"The British army had just accomplished one of the most achievements to be found recorded in the annals of this or any other country—[Cheer]—and he doubted whether there were many great battles and great victories which had done more to extend and strengthen the prestige of this great nation in Europe and Asia than the late victorious campaign. (Cheers.) After that we could hardly doubt that when we the disciplined forces of the sovereign of England came in contact with the armies of an uncivilized country, however gallant and brave they might be, under the blessing of Providence our armies must be successful. It was not, therefore, the victory we had gained that had made the recent expedition so remarkable and gratifying. The wonderful circumstances connected with that expedition consisted in their unparalleled march from the Red Sea to Magdala, a distance of four hundred miles, over an Alpine country, with no roads, with scanty supplies and with an allies on whom they could trust. It had been said again and again, 'Why not make a dash with a thousand men?' He believed there was not a man who had watched that expedition from its commencement to its close who was not deeply convinced that if he had "made a dash with a thousand men" not one of those thousand men would have escaped.—(Cheers.) Under the blessing of Providence, the grand result was owing to the extraordinary combination of every quality essential to success such was to be found in that great commander, Sir Robert Napier. (Cheers.) Never was an expedition conducted in the name of the sovereign of England with greater wisdom and prudence, or which had done more to reflect honor upon the discipline of the British arms. (Hear.) He was happy to say that he had reason to believe that Sir Robert Napier would be in England before long, and he trusted he would be received acclamations by a grateful country."—(Cheers.)

A WORD FOR ACTORS.

Many people, misled by the word 'amusements,' as applied to theatres, and misled also by their own vulgar and insolent notions as to the morality of the theatrical profession, fail to understand that acting, to be actor, is as much a business as law is to the lawyer, or preaching to the person. Sick or well the actor must be at his post of duty. Death may be in the house and anguish in his heart, but his smiles, his laughter, his impersonative, bi-wit and are mental and physical alacrity, must be ready, all the same, since the demands of his business are imperative and inexorable. And death and anguish do come to the homes of actors just as they come to the homes of dukes or dry goods peddlers and pickles. There is no difference, as to this point, in the common lot of man. Very often, therefore—far oftener than many spectators know or imagine—the actor who excites gaily thought his comedy, and is thought to be the happiest of men (if by chance he is not thought to be the wickedest of both sexes), is in other truth, bowed to the very earth with affliction. Who cares, however? Who pauses to think? What hardly, common consideration is needful, toward mere entertainers, who live to amuse? Let the lights burn, therefore, and the music sound! We must have no sad faces known here!—so cries the aggressive multitude—"the drama's patrons." There are countless idle, ignorant, and offensive theories current in society about the stage. The sands of absurdity pass from mouth to mouth throughout herds of vulgar fools, in reference to many of its professors. A tree and actresses are human creatures, with the same merits and defects that mark our common humanity; and their profession stands on precisely the same ground as the other learned professions regarded in society; whereby they are entitled to just the same human consideration and respect that is accorded to other workers in the honest business of the world. Let us judge one another aright; or rather, seeing that none of us can see clearly into human motives and conditions, let us not judge at all. Of the three cardinal virtues, St Paul preferred charity.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mr Disraeli on the Irish Church.

Mr. Disraeli made one of his most unblushing speeches at the merchant Taylor's dinner on Wednesday. He screwed up the Exeter Hall pitch of manner a peg higher than he has yet been able to manage and got as far as "recognizing the hand of Providence in this successful enterprise"—to wit, that the new constituencies "will be called upon as the first duty to decide whether they will sustain or will subvert the Constitution of their country." Mr. Disraeli, as usual, insisted on the importance of an alliance—between the principle of authority" and the "principle of religion;" he asserted that this alliance was threatened, "one might almost say because it had accomplished" the two great results of guaranteeing religious liberty and civil rights; and he anticipated that the fall of the Irish Establishment would give a wound to the Protestant Church in Europe generally "from which it would probably never recover." To the Mr. Disraeli added his usual panegyrics on Lord Derby and Lord Stanley, with which he has associated this time Mr. Hardy,

Two Questions Easily Answered—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the last ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach, Pustules or Acne, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

In using cold and unfeeling success in curing sudden colds, sore throat &c. ghs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and in fact superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, br ises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious chole, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only three fire cents per bottle.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Colds and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses, also as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; it is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It effectually cleans the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells and mucous membrane of the air passages that clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the delicate vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children by so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease. Thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, unnatural extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, sluggish sleep, faintings, trembling, coughs, indigestion, low pulse, slight fever, and a general wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant medicine.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

MRS. WINSLOW'S

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE ADVANCE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the out-side wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else hereto re known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will now use it will be the losers, if it loses the sufferers to avail both use "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

J. C. AYER & Co. OAKLAND, Ind., 6th June, 1868.

Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous taint in my blood, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many remedies and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative sarsaparilla. I got a bottle from your agent in this place, and my head was entirely healed with less than half of that bottle. I went to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and then ceased from fear of harm. Anew and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and I mention you gratefully. Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and has also cured a dangerous Salt gaunt Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Zelotus Dean of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and none where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulcers themselves were cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward R. Marrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician (a skilful one) nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 25th August, 1860.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and present to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his bones, and the alleviation had taken away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla: the ulcers healed and he is well again; not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was also relieved from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its results, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Truly yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 4th June, 1868.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. SWEARINGEN.

John T. Getchell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been effected for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Espy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy. But our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital fluids into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be surprised beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy—some living trophy to their minds of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was unable for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, and I liked the opium Mustang Liniment—it soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,

Foreman for American, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle mentioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she pronounced certain, our celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SELLY.

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, horsemen and painters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings bearing fac-similes of H. W. Wentworth, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over it.

An effort has been made to counterfeit the above, a close, stone plate label. Look close.

It is sold by all druggists, in large bottles, and by Demas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who does not add to their beauty? White, pearly, marble purity and delicacy, a perfect rose tint suffuse upon the cheek, and in the eye beauty? It is no longer a secret. They use Higgins's Magnolia Balm. It counteracts the sun's tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth as a mountain, blooming and rose-like. Unlike many cosmetics it contains no material to injure the skin. Any Druggist will procure it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts per bottle.

"Just so"—Exactly.—Some Shipowners say they were there "every time." If he left "go-by" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if the facial appetite was weak, languid or in a dyspeptic, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins up to and 'um.

Few persons want to be too much thought of, but some may just read the following:

I owe much to you, for I well believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. VAGONEY, Madison, N. Y.

I have become a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

I had lost all appetite, was weak and emaciated, could hardly walk, now have a perfect check of society. The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

Mrs. O. M. PRYOR, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she finds great aid to the work and increased discipline under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results, since received one hundred rations of such remedies. Their effectiveness as a curative and invigorating agent she considers unsurpassed by any of a good article. Our fortune and entire reputation is at stake. The original purity and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, par sh and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near to mine and style as they dare, and because a good article cannot be sold so low as mine, they find some excuse apart from parties who deal in, are what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamps over the cork.

LITTLE NELLIE.

The writer having been solicited to compose a ballad, "Come Home, Mother!" as a sequel to the popular American song, "Come Home, Father!" has endeavoured to versify a touching incident which occurred a few years since, in which the death of two poor neglected children was the means of reclaiming their mother.

Should this exhibition of the wretched consequences of intemperance (especially in a mother), have a salutary influence on others, the writer will with a grateful heart acknowledge the tender mercy of Him who can render the feeblest attempt instrumental of good.

Little Nellie, one day, in her desolate home,
Sat with baby asleep on her knee;—
Her mother she knew to the alehouse had gone,
Her father was far off at sea.

Tears that fell fast down poor Nellie's pale cheek
Afforded her full heart relief;—
At length she determined her mother to seek,
And tell her the cause of her grief.

Through storm and through rain she at last reached the place
Where her mother in dirty attire,
Was talking and drinking, with very red face,
With a bench by the side of a fire.

She tapped at the window;—her mother came out
And spoke, but she did not stay long.
The child thought, quite weary with waiting about,
Repeated the following song:—

LITTLE NELLIE'S SONG, "COME HOME, MOTHER!"

Tune,—"Come Home, Father!"

Collect the night is as wet and so cold,
I cannot much longer stay here;
My shawl is too tattered around me to fold;
I'm numbed with faintness and fear.
I have scarce had a morsel to eat all the day;
And could not help crying for bread;
Oh! hasten, dear mother, come home, now, I pray;
Poor baby so wants to be fed.
Come home, come home, come home!
Do, mother, pray, mother, come home!

CHORUS.

List to the voice of the child
Entreating her mother to come;
How touching the accents, earnest, yet mild,
Do, mother, pray, mother, come home!"

Yes, baby has cried till he can cry no more;
Just now he is quiet and still—
I laid him down softly and covered him o'er;
But, mother, I think he is ill;
For his thin little hands are closed up so tight,
And his dear little mouth has turned blue—
He breathes very hard, looks so strange and so white;
Oh! mother, indeed he wants you.
Come home, come home, come home,
Do, mother, pray, mother, come home!

CHORUS—List to the voice of the child, &c.

But the fountain of love in that mother's scared heart
Strong drink had made callous and dry;
The state of her infant at first made her start,
And she said, "I will come by-and-by."
But another full glass made the mother forget;
So all Nellie's pleadings were vain;
And the poor child went homeward all dripping with wet,
Repeating, again and again,
Come home, come home, come home,
Do, mother, pray, mother, come home!

CHORUS—List to the voice of the child, &c.

With sorrowful heart little Nellie returned,
And found the poor baby quite dead,
Then she felt as if fire within her brain burned,
But yet not a tear could she shed.
With the frenzy of fever she raved for awhile;
Then, giving a piteous moan,
She looked on the babe, who in death seemed to smile,
And cried, in a heart-rending tone,
Come home! come home, come home,
Do, mother, pray, mother, come home!

CHORUS.—List to the voice of the child, &c.

What a terrible scene did the mother descry,
When she entered her desolate room;
She soon became sober, and heaving a sigh
Fell down on the floor in a swoon.
Now the time of poor Nellie's departure drew near,
And finding her mother was come,
The last words that she said were, "Shun drink, mother dear,
Seek Jesus, and meet me at home;"
At home, at home, at home,
Seek Jesus, and meet me at home!

CHORUS.

List! these last words of the child,
As a voice from the grave seem to come;
They bid us, in accents so earnest yet mild,
"Seek Jesus, and meet her at home!"
Are any made sad, while this story they hear,
Oh! may they be led to discern
That while the eyes glisten with sympathy's tear,
We all have a lesson to learn;
Let us watch and pray that the love of strong drink
May never to us be a snare;
And should we be tempted, oh! then may we think
Of this sorrowful tale, and beware.
Beware! beware! beware!
Of the love of strong drink, oh! beware!

CHORUS.

Let the last words of the child
As echoed wherever we roam;
And may they as music, all plaintive and wild
Allure us to follow her home!

—Band of Hope Review.

A story is told of the late Lord Brougham and his mother. The old lady's servant invariably, when accused of breaking anything, replied: "sure ma'am, it was cracked before; and on day, when little Harry fell down stairs and his mother shouted: "Oh, boy is your head broke?" "Na, na, mother," said the young genius, it was cracked before."

A CANDID BANKRUPT.—At a recent examination of a bankrupt, it was observed that he kept a great number of banking accounts. "I see," said the learned judge, "that you have had six or seven bankers; what could you want so many for?" "To overdraw them to be sure."

An Indian came to a certain agent in the northern part of Iowa, to procure some whiskey for a young warrior who had been bitten by a rattlesnake. "Four quarts!" repeated the agent with surprise, "as much as that?" "Yes," replied the Indian, "four quarts—snake very big."

A man in telling about a wonderful parrot hanging in a cage from a window of a house which he often passed said, "It never stop thief so naturally, that every time I hear it I always stop."

An Irish gentleman hearing of a friend having a stone coffin made for himself, exclaimed:—"By dad and that's a good idea! Sure an' a stone coffin 'ud last a man his lifetime."

"Owing to the peculiar arrangement of the programme no piece can be repeated," was the answer White received from his landlady upon asking for a second piece of pie at dinner.

An old lady, reading an account of a distinguished old lawyer, who was said to be the father of the New York bar, exclaimed: "Poor man! he had a dreadful set of children!"

I am going to draw this beau into a knot, as the young lady said when standing at the hymenal altar.

The prettiest lining for a bonnet is a pretty face.

Why is a kiss like scandal? Because it goes from mouth to mouth.

"You are very pressing," as the liberty said to the nutcrackers.

What is that which by losing an eye has nothing left but a nose? A rose.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some bit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. Those, if not relieved, react upon the stomach, as will be seen during general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deeper-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and face that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. F. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR: ANER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all both we ever tried with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contact with disease, and I believe as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PREELE, Clerk of Steamer Clarus.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1854.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALEX. J. BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. S. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alternative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MCACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our Fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe sedentariness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent preventives of the natural accidents when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are, so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawker, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga. Jan. 6, 1866.

WORTHY SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my kidneys and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SABINE CRABTREE, Pointe Coupee, La., 8 Dec. 1864.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently fall to the unwarrious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly to their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

JACOB'S RHEUHATIC LIQUID

Is an internal as well as an external remedy, and is the only one that always gives entire satisfaction, and all who once use it will never consent to change it for any other.

We have not space to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by thousands who have used it, and voluntarily certify to its merits. Buy a bottle and satisfy yourself that it is the best remedy ever offered.

THE BEST Tonic Hair Dressing ever discovered. It effectually cleans the scalp, prevents the Hair from falling or turning prematurely grey and when the follicles and glands are not destroyed, will produce a new and luxuriant growth of hair where it has already disappeared.

It is the cheapest as well as the best, being only 25 cents for a large bottle. Buy it, try it, you'll like it and recommend it to your friends.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it also will be cured, as it will cost less and do more speedily cure the worst of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonee Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she did done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but he did not even relieve me enough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me enough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; to it a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system: at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONÉES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Louis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Sore Eyes, the various Skin Diseases, Humours, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annals of the orical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy Lungs nay to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Poetry.

IMPATIENCE.

Will the mocking daylight never be done
In the moon her hour forgetting?
O, weary sun! O, merciless sun!
You have grown so slow in setting?

And yet, if the days could come and go
As fast as I count them over;
They would seem to me like years, I know
Till they bring me back my lover.

Down thro' the valleys, down to the south,
O, west wind, go with Brenneis;
Kiss, with your kisses, his perfect mouth
And bring to me all its sweetness.

Go when he lieth in slumber deep,
And put your arms about him;
And hear the whis'ers my name in sleep
And tell him I die without him.

O, birds, that sail in the air like ships,
To me such discord bringing;
If you heard the sound I put my lover's lips,
You would be ashamed of your singing.

O, hateful stars, in the hateful skies,
Can you drink your light in tender;
When you steal it all from my lover's eyes,
And shine with a borrowed splendor?

O, sun, going over the western wall,
If you'd stay there none will heed you,
For why should you rise or shine at all,
When he is not here to need you?

Will the mocking daylight never be done?
Is the moon her hour forgetting?
O, weary sun! O, merciless sun!
You have grown so slow in setting?

INDIANS.

BY MISS M. G.

(From the Union School "Literary Journal.")

When Columbus first discovered America he concluded it to be the easterly part of India; accordingly he called the inhabitants he found here Indians. This was the origin of the name as applied to the aborigines of America. The principal tribes of Indians were the Iroquois, Hurons, Algonquins. The Iroquois were called by the English the Five Nations, being made up of the Onondagas, the Cayugas, the Senecas, the Mohawks and the Oneidas, who formed one grand confederacy for offensive and defensive purposes. The Iroquois allied themselves to the English, while the Hurons and Algonquins took the side of the French. The Indians in general are quick of apprehension, ingenious and when pleased nothing is good enough for their countenance and friendship. They are very grave when in council with one another, and brave in war. The Indian houses or wigwams were poor smoky cells; they were constructed generally like arbors of small young trees bent and twisted together. They made their fire in the centre of the house and there was an opening at the top which constituted the smoke. Their arts and manufactures were confined to a very narrow compass. Their only weapons bows, arrows the tomahawk and the wooden sword or spear. With respect to navigation they made little or no improvements beyond the construction, and management of the bullet trough or canoe; these were commonly made of the pine and chestnut trees. The Indian government generally was an absolute monarchy; the Sachem was the name of their ruler; but in all important affairs he consulted his counsellors. Whatever his desires were they put on his mind, and without hesitation obeyed his commands. With respect to religion, the Indians were in king's darkness. There were a great many of the Hurons converted. St. Joseph's seminary'e being the first place that an Indian ever got out for christian worship but while the priest was performing service a band of Algonquins and Iroquois burst upon the unsuspecting worshippers, massacred them, and left us and put the good priest to a martyr's death. They were very cruel and savage in time of war, and sometimes cruel and sometimes kind to their captives. It has been too commonly believed that there is nothing interesting morally in the Indian character. The manner in which some writers have spoken of them has greatly strengthened this opinion. There have been traits of character exhibited among the Indians which should excite our admiration and win our esteem; there have been many instances of justice, generosity and kindness. A kindness shown to an Indian was remembered as long as an injury, and persons have had their lives spared for acts of humanity done to the ancestors of those Indians into whose hands they have fallen. The noted Indian Chiefs were Brant and Tecumseh. Brant was a Mohawk Indian, born in Ohio 1742. In the revolutionary war of 1775 he became the ally of the English, and as a prominent chief among the Iroquois he influenced several of the cantons of that confederacy to join the English standard. He received a good education in Connecticut, and during the war held a colonel's commission from the King. At the close of the revolution he removed to Canada with the Mohawks and obtained from Governor Haldimand the grant of a territory on the Grand River. The town of Brantford on Grand River was named after him, as was also the County of Brant. He translated the whole of the Gospel of St. Mark into the Mohawk language, and in many ways exerted himself to promote the temporal and spiritual welfare of his people. He was greatly respected and beloved by them and by the English. He visited England in 1783 and died near Wellington Square, Upper Canada, aged 65 years. His son John led the Mohawks at the victorious battle of Queenstown, in October, 1812. He was a noble specimen of a chieftain, brave and did much to alleviate the horrors of Indian warfare. We living in Canada can form a very imperfect idea of what the Indians were when America was discovered, from the Indians of the present day. They have fallen to a very degraded condition; they seem to have learnt all the vices of the white man and none of his virtues. The Indians were the original inhabitants of our country, and when we think that our flourishing and prosperous Canada was once a great forest and the Indians roamed masters of it, how on the approach of the white man the Indians were driven away, and after many cruel wars in which the Indians fought bravely for their homes the whites were victorious and the Indians have been almost exterminated. There are very few Indians living in Canada in the present day compared with what they used to be, and now there are many tribes quite extinct. As a proof of this it is said that of the translation of the Testament made by Sir John Eliot the Apostle of the Indians, there is not a single Indian now, or in fact any person who can read it, as the language is quite forgotten. [illegible] have robbed the poor Indian of his home he should be kind to them, and try to make up for what they have suffered at the hand of the white man.

OUR COUNTRY.

BY MISS M. J. S.

(From the Union School "Literary Journal.")

We name Canada as used by the Indians originally meant a collection of huts, but some have supposed it to be derived from the Spanish word "Acanada," "Here is nothing."

Canada, though not large in extent, is a country of which every Canadian may be justly proud. It is one of the most favored and happy nations in the world; every nationality, no matter what political or religious opinions he may hold is entitled to the protection of the government, and with very few exceptions all have proved themselves to be loyal and devoted subjects of the British Crown. The Canadians being essentially an agricultural and commercial people, are in favor of peace rather than war, but when their country is in danger or their rights infringed upon, they well know how to protect themselves; and in many a hard set fight as the heroic Wolfe and Brock have lost his life in defending Canada from the invasions of its enemies—enemies who for years have longed to possess it, but who have found in the lady Canadians more than a match for their armies in every contest.

When Cartier discovered Canada more than three centuries ago, he was delighted with the beauty of the scenery. It was the month of May and nature wore her loveliest aspect. Green hills and fertile valleys though which flowed many a mighty river, among them the St. Lawrence which rank with the largest in the world, contrasted with the solemn silence of the forests, where the giant oak and maple raised their towering heads to the clear sky and lesser denizens of lesser growth, and where the wild Indian gave in pursuit of game. But the forests are fast disappearing beneath the axe of the industrious white man, and like their old hunting ground, the Indians are passing under control of the white country and who once occupied a prominent position in the history of the new, are on the eve of becoming extinct. Canada remained in the possession of France for more than a century, however the Governors being more interested in the profits of the fur trade than in the advancement of the country, very little improvement was made. But France having provoked a war with England for reasons which it is needless to enumerate, and the latter being successful, Canada was added to the British Colonies and since then it has been rapidly increasing in commerce and wealth and now constitutes an important part of Her Majesty's dominions.

Canada possesses a number of lakes and navigable rivers which have been formed to good account in the foreign trade of the country, and in no thing the production of industry to easily find their way to the seaboard. Many canals have been constructed at an immense cost, which have greatly facilitated the navigation; the principal of which are the Welland and Rideau. Railways have been erected in many places to warn the approaching mariner from any danger.

Travelling facilities have been greatly improved. Forty years ago, travellers were obliged to encounter many dangers and difficulties before they reached their journey's end; but now, though through the invention of the locomotive engine, the state of things is greatly altered. Where formerly times in every was the principal mode of conveyance over rough and dreary roads we now see the iron horse moving with an almost incredible velocity. Even the inhabitants of the little village of Hamilton, which four years ago was a dense wilderness, appear to be seized with the railway fever and are desirous of having a railway constructed which will confer on them the same benefits and privileges which we have derived from it. Next to the railway the telegraph claims an especial notice, and numerous are the advantages which it affords to us. By means of it we are enabled to communicate at the speed of lightning with our friends in the remotest parts of the Province, and even to send messages across the wide ocean, which is of no small benefit to us.

Although the climate of Canada may not be so mild as that of the sunny south, the air is very healthy and free from [illegible]. The soil is fertile and produces in abundance not only all the necessaries but some of the luxuries of life. All kinds of grain are cultivated to a great extent and the timber with its gigantic trees is very valuable. A large amount of beef is annually exported. The more delicate fruits, such as the apple and the pear, attain to great perfection.

Canada is also rich in minerals. Gold is said to have been discovered in many places which, if it prove correct, will be an additional source of wealth to the country; also, silver, iron, lead copper and marble are found in abundance; petroleum is found in large quantities, besides a number of minerals too numerous to mention in a sketch like this.

Canada has progressed in educational advantages as well as in commerce. Public schools were built soon after its discovery, besides several for the instruction of the Indians exclusively; and, now, Canada can boast a number of Universities, Colleges and Grammar Schools. What a contrast our spacious and well school houses present when compared with the leaky furnished log schools in which some forefathers received their very limited education; and those times the higher branches of literature were taught except in the Universities. Many changes have taken place since the first white man set his foot upon our shores. Then, the greater part of it was an unbroken forest and the only inhabitants were Indians. Large and wealthy cities occupy the places where rather were a few straggling villages. Our own thriving town of Peterborough may serve as an example. Within the memory of some of its present inhabitants it was then a wilderness, presenting an inviting aspect to the early settlers. Then Champlain sailed down the Otonabee river or camped on its green shores, he little imagined that 250 years later on a place not far distant we should be assembled in this spacious hall exhibiting our literary talents of our ignorance as it may be.

Surely a country which possesses so many resources and advantages for commercial, if they are used rightly, is destined to occupy at no very distant date an important place in the history of the world. One year ago it commenced the promises of Upper and Lower Canada now the name is applied to New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario and Quebec. We have almost entered on the second year of our new career as a dominion and, like most other nations, we have a national holiday, the 1st July, which is celebrated as a holiday in all parts of the country.

The Cost of England's Liquor Bill.

The Board of Trade returns showed that during the year ending September, 1867, and all the national returns ended in September we bought home consumption 14,627,916 gallons of wine, 27,178,508 gallons of home and foreign spirits, and 913,920,904 gallons of ale and beer, being more than one pint of a gallon of wine, nearly a gallon of spirits, and more than forty gallons of ale and beer for every man, woman and child in the United Kingdom, as had been decidedly a statistical gentleman, enough drink was sought in the kingdom last year to fill a small reservoir, wide, and two yards deep from John O'Groat's to the Land's End in Cornwall. In the produce and adjoining liquors we consumed last year in round numbers, 8½ million quarters of grain, to say nothing of grapes, apples, &c., employed for a similar purpose; and, as even men consumed to [illegible] about one quarter a year, the grain consumed in the production of drink would have been enough to feed eight millions, or more than a quarter of our people. To supply the place of the grain thus wasted we had to import nearly 20 millions of money amongst foreigners to buy enough to feed the people. The produce of 1,400,000 acres of land was used in the manufacture of the liquor. The consumption of sheep, the creatures of the market places, and the best dairies show an increase in the same rates, were all forced to produce less cheaply and as from the character of the trade they could afford to pay a rent which the farmers can only offer, competition was out of the question. Last year we spent on wine £9,000,000, on malt liquor £30,000,000, on spirits £13,000,000 making a total of our drink bill for the year of 130 millions of money or more than £4 for every man, woman and child in the kingdom, and more than £14 for every family. The whole of our national expenditure, including the interest on the national debt, the army, navy, and civil service only amounts to some £56,591,910, being many millions less than our drink bill. If the huge sum of 130 millions had been spent on any other article of food, we could have had something to put for which we might very well repine to. But how does this expenditure affect the health of the people? More than 1,200 of the elite of our medical men had published a declaration that these drinks were the necessaries as a beverage; that these accustomed to take the weight discontinue them as unsafe perfect safety; and that entire abstinence from them would contribute to the life, prosperity, morality and happiness of the human family. Dr. Chambers said, "We must cease to regard drink as food, unless it leaves the body as it entered it." Dr. Monk said, "It is of very little use to the man." Dr. Markham, when editor of the British Medical Journal, in summing up a controversy which had been carried on through those columns, said, "We are to consider it proved that [illegible] that, being simply a stimulant to the nervous system, its use is inimical to the body of a healthy man." Dr. Edward Smith, brother of the Rev. Gervase Smith, one who had devoted, had recently, he believed, the sacrifice of the Queen, said, "A man attacked that it is entirely useless." The Lancet said that "no intelligent man will regard it as food and but even as medicine the era to [illegible] nowhere, but between a meal and sickness, between little and more." These are many facts to prove these statements correct. In ordinary insurance offices, the average number of deaths per thousand was 11, and they might generally correspond that persons who insured took care of their health, and had the advantage in the [illegible] of their lives. In the Temperance Provident Association, where the members were only abstainers, the average for eight years was only eight in a thousand. So we have facts to show that several other companies took a separate account for customers in order that they might have the benefit of their abstemious habits, which is a publican would be [illegible] even any time. It was said when temperance principles were first generally practiced in this country, that they might do very well for cotton operatives, but not for the agricultural classes. The Duke of Garrett was a native of one of the agricultural counties, and he remembered that discussion ran high on this topic on the introduction of temperance principles, and at length ended in six teetotalers challenging six drinkers to a contest at mowing. It must confess that he felt a good deal [illegible] as to the result. The day appointed for the trial at length came. It was a beautiful morning, and a great many spectators assembled. The men appeared to be well pitted, but by the last time, to his horror, the teetotalers were in the rear and the drinkers in front. But [illegible] they were side by side; by three o'clock the teetotalers were behind; and at six o'clock [illegible] the [illegible] of all assembled the teetotalers won the prize, and left the competitors "nowhere." As [illegible] he [illegible] great men, he could only say that the [illegible] Lane to Father Matthew, [illegible] Jackson, General Grant, Garibaldi, Dr. Livingstone, Garibaldi, Charles and not forget that Garibaldi stood up under the mass of the people and said, "Good [illegible] I have done my life's work, done pure water"—if Henry Ward Beecher, Horace Noel, Newman Hall and C. H. Spurgeon were not great men he should [illegible] to see a few that were greater. [illegible] ence to the effects of the cask trade on the labor market, he said that trade would [illegible] from the labor market. Adam Smith, political economist said that all the [illegible] expended on producing strong drink was utterly unproductive; it added nothing to the wealth of the country. It had been computed that if twenty shillings a week was [illegible] on any other article, from sixteen shillings went to the worker, but if they expended it on drink, not one shilling would go to him. If the money spent on [illegible] were [illegible] in the home market which all trades [illegible] could not enable them to supply. It is [illegible] that [illegible] the possibility of bringing coal, plentiful [illegible] to the midnight [illegible] of misery.

Lord Shaftesbury recently stated [illegible] March that a [illegible] of 9 [illegible] of insanity among [illegible] other cause not [illegible] intemperance. After [illegible] the case a number of [illegible] were caused by intemperance. Mr. Gough [illegible] I have shown you that [illegible] drink is a most dangerous one, and that, moreover, [illegible] and a loss. It is an [illegible] which we regret terrible [illegible] to [illegible] cause, madness, misery, [illegible] death; but to [illegible] for [illegible] future we have work houses [illegible] powers, the value of labor [illegible] to [illegible] of food raised, and the [illegible] agencies, and wealth of the [illegible] [illegible] danger. This [illegible] of [illegible] has plunged at least 5,000 families [illegible] misery, turned 10,000 [illegible] into [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] 50,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 60,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 70,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 80,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 90,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 100,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 110,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 120,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 130,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 140,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 150,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 160,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 170,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 180,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 190,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 200,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 210,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 220,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 230,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 240,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 250,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 260,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 270,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 280,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 290,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 300,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 310,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 320,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 330,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 340,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 350,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 360,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 370,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 380,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 390,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 400,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 410,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 420,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 430,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 440,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 450,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 460,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 470,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 480,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 490,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 500,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 510,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 520,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 530,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 540,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 550,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 560,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 570,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 580,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 590,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 600,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 610,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 620,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 630,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 640,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 650,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 660,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 670,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 680,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 690,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 700,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 710,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 720,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 730,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 740,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 750,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 760,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 770,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 780,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 790,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 800,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 810,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 820,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 830,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 840,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 850,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 860,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 870,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 880,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 890,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 900,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 910,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 920,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 930,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 940,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 950,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 960,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 970,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 980,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 990,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,000,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,010,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,020,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,030,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,040,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,050,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,060,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,070,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,080,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,090,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,100,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,110,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,120,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,130,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,140,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,150,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,160,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,170,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,180,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,190,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,200,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,210,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,220,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,230,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,240,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,250,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,260,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,270,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,280,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,290,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,300,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,310,000 [illegible] to [illegible] 1,320,000

The Prince of Wales and John Bright.

A letter from London to the Chicago Tribune states the following:

"The Royal Academy dinner given before the exhibition of paintings is opened to the world, is one of the most exclusive in England, Cabinet ministers and a few dignitaries are invited by right of their position, but on Academician who wishes a person not of that class to be invited must subject his name to a ballot, wherein one black ball is fatal. Mr. Bright is an admirer of paintings, and some one, without his knowledge, has put one or two or three occasions suggested that he be asked to become a guest. Up to this year, however, a black ball has excluded him. To the dinner just held he was invited unanimously. The Prince of Wales, who was in the room, seeing Mr. Bright in the room, shook hands with him and had a long talk with the Radical chief. The Prince then expressed to the managers of the dinner a desire that Mr. Bright should be called upon to speak, and suggested that he respond to the toast of the House of Commons.—This, however, was impracticable, another member having already been requested to perform the duty. It was then proposed to intimate a toast to 'Trade and Commerce,' and Mr. Bright was begged to speak upon it; but whether he guessed that he was being asked to speak for mere curiosity's sake or not, or for some other reason, he declined to be among the orators of the night. Before the company separated the Prince of Wales told Mr. Bright he had felt nervous in having to propose so many sentiments. Mr. Bright said there was no reason for his nervousness, as he had spoken very well. 'Oh,' said the Prince, 'it was not the company which made me nervous, but the task of having to speak before so great an orator as yourself.' While everything is told which can depict the Prince of Wales as careless, and we know not what, a circumstance which shows his good sense and his independence of the commonest prejudices of the aristocratic class ought not to be omitted.

Transplanting Strawberries.

When you have plenty of ground, never plant the rows closer than two feet, and the plants 16 inches apart in the rows. If you have not plants of the best varities on your own grounds, do not fail to secure them from some point nearest you. You can much better afford to grow a good variety than an inferior one. Unless you wish to test every variety that is brought to notice, push to only those which have been well tried and found hardy, productive, and of good quality. Not one-fifth of all that are advertised are worthy of general cultivation.

Of all the varieties of the strawberry sent to this market, the Wilson furnishes more than one-half. It is more eagerly sought after and brings the highest price, unless the Triomphe de Gand is excepted. Of the latter variety, but few are found in market, for the double reason that it is only a moderate bearer and will not endure transportation. In this respect, no berry produced equals the Wilson. It is successfully sent from Pittsburgh to New York, and we saw it in perfection in the central and western parts of our own State the present season, brought from Southern New Jersey, weeks in anticipation of ripe fruit in those localities.

But to the subject of transplanting. When your ground is properly prepared and duly marked, let the openings be made of suitable depth and sufficiently broad to receive the plants with the roots fully spread in all directions. These should be freely wet and the roots spread equally on all sides. Then sprinkle fine earth over them, leaving a cavity of saucer-shape around each, on the surface, for a copious watering or saturation of the earth around each plant. When the water is absorbed, the fresh earth should be drawn over, to avoid the incrustation of the surface. Should a drought immediately follow transplanting before the roots become dry, open again the surface around each plant, and water to complete saturation for three or four inches around and below the roots, and, when it has subsided, again cover with fresh earth that the surface may be freely aerated after watering. If the dry weather continues, repeat the operation; but don't repeat it, as is sometimes done, daily, by the watering-pot, to the depth of not more than an inch, which, without essential relief, roasts the earth, and, if the plants survive, they make little growth. If these directions are followed you may rely on a fair yield of fruit next season.—N. Y. Observer.

THE BEST STRAWBERRY.—A New York city dealer in fruit writes to the Rural New Yorker as follows:—"I presume some growers would like to hear the result of the different varieties that were sent to market, and the condition they arrived in; for this is one of the most important items to a grower. I have made close an constant observation on this point all through the season, so far as my business would permit, and I think that the Wilson is pre-eminently ahead of all others for transportation purposes, and to growers living in Delaware or other distant parts, is about the only berry worth planting. I received from one person in Delaware, part of his crop of Wilsons, grown on less than one third of an acre, 1,238 quarts, which sold for $454 87. The balance, 622 quarts he reserved for his customers. They were very fine, and packed better than any I have seen this season. I will discover his plan for the benefit of those who would like to follow it. After picking in the patch, they are taken into a cool room, each basket turned out on a table, all soft and green ones removed, and the baskets filled rounding full; the top berries are all turned with the bulk down, which gives them a very handsome appearance. The berries are so neatly and firmly packed in the baskets that scarcely one berry moves during the trip from Delaware. While speaking of the Wilsons, I will give you the result of another patch. Mr. Kearney, residing near New Brunswick, N. J., informs me that he had one place planted in berries, 80 yards long and 16 wide, from which he picked 4,000 pints that returned him $307."

SETTING STRAWBERRY PLANTS.—It is not generally known that in setting strawberry plants, especially in a dry time, it is of great importance to bury the whole of the runner which leads from the parent plant. If this reaches damp ground, the newly set plant receives nearly the same amount of nutritical support by its means that it did before its removal. If you want fruit next season, don't wait to the last of August or September but set your plants at once, and let them be getting established. Latest plants not only amount to but little for next years fruiting, but stand a very poor chance to survive the winter. Yet I have planted late with excellent success, as far as withstanding the winter is concerned, simply by using the runner in this way.—Rural New Yorker.

Serious Riots in France against Members of the Clergy.

Two departments of the south of France have recently been the scenes of serious riots, caused by the apprehension on the part of country people that the system of tithes was to be re-established to support the clergy. It has not yet been discovered what circumstance gave rise to these suspicions; but the violence displayed against several parish priests show that in some localities the clergy have entertained any hopes in that direction, they must give them up for ever.

The French newspapers are filled with details of the troubles which, singularly enough, have simultaneously taken place in several localities. At Domezic, bands of peasants, to the number of more than seven hundred, have attacked and seriously insulted the priests of several neighboring villages; the names of eleven of whom have been given as severely ill-treated. They threatened to kill them if they ever attempted to impose tithes again. On the square fronting the church, they appeared armed with guns, pitchforks, swords, long wooden diggers sharply pointed; and, when the host was presented to appease or awe them, they cried, 'down with religion, down with the priests, down with big tithes, down with the cross; we must kill all the priests; down with the tithes; long live the Emperor!' They had penetrated into the church and had carried the altar, when a detachment of cavalry came from a neighboring city and dispersed the infuriated crowd. Some arrests were made, and the leaders condemned to light fines and short imprisonment. We can gather from the different narratives that these demonstrations were not at all of a political nature, but merely the result of the fear of a renewal of old grievances, and a proof of the profound ignorance in which the clerical party have succeeded in keeping the rural population of France.—Witness.

FEARFUL PENAL SETTLEMENT.—An American contemporary draws a fearful sketch of the penal settlement to which American felons are consigned. What Siberia is to Russia, Cayenne to France, Fernando Po to Spain, what Norfolk Island to England, the Dry Tortugas are to the United States. Situated at the southern extremity of Florida, these burning coral reefs, secluded by a single tree, unfurnished by a single source, bear no sign of human habitation save the huts in which the wretched transports linger, and the barracks in which the almost equally wretched soldiers who guard them are sheltered. From year's end to year's end the rays of an almost vertical sun beat upon the Dry Tortugas with unremitting intensity; yellow fever is ever rife there; and no animal life, save that of the prisoners and their guard, is possible by reason of the absence of all vegetation and fresh water. A prisoner who had served out his sentence in the Dry Tortugas, and had been restored to active society, would be welcomed at Barnum's Museum as a rare curiosity.

The London Times of the 6th informs us that the proposed new route by land and water from Canada to the Pacific was attracting some attention on Change and among capitalists. As our readers are probably aware, the suggestion is, that it should start from Collingwood, or Georgian Bay, and consist of river and lake navigation for about 2,400 miles out of the entire 3,200 to Vancouver's Island. The Times remarks—

"The Canadian Government, it is said, have agreed to open that portion between Lake Superior and Fort Garry, a distance of about 500 miles of which 300 are navigable, and the Government of British Columbia are expected by grants of land to facilitate the work though their territory. It is affirmed that that the expense would be comparatively light, and that the undertaking might be completed in less than two years, when passengers would be enabled to make the transit in about eighteen days. Mr. Alfred Waddington, of Victoria Vancover Island, has been the most prominent advocate of the enterprise, and is to describe its features in detail, especially as regards the pass by the Rocky Mountains, at the Geographical Society on Monday."

The Army and Navy Gazette says:—Our readers are aware that there is a probability of another Fenian raid on Canada, and that in such a case troops would be sent from the mother country to protect one of her most extensive colonies. The 3rd and 5th companies of the battalion of the Royal Marine Light Infantry have been stationed in Fort Camden, in Ireland, since the 1st of January, having gone over there during the Fenian troubles in that then unhappy Island. Now what place would be better to send them than to the lakes on the borders of Canada and the States; they are sailors, soldiers and artillerists, and are accustomed to all the different appointments of the three services, and besides they would enable those regiments who have completed their term of foreign service to return home. It will be necessary to keep a battalion in Ireland, but a fresh one be sent over, and an organized one sent to Canada; as our readers are, no doubt, aware that no better troops than the battalion now stationed in Ireland could be got for such service, for, if necessity required, they could employed on board gunboats, or in any other way on the water.

There was a rumor on the streets yesterday that Mr. McDOUGALL will vacate the Public Works for the Inland Revenue Department, now vacant by the appointment of Mr. HOWLAND to the position of Governor of Ontario. We do not know whether any credit can be attached to the report; and merely publish it as so much political gossip.—Citizen.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

THE INSPECTION A GRAND SUCCESS.

THE PRESENTATION OF COLORS.

It is needless to remark that the most lively interest has been manifested by the people of this County and Town in the volunteer movement, and the appreciation of the efforts put forth by those who have been instrumental in getting up companies and maintaining them in a state of efficiency, has been more than once tangibly expressed. There is no room for doubt that to organize and maintain a volunteer company requires a sacrifice of time, money and ease, that very few are willing to make for the good of their country. The readiness, however, with which the County and Town Councils have come forward to assist, must tend to encourage both officers and men.

THE INSPECTION.

On Monday evening Lieut.-Col. Jarvis, accompanied by Brigade Major Patterson, inspected the Battalion in the large field north of the Rev. Mr. Gilmour's residence. Long before the time appointed, crowds of people were seen on the grounds, and by the hour of six o'clock, p. m., almost one half the town, the majority ladies, appeared to be in the field. When Lieut.-Col. Jarvis appeared, the Battalion was drawn up in line, and as he passed up and down both front and rear of the men, he several times expressed his entire satisfaction with their fine soldier-like appearance, singling out No. 1, Peterboro; No. 4, Ashburnham, and the Norwood company as particularly fine looking men. The Battalion then went through various evolutions, marching and counter marching, &c., the Inspecting Officer placing himself in a position to see to best advantage, and during the whole he was heard again and again to say that they did well, several of the companies being almost equal to the Regulars in their movements and in their efficiency in drill.

PRESENTATION.

About seven o'clock the Battalion formed into three sides of a rectangle. The colors then to be presented were brought out and carried to the rear. Before this the drums were placed in front of the men about fifty yards distant; the banners were then brought and placed across the drums, and Majors Kennedy and Leigh placed one at each flag; the two Ensigns stood midway between the Majors.

Mrs. Carnegie, accompanied by Mrs. Gilmour, Mrs. Kemp, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. John J. Hall, Mrs. Ramsome, and two or three other ladies whose names we did not learn, then came forward. Mrs. Robert Dennistoun and Mrs. McKerris had taken active part in obtaining funds for the colors, but were unavoidably absent from the presentation.

Rev. V. M. Clementi, Incumbent of Lakefield, at this stage, read the following prayer, consecrating the banners to their appointed service:—

Most holy and glorious Lord God, who art the giver of all good graces, and who hast promised that where two or three are gathered together in Thy Name Thou wilt be in the midst of them, we most humbly beseech Thee to bless us in all our undertakings, and to vouchsafe us the aid of Thy Holy Spirit to enlighten and to sanctify us.

More particularly we implore Thy favorable recognition of our present purpose and to grant that the colours now about to be consecrated may never be reared upon the battle-field, but for the purpose of vindicating our honour as a christian people and of defending our altars and our hearths.

May those who, at any time hereafter, shall be called upon to fight beneath these banners, be endued with courage, with constancy, and with moderation; and do Thou, the God of battles, give them, ever, victory over their foes and grace to use that victory aright as true soldiers of the glorious cross; and may they never forget "that the Lord saveth not with sword and spear, for the battle is the Lord's;" and when, finally, the last good fight is fought and when the battle is won, do Thou, O God, bring us all to Thine eternal abode, in peace, even to the haven of eternal rest.

We now consecrate these colours to the service of Almight God, to the service of the Queen of England, and to the service of the Dominion of Canada.

Major Kennedy then took one of them and reached it to Mrs. Carnegie, who had been deputed, on behalf of the Ladies of Peterborough, to present them to the Battalion, and she presented it to Ensign Dudman of No. 4 Company, who received it kneeling. Major Kennedy did the same with the other flag, and Mrs. Carnegie presented it to Ensign Johnston of No. 1 Company. It was received in the same manner. She then read the following address:—

To the Officers, Non-commissioned Officers and Men of the 57th Battalion;—

The Ladies of Peterborough, desirous of marking in some tangible form their earnest appreciation of the Canadian Volunteers in general, and more particularly of those who compose your battalion, request your acceptance of those, the Queen's Colors and Battalion Flag, as a tribute of their respect and admiration, as well as of your services in the past as of those which we are assured will be readily accorded in the future whenever the enemies of our country may require them.

We know that the ready sacrifice of private and personal considerations to the various duties you owe to your character as citizen-soldiers, proceeds from that sincere spirit of patriotism that is well nigh inseparable from humanity, but which more particularly characterizes the British subject wherever sun may shine upon him.

We know that in the past when the terrible scenes of war with all their dreadful consequences approached us, from imperial considerations alone Canadian sympathy and Canadian patriotism came quickly to the surface and found their speedy vent in the formation of Volunteer Companies and Drill Associations.

That more recently still when the limits of our territory were dared by an armed association less formidable indeed than our information assured us of, the Canadian Volunteers, moved by a common sentiment rushed to their arms and were only too impetuous in their zeal to drive the detested band from our shores.

And in pride do we know that the volunteers from this County, their ranks completed from every industry, leaving but the memory of dear ones at home a secondary consideration to the inviolable rights of their country, were quickly on the march in the confident assurance that ere many hours the God of battles would watch over their conflict with a rock-ess and desperate foe.

We gather from the circumstances of the country that our protection, the protection of our firesides and our families must in the future mainly depend upon the martial efficiency and patriotism and zeal of the citizen soldiers, and viewing the future in the light of the past, we can find no margin for doubt that these qualities will ever be wanting in the Canadian Dominion.

It is our earnest prayer that the Giver of all good may so dispose the future history of this Dominion as to relieve you from ever carrying the colors consecrated to-day into the confusion of battle. We are equally earnest in expressing our confidence that whenever overtaken in conflicts of war, which God forbid, you will surround them with your protection as an emblem alike of your duty to your Queen and your country, and of the anxious solicitations of those you have left behind you.

Lieut. Col. Poole replied:—

To the Ladies of Peterborough:—

On behalf of my brother officers and the men under my command, I have great pleasure in returning my sincere thanks for the very handsome flags presented to the 57th Battalion.

We can not at present point to any military achievements to adorn them, but I am confident that should the occasion arise which might place us on the battle field, the 57th would not disgrace the colors place in their charge to defend, and that should it be our fate to encounter the horde of bandits now threatening the peace of our shores, we will be able to show ourselves worthy of so sacred a charge and give a good account of ourselves in the encounter.

You have spoken of the sacrifice made by the Volunteers. I can only say, and I believe I speak the sentiment of the whole of my command, that what sacrifices have been made, and whatever trial and trouble have been undergone, (and the path of the Volunteer is not strewn with roses) we are willing and eager to undergo again and again in defence of our country and of that flag which held its honorable position as the first and foremost among nations, unsullied and sustained for so many generations. It is at all times gratifying to persons, even when doing no more than their duty, to find that their services are duly appreciated, and in this particular the 57th Battalion has been especially fortunate in receiving, not only from the Ladies of Peterborough but from the inhabitants of the County generally, many marks of the high estimation in which the Battalion is held.

Again thanking you for the splendid present you have this day given us, which as long as the Battalion has life and strength it shall never be disgraced by falling into the hand of an enemy, and which it shall be the pride and duty of every one of us to defend at the sacrifice of our lives, and should it please God that it should ever be necessary for us to face a foe on the terrible battle field, I trust that we may follow the colors with glory and honor, and place the name and fame of the 57th Battalion amongst those eminent for their courage and gallantry, and thus prove ourselves worthy to carry these colors.

I have the honor to be,
Your most obed't serv't,
EDWIN POOLE,
Lt. Col. 57th Battalion.

Peterborough, 13th July, 1868.

The colors, we understand, will cost over $200.

These ceremonies being through, the Battalion was again put through different parts of their drill, until the darkness prevented their being seen. They were then arranged, the two wings facing each other, when Col. Jarvis addressed the officers and men in the most flattering terms. He highly praised the appearance and drill of the Ashburnham and No. 1 Companies, and the fine soldier like appearance of the Norwood Co'y., and of the Bobcaygeon Co'y., and expressed a desire that it should be attached to the 57th Battalion. He also said that the whole Battalion was about the best in his district—there might be one better but it was very doubtful—and he declared that they were equal to Regulars in their appearance, efficiency in drill and marching. He felt that a particular honor had been done him in presenting the Queen's Colors during his visit for inspection, and he knew that the 57th Battalion would never allow them to receive a stain. He several times venerated the commendations of the officers and men, and was heard to declare that our Volunteer Band is the best in the Province, and the only one that knew how to conduct itself properly during a review. It must be very gratifying to Lieut.-Col. Poole and the officers and men of his Battalion to thus receive the highest encomiums while we understand that other Battalions have received blame. It is doubly pleasing to know that this County has the best Battalion of volunteers, and one, too, that if their services are required will do their duty. Mr. Rackett, Bandmaster, must feel proud that his labors to make the 57th Battalion Band a good one has been successful.

Presentation to Major Kennedy.

On Tuesday morning just before the Volunteers were relieved to return home, Mayor Scott on behalf of the citizens of Peterboro, presented Major Kennedy with a fine charger and trappings, valued at about $150, as a token of their appreciation of his labors in the volunteer movement in this county. The following is the address:—

To Major John Kennedy, 57th Battalion:—

SIR—It becomes my pleasant duty to inform you that your fellow citizens appreciating your long service in the volunteer cause, and appreciating your worth as a good fellow subject, and your loyalty to your Queen and country, have thought fit as a mark of their esteem for you to present you with a horse for use upon military duty.

We are all conscious of the many sacrifices which you have made in the respect and of your valuable services in giving practical effect to the patriotism of your fellow citizens, and I feel glad of the opportunity now presented of thus giving you this tangible token of public respect and esteem.

I have the honor then in the name of the citizens of Peterborough to present to you this charger with its trappings, hoping that you may never be called upon to use it in the battle field, but knowing full well that when your country calls, you and your citizen soldiers will not be slow to uphold the honor of your Queen and country,

To which Major Kennedy replied as follows:—

MR. MAYOR—Through you I beg to tender to the citizens of Peterborough my heartfelt thanks for the honor you have this day done in presenting to me this magnificient charger and its equipment.

You alluded to my long service in the volunteer cause. I have never felt it any hardship to serve my country, because I have always felt that my greatest services were not sufficient to pay for the honor and privelege of living under the glorious old flag of Britain.

I accept this presentation the more readily since I feel that by it is intended as honor, not to myself only, but to the volunteers of the Peterborough Battalion. On their behalf then as well as my own I thank you, and I assure you that when duty calls it will be found that the Peterboro' Battalion will "every man do his duty."

The Volunteers then separated each for his own quarters, and shortly after left town for their homes, and it is very satisfactory to us to be able to say that they behaved themselves well while here. There was less air and less drinking done by them than would have been if one fourth their numbers of the general community had been in their places for the same time.

Captains H. Rogers, J. Z. Rogers, H. D. Sheffield and ——Grover must feel very proud of the eulogies passed on their respective companies but we may be allowed to add without encroaching on military matters, that the other companies were not highly spoken of, but, on the contrary highly praised as part of the battalion and most assuredly they deserved it. No. 5, for instance, was not organized till after the raid, the Lakefield Company is composed largely of lumbermen and others who are scattered far and near, and the Hastings Company consists of fine looking fellows; a little more time to drill will make them all that can be desired, and this, we feel confident will be attended to. To become efficient in drill requires time, a year or two will hardly suffice. The Town and County Council paid the men 40 cents a day towards paying for their billets during their drill.

ASHBURNHAM PRESENTATION.

It always gives us pleasure to record anything connected with the Volunteers and we are therefore much pleased to give place in our columns to an account of a presentation to Mrs. Rogers, wife of Major R. D. Rogers, by the members of the Ashburnham Volunteer Company. This Company on Tuesday morning last having finished their drill with the battalion were entertained at a breakfast in the Drill Shed. After the breakfast the non-commissioned officers and men signified to Mrs. Rogers their desire to mark their appreciation of her uniform kindness to the Company. The Company having been formed in line the following address was read by Sergt. G. Brown:—

To Mrs. Rogers:

MADAM.—The non commissioned officers and men of the Ashburnham Company being desirous of marking their appreciation of the interest you have always taken in them, have requested me to present you on their behalf this small gift.

You have always been ready to make us comfortable when called out on duty, and the thought that you would greet us when assembled has always been an incentive to us to muster with alacrity when called on, and we assure you that when we cease to be members of this company, we shall always esteem you as a true friend of the Volunteers in general and of ourselves in particular.

We hope that God may grant you long to live and that you may be happy and prosperous in all things.

The address was suitably responded to by Major Rogers on behalf of Mrs. Rogers.

The gift was a beautiful Porcelain Lamp, highly ornamented. The presentation is highly creditable to the donors, and we feel sure that Mrs. Rogers must feel highly gratified by the attention shewn her by the members of this company. After three hearty cheers for Mrs. Rogers the company was dismissed. Success to the Ashburnham Volunteers.

JULY THIRTEENTH.

The 12th of July, the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne, having fallen on Sunday this year there was no demonstration, and as a large number of the volunteer force is composed of Orangemen and they being on duty, it was deemed best by the brotherhood to commemorate the day by a supper. Accordingly at 9 o'clock about 180 persons, Orangemen and the Officers of the 57th Battalion, sat down to an elegant repast, got up in Cronin's best style.

Mr. Hatton, County Master, occupied the chair, and on his right and left were Col. Poole and the other officers of the Battalion, and Messrs. Perry, M. P., Carnegie, M. P., and Scott, Mayor.

After partaking of the good things provided and a flowing bumper prepared, Brother Hatton gave "The Queen, God bless her."

It is needless to say that this toast was received most heartily.

The "Prince and Princess of Wales and Royal Family" followed.

"Her Majesty's Representative" was next given.

Then came the toast of the evening, the "glorious, pious and immortal memory of William the Third, Prince of Orange," to whom England owed so much and who established her principles and constitution on so liberal and enlightened a basis.

The band played the "Boyne Water."

At this stage in the proceedings, Mr. Hatton read a letter from the Warden, S. S. Peck, Esq., regretting that owing to the fact that this year, the first celebration of this day in the County of Stanley was to take place at Minden, and as a consequence he could not be present. We may remark that this County of Stanley is merely in relation to this society as yet; it embraces all east of the Bobcaygeon road and north of the lakes, we believe.

Mr. Hatton next gave "The Army and Navy of England, coupled with the Canadian Volunteers," remarking that the Army and Navy of Great Britain deserved the highest encomiums. They were ever ready to fight for our rights, as the late contest in Abyssinia showed, and Britain was always ready to honor the men who were distinguished in her battles, as she had done in the case of Gen. Napier, who had just been knighted.

Col. Poole gave way to Lieut. Morton, of the Hastings Company of Volunteers, a veteran who had served 21 years in the regular service.

Lieut Morton thanked them for the honors done him both as an old soldier and as a volunteer. He had gone to fight the enemy of his country and was ready to go as a volunteer, if required. He knew every volunteer was ready to go, and side by side defend their Queen, their country and their freedom. He was proud to belong to the 57th battalion, such a noble battalion, and he was sure it needed they would do their duty.

Col. Poole also returned thanks from the bottom of his heart. He had always taken an interest in the volunteer force, and he doubly did so to-day. He was proud of his battalion and he knew that both the officers and men were ready to do their duty.

Major Kennedy was very much pleased to respond to this toast, and especially so on the sun ver-ary of the battle of the Boyne, and on the day of the volunteer inspection. Every Orangeman was loyal and would be a volunteer if required, although he did not consider that they alone were loyal. On this day was established liberty for all British subjects of every creed, but an enemy think so. The Town of Peterboro and the Ladies of Peterboro had done the volunteers an honor, and he felt certain that if they were called on, their hearts would be in the right place, and that they would prove an honor to the volunteer force, inasmuch as they were then assembled to honor the mighty dead.

Major Leigh, in responding, remarked he could not say brother as he was not an Orangeman, but he wished them well and thanked them for the honor done to the volunteers in the manner the toast had been received.

Captains J. Z. Rogers, H. Rogers, Green, Adjutant Kennedy and Ensign Johnston also returned thanks in behalf of the volunteers. Ensign Johnston remarking that never had brother Orangemen pleased him better than they did this year, when they resolved to stay at home rather than go without their brethren who were forced to obey orders, and it would redound to their honor and praise for years.

Bro. Thos. Chambers, 1st vice, gave the "Representatives of Parliament of this County."

Mr. Perry, in responding, thanking them for the honors, said he had not long been their representative and therefore had not had time to do much good or evil; he was no Orangeman but he was as good a protestant as any man, notwithstanding all the calumny heaped upon him, and he would continue to be so.

Mr. Carnegie was pleased to be present at an anniversary of William, Prince of Orange, and thanked the Orangemen for the manner in which they had received the toast.

Mr. Stratton then gave "The Volunteer Drill Association of the County of Peterboro'," remarking that on a shooting subject he hardly knew what to say, as he had never shot at any man and never was shot at; but as he supposed, the object of the Association was to prepare to shoot the Fenians if they came across, he hoped the members would become good shots and that every shot would be a man.

In the absence of the President, Rev V. M. Clementi, Col. Poole and Mr. Carnegie responded, urging those present to become members as it would only cost one dollar a year.

Major Kennedy gave the "County Council," who had ever come forward liberally to aid the volunteers.

Bro. W. A. Scott, Reeve of Harvey, on behalf of the County Council, responded, and said that the County as such knows no party, but he knew they were willing to do anything reasonable for the volunteers.

Bro. Weir, Master of 484, then gave the "Town Council," to which Mayor Scott responded very happily. He was not an Orangeman but wished them success, and was willing to aid them all in his power to uphold the British Constitution.

The "Press" and the "Ladies" followed.

Mr. Stratton responded on behalf of the Press, and the Ladies were not forgotten.

The party then broke up in the most orderly manner, after spending a very pleasant evening, and wishing for the return of many more.

See R. Thompson & Sun's advertisement in another column.

SCHOOL PIC-NIC.

On Friday last the schools of sections Nos. 10 and 16 in the Township of Otonabee held their annual picnic in the grounds near Mr. Richard Stewart's dwelling. There was a large gathering of children and a number of parents and neighbors. The wood is a very nice one, and several swings erected for the amusement of the little ones indicated an interest in their pleasure and sports. About 2 o'clock Miss Benson and Miss Kennedy, teachers, arranged their respective schools on a platform erected for that purpose, each school being by itself, and then the pupils from each song alternately and recited several pieces. This occupied about an hour and a half. The people took a very lively interest in these proceedings, and the pupils, too, seemed to feel that there was competition. The singing was very nice and the pieces appropriate. What is very rare, the boys joined freely in the different pieces, and one piece was sung by the boys alone. Boys generally are louder of fun and frolic than of singing. It cannot, however, diminish the relish for sport to sing a little before it. The recitations were mostly from American works, owing, we suppose, to the difficulty of obtaining suitable Canadian or English works. This should as far as possible be avoided, and selections from Canadian or English authors provided for such occasions, so that Canadian youth may be early instructed in the principles of Canadian patriotism, and taught to repeat the virtues and heroism of our own countrymen instead of Americans. At the close of these exercises an abundance of good things was spread out for the children, and afterwards for those of riper years. We need hardly remark that all enjoyed this part of the proceedings, but the relish was heightened in no small degree by the exertions of Mrs. R. Stewart, who personally superintended the tea arrangements, to satisfy herself that it was of the best quality. All present amused themselves till the sun showed symptoms of removing, when, taking warning, the parties separated for their own ways. It was really worthy of praise to witness so many men leaving their hay harvest to encourage both pupils and teachers by their presence. The education of the children is the most sacred trust committed to a people, and it is very satisfactory to see them so actively alive to the responsibility.

THE SILVER NUISANCE.

We can hardly account for the apathy on this question in Peterboro. We know it is not because its annoyance and the loss sustained are not felt but for fear that nothing can be successfully done in the matter. Another effort should be made and see what can be done. Two or three brokers and one or two others who import silver to make again at the loss of the general trade and of the community, should not be allowed to rule the trade in this matter. Those who are dealing in silver and making a profit out of it will oppose any movement, but if it once be brought to the same discounts as in Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph and other places it will soon be transported to New York. The loss to any one in commencing a new rate of discount can only be on what silver he holds at the time, but what is that to wards being on all the silver taken in a year. If something is not soon done we will find the town flooded with dimes and half dimes, imported from Toronto at 8 per cent discount, and palmed off on us at par. Already some has been brought to town and we may look for more; the chance of making 8 per cent out of the people, even at the cost of the planet-cases of the thing is too tempting not to be tried. The mechanic, the laborer, the retail dealer and the seller of produce are all losers by the present unjust system of palming off silver, and it will continue unless something is done now when the cities are at work with a will. The Agent of the Bank of Montreal, in Toronto, offers his cooperation to send it away, and we learn from our Toronto exchanges that there is Canadian silver enough to meet the wants of the trade, but at present shut up in the banks and safes of merchants. There should be a public meeting called and an organization started. A little cooperation with the other places now working, would soon enable us to rid ourselves of this silver curse, and it is not our own but a curse from the land of Uncle Sam. Who will take the lead?

THE WEATHER.—The heat has been excessive here for some days; the thermometer ranged between 98° and 99° at the Grammar School Observatory, on Monday and Tuesday. In other parts of the Province it has ranged as high as 104°, at Ottawa, for instance. Very few seasons in many years have been so hot. The weather, too, is very dry. Farmers will commence the wheat harvest this week; the dry, hot weather has caused it to ripen very fast. We learn there are signs of rust lately, but to no great extent.

The Christian Guardian is to be discontinued. The Proprietors of the Hamilton Spectator have purchased the office and will remove to Toronto in a short time, it is said. The organ of the New Connection Methodists is also to be discontinued. There are difficulties in the way of successfully conducting religious newspapers, in a pecuniary point of view, or the Wesleyan body so strong and so wealthy would never think of giving up the enterprise.

DRINK FOR THE DOG DAYS.—Mr. Gordwin advertises suitable drinks for the hot weather. He has procured a very nice fountain, and an abundance of cooling, refreshing beverages.

Gen. Grant and Scoffax are the Republican ticket for President. Gov. Seymour, of N. Y. State, and Frank Blair, forms the Democratic ticket. Grant expects to win.

A boy named Elliott, son of Mr. Smith Elliott, was drowned while bathing above Dickson's Dam. A warning to those boys who venture too far.

Mrs. Craig, the wife of Thomas Craig, of Ashburnham, shot herself last week. Cause despondency.

The Quebec Chronicle says:—The ravages committed by firing the woods, in some cases by accident, in others by design or wanton carelessness, in different parts of the country, is said to be deplorable. In many instances the fire has swept everything before it, like the great sweeping fire of the Western Prairies. The loss of barns, cattle, and farm produce is said to be very serious in the county of Mackinonge; and in the neighbourhood of Lake St. Charles and Beauport the woods have been on fire to an alarming extent.

The last detachment of Canadian Papal Zouaves left Montreal on the 26th June.

The Conflict between Austria and the Pope.

(From the N. Y. Tribune.)

The breach between the Emperor Francis Joseph and the Pope, on account of the liberal reforms which have recently been introduced into Austria, is now complete. The Pope, in a solemn Allocution, not only in the strongest terms denounces the conduct of the Austrian Government, but he warns all persons who approve of the laws recently passed by the Reichsrath concerning the press, civil toleration, civil marriage, and public education, in honour of the spiritual privileges attached to violations of the sacred rights of the Church. The threat has had no effect upon the Government, but the Reichsrath were warned before their adjournment by the Prime Minister Von Beust, who is a Protestant, that the Government would enforce the reform laws.

To an American who is unacquainted with the theocratic policy of the Papal Government, these threats of the Pope must be almost wholly unintelligible. The law concerning the press destroys the influence of bishops upon literature, but grants by no means as extensive a liberty as we have in the United States. The new law on religious toleration establishes the principle that the State Government shall not prosecute any one on account of his religious conviction, and grants equal civil rights to the members of every creed; but it leaves to the Roman Catholic church, as State Church, very great privileges.—The law on civil marriages only provides that Catholics whom the ecclesiastical authorities refuse to marry may contract a valid marriage before an officer of the State. The law on public education deprives the public schools as far as the general direction, and, in particular, the selection of text-books, in some cases under the sole control of the State Government, though the instruction in religion of Catholic scholars remains, as heretofore, under the supervision of the Catholic bishops.

From this it will be seen that the new Austrian laws not only deprive the Ecclesiastical no right which they possess in a free country like the United States, but that they leave to them an influence upon public affairs, like education, which they have in no country with out a state Church. The reason why the Pope and the Bishops are, nevertheless, so indignant at the new laws, is that they actually repeal certain provisions of the famous Concordat of 1855, which granted to the church, and in particular to the Bishops, very extensive, and, in the opinion of the Liberal party, very odious and oppressive privileges. It is on partic ar the following provisions of the Concordat which the new legislation refuses any longer to enforce, and practically sets aside: "The instruction of the Roman Catholic youth must be in accordance with the Roman Catholic religion. The Bishops have the power to restrain the faithful from reading pernicious books. Cases of the canon law, especially on rings affairs, belong to the ecclesiastical courts. Church and State will work together for the suppression of books against religion and morals". A comparison of these extracts from the Concordat with the new laws at once shows that, although the latter do not yet carry out the principle of separation between Church and State they tend toward a restriction of the power of the Bishops and of the Church to those which of their own accord submit to the teachings of the church. The new laws do not interfere with the right of the Bishops of denouncing all books contrary to the Catholic religion, of establishing free Catholic schools, of solemnizing any such marriages as forbid all the conditions imposed by the Church; but they deny that the Bishops may claim the assistance of the State Government for the compulsory execution of these principles against any Austrian

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Colics and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind, is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It effectually cures the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells the congestible lymph that secretion which in Heaves clogs the air cells causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural size, by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciate extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent stony stooms, and sometimes constipative bile, pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child derive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant medicine.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 9th June, 1862.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me, having inherited a scrofulous taint in it. I have suffered from it in various ways for years. It manifested it first out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and troublesome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was induced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla). I'll knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful once a month, and used almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Pabst M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1865, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Dry Spring by large doses of the same; says he has cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Zebulon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre or Swelled throat as big as my head, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which it is recommended by and especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous Diathesis. I have cured many interesting cases of Leucorrhœa by its use, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for those female derangements."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newbury, Mo., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remained."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS 21st August, 1862.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and resort to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease, one of my patients in Public service, in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was afflicted with secondary symptoms in his nose and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. I succeeded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed and he is well again as of course without some obstruction to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va. 4th July 1859.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FREAM.

Jules Y. Getchell of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Lapp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affects us have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. In all hence the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything in the shape of liniment I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment—it soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.
Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Spavins, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Ames, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain or my shoulder, which occasioned me the shooting pain I have suffered from for the last three years, is entirely cured by one bottle of your celebrated Mustang Liniment."

ED. KELLY.
Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1868.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, and with less pain, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and others should always have it on hand. Quick and certain in its results, it never disappoints. Where directions are strictly followed, it never fails to cure Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Contracted Cords, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Galls, Sores, Scratches, Poll Evil, Fistula, Ringbone, Spavin, Sweeny, Wind Galls, Stiff Joints, Screw Worms in Cattle, Foot Rot in Sheep, Diphtheria, Sore Throat, Croup, Toothache, Earache, Sore Breast, Chilblains, Frost Bites, Chapped Hands, Sore Lips, Piles, Sore Eyes, Caked Udder in Cows, Mange in Dogs, &c.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Depot, 152 Broadway, N. Y.

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT CO.

Mrs. O. M. DEANE, manager of the Canada Branch of the Company, says we are daily receiving certificates of cures, and we challenge the world to produce a remedy which will relieve pain, subdue inflammation, and heal wounds as quickly as the Mexican Mustang Liniment

Visit to the Grand Lama of the Thibet.

An English taught pundit, of semi-Thibetan origin, was recently sent into Thibet, by a British officer in Cashmere, and succeeded in accomplishing his perilous journey in safety. The pundit's account of Lhasa, the Thibetan capital, essentially agrees with that of Messrs. Huc and Gabet. He places it 11,490 feet above the sea. It has a circumference of two and a half miles. In 1854, a census showed that it contained a population of 9,000 priests and 6,000 men, besides 1,500 Tartars and 500 Chinese soldiers, and numerous monks. In the centre of the city is a very large and wealthy temple containing idols of great price from their gold and gems, and all around are the lodgings of Lhasa, Cashmere, Lockee, Nepaulese, Napaurese and Chinese merchants. The lanes around the temple, in which the city stands, are dotted with wealthy monasteries, one of which (Debang) contains 7,700 priests. In the Potala (or a mile off, lives the Great Lama, called Dewaring lomche.

The pundit found him to be a handsome boy of thirteen, sitting on a throne six feet high, with groups of priests in an attitude of adoration around him, and two behind him with bundles of peacocks' feathers. On a throne of half that height, to the right, sat Gyalpoe jib, the real ruler under the Chinese Resident, called "Amban," but nominally the Prime Minister. The Lama, placing his hand on the pundit's head, asked: "Is your king well?" "Are you in good health?" After receiving their presents of silks, sweets, and money, he and his party were then served with tea, when some drank and others placed on their heads. The priests placed a string of nuts, knotted, round their necks. They were invited to inspect the temples, their rich images and hangings and were then dismissed. This Lama is the thirteenth Incarnation, and as thirteen is the last of a series of transmigrations from our Lama Guru, Capt in Most course looks for political changes soon in Great Thibet. It is certainly marvellous that the Thibetans have not long ago thrown off their real and the Nepalese their nominal, submission to Pekin; especially since all Eastern Tartary have expelled the Chinese since 1863.

The bodies of the preceding Lamas are carefully kept in coffins and the popular belief is that they diminish in size, while the hair and nails grow. The Thibetans believe that the Lama Guru speaks as soon as he is born, and all unbarred doors about the place revive. The child selected on the death of the Great Lama is at once placed on the throne. Under the Gyalpo are four Ministers, called "Kashak," who conduct the Government. But justice is bought and sold, as in all Asiatic States, the judge being one of the Debang monks who pays the highest sum. He is called Jalon, and is installed by walking through the streets with a silver stick. He makes ten times the purchase money, exercising his rule in the most arbitrary manner during the twenty-three days of the new year, when the priests hold an assemblage to do homage, called the "Mahon Chumbo." Every house is taxed, and the working classes flee the city.

Couldn't Find the Verdict.

At a recent session of one of the courts of South Carolina, an entire negro jury was empanelled. A case was brought before them—the witnesses examined, and the attorneys made their respective arguments.

The Judge after laying down the law and recapitulating the testimony, gave the papers into the hands of the foreman, a rather intelligent looking darkey, with strong instructions as soon as they found a verdict to bring it in without delay.

Thirty minutes or more elapsed when the jury returned, headed by the foreman, and stood before the judge.

As the foreman appeared to hesitate, the judge inquired—

"Mr. Foreman, have you found a verdict?"

"No, Massa Judge, we haben't found 'em, no how," replied the chosen juryman.

"It's a very plain case," said the Judge.

"Can't help it, massa, couldn't 'ree it," replied the boy again.

"On what grounds?" inquired the Judge.

"We didn't look into de grounds, Massa Judge," replied the foreman; "de assistes de'n't take us out into de grounds, but he took us into a room an' locked us in, an' told us when we fou'd de verdict he would let us out. So we began to find de verdict, an' search every nook, corner, crebice, an' every ting der was in de room but we foun' no verdicts—no nuffin ob de kine dar."

Keep thy feet dry—thy skin clean—thy digestion regular—thy head cool—and a fig for the doctors!

"It strikes me," began an orator—"Then why don't you strike it back?"—shouted a sailor among the audience.

When a man passes a day without reflection, he may well exclaim at night with fear that I have done something wrong."

Mankind are more indebted to industry than to ingenuity; the gods set up their favourites at a price, and industry is the purchaser.

The young man who was arrested for stealing a kiss was discharged on condition that he would never embrace another opportunity.

Dissimulation in youth is the fore runner of perfidy in old age; its appearance is the fatal omen of growing depravity and future shame.

Whenever I find a great deal of gratitude in a poor man, I take it for granted that there would be as much generosity if he were a rich one.

Promises made in time of affliction require a better memory than people commonly possess.

Every time you avoid doing wrong you increase your inclination to do that which is right.

Man demands more that sorrow than that rapture should show its motive and its apology.

The heart can leap, flutter, sing and dance joyously in the dark cages of its bosom.

Good will, like a good name, is got by many actions, and lost by one.

The greater glory is not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

Time, patience and industry are the three grand masters of the world.

Great men differ from common ones in moral more than in intellectual qualities.

True sensibility leads us to overcome our own feelings for the good of others.

To work satisfactorily requires much less mind than to work judiciously.

Be slow in thought; be slow in belief; these are the sisters of wisdom.

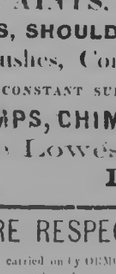
AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.



Are you sick, feeble and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the precursor to serious illness. Some 10 out of 40 have some symptoms upon you, and should be warned by a timely use of the right remedy. Take AYER'S PILLS and cleanse out the disordered humors and purify the blood, and let the fountain run pure, and health will follow. Nothing else can do this so surely. Nothing else has such a record of cures. Nothing else is even safe to take. Why suffer and die, when a remedy so certain is within your reach? Why not have the best, when it costs no more than the worthless?

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. S. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best cathartics I have ever found. Their sugar-coat does not injure them as much as it renders them agreeable to the taste, and children like to take them. I have given them in bilious dysentery and diarrhœa, with signal-cating strikes them very acceptable and convenient for use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in their neighborhood. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, &c., J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 21, 1853.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Mitchell, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. Mothers of our district have found them a perfect boon as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint which, although bad enough in itself is the prolific parent of others that are worse. I believe constipation originates in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Rev. E. Short, Physician and Minister, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural secretions to which they are particularly adapted, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Wheeler, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA, Jan. 6, 1850.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report it as cure as I can. A cold settled in my husband's breast, which ripened into a severe pleurisy, and this ended in chronic rheumatism. Nearly helpless I had the best of physicians, but they grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore Dr. Mackenzie I tried your Pills. They set me upon my feet. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

RICHARD CHAMBERS, Patent Broker, Jan. 8 Dec. 1858.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT BLIDELL.

Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that from unskilful use is sometimes seen. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

SUGAR-COATED

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are a mild but effective Purgative, put up in a convenient form, so that a child may take them as easily as candy. They contain no mercury, nor anything injurious to the constitution, and may be taken at any time of the year, with perfect safety. For Costiveness, Piles, Jaundice, Sick Headache, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, Coldness of the Stomach, Cramp and Pains, they have an effectual cure. We have not room to enumerate the virtues possessed by this valuable medicine, but simply refer to the fact that it has been used in our own practice, and in our own family, for years, and has never failed to do the work for which it was designed. For Colds, Influenza, Fevers, Inflammation of the Lungs, &c., and was found invaluable. In fact I was going as far as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician but I did not think relief was coming. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me by the road, and came about two hours. Was there Isaac Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me cough." He said "There is the best Indian remedy just introduced, Dr. Parker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took it, and, and brought a bottle home with me. In a considerable [illegible] which I took through my whole system, at night I took a small dose and went and I might, and continued to treat well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, rising of the blood, pain in the lungs, &c., gradually relieved, and I am now strong. I took only three bottles. I am not asking it now, and I am as healthy and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This is sufficient you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Jose, chief of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS is a long-existing fact. Such a remedy is wanted, and in times and epidemic diseases, we can safely say, may be replied upon to restore a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as for all diseases arising from impure blood, originating in the third range of Constitution. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use in a short time, it has in most cases become one of the most Valuable Cures ever received in the annals of the united Colonies. Seeing being the case, in addition to its former recommended qualities, we call to mind to inspire the fact that this Great Indian Remedy in connection with the celebrated Vegetable Preparations, for the diseases of Females, is the Remedy of Remedies in the 19th century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the afflicted through mortality.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Plate $1

For Sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

Poetry.

The Outside Dog in the Fight.

You may sing of your dog, your bottom dog,
Dog of any that you please;
I go for the dog the wise old dog,
That knowingly takes his ease,
And, wagging its tail outside of the ring—
Keeping always within sight—
Cares not a pin in his friendly old head
For either dog in the fight.

Not his is the bone they are fighting for;
And why should my dog sail in,
With nothing to gain but a certain chance
To loose his own pecunious skin?
There may be a few, perhaps, who fail
To see it quite in this light;
But when the fur flies I had rather be
The outside dog in the fight.

I know there are dogs—judicious dogs—
Who think it quite the thing
To take the part of one of the dogs,
And go yelping into the ring.
But I care not a pin what all my say
In regard to the wrong or the right,
My motives goes, as well as my song,
For the dog that keeps out of the fight.

Selections.

HOW ALGY WON THE BET.

(From the London Society)

CHAPTER I.

HOW THE BET WAS MADE.

Mr Algernon Bates was one of those individuals whose mouth is full of so much pernicious genius as to justify their friends in prophesying all sorts of great things of them, to come off at some future period of their prospective career. Strange to relate, however, this future period never arrives, or at least is such a very long time putting in an appearance, that the small friends become dubious and despairing enough both to acknowledge the unfulfilment of their predictions.

When Algy was a boy he showed so much drawing talent with his pencil that "his friends" were positively certain he would "turn out" a great thing in painters; who he grew up and assumed the toga virilis he made himself so conspicuous as an amateur actor that "the friends" declared the Lords of another Garrick award'd him; and when he brought out his comedy-drama, in four acts, of "Nathalie, or the Model," with a terse, spirited dialogue, and two or three capital situations, it was considered that he was on the high road to fame and fortune.

Ehen, fugaces anni. Years rolled over Algy's specific, carefully-tended head; his back hair rose not take him so long to do the "thing" now, there is not so much to hold as of yore, and it's "getting very thin on the top, sir," for ever Algy is going on for thirty now, and both Jane and Pauline are as far off as they were ten years ago. He has written another comedy-drama since, which he fondly thought would draw overflowing houses, but it will not keep its place in the bills after the second week; he managed to get a burlesque produced, with a new "knockabout break-down" of his own invention, which he likewise was certain would be a "great go," and fill the treasury, but somehow or other it did neither. He has had several little pictures in the Suffolk Street Exhibition, and his "Dead Warrior" was hung on the line in the Academy; but again, somehow or other, people didn't buy them there. Then they were sent off to Manchester exhibitions and sale-rooms, then travelled round to the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, and so back again to London and the Art Unions, ultimately, perhaps, finding their way in sheer desperation to Algy's studio, where they formed their force meekly to the wall, and gave themselves up to dust and the tender mercies of the chiaroscuro.

Once Algy managed to work the oracle so that Mr. Bompas, the eminent dealer, was induced to visit his studio to consult with Tickler the art critic of the Daily Thunderbolt, who had promised to say a good word for him. But Mr. Bompas only screwed his hat tightly together, and said, "Yes, yes very nice, very nice; but hardly popular, my dear sir, hardly popular; too big by a size; wouldn't go anywhere but in the hall. Concentrate and popularize yourself, my dear sir; concentrate and popularize yourself."

So Algy set to work and tried to "concentrate and popularize himself;" to do which he painted "My love, Agnes," a tall and commanding young lady with large eyes, wonderfully golden locks, and plenty of them, in a bewitching species of bedgown attire, which showed the shape of "Agnes" rather too transparently, and gazing pensively over a marble parapet into an imaginary furnace, while the last glory of the setting sun was skilfully adapted to fall on her figure and luminous face.

Unfortunately for Algy, this was so different from his usual style that Tickler took it to be the work of some man he had never heard of, so was down upon "Agnes" directly.

He was at great pains to show how woolly was her hair, how long and stiff her lashes, how out of all drawing her chin, and how palpably theatrical were the means by which the effect was produced; lastly, he was supposed that the hanging committee had placed so absurd a creature at all art."

Poor Algy was hopelessly set upon, and threw his brushes out of the window in disgust.

On a hot afternoon in August, some few days after the above notice appeared in the journal Mr. Tickler was good enough, as a friend was sitting in his Temple chambers, smoking the pipe of consolation, and pondering upon things. Essentially a hot and dreamy afternoon. The gardens in front of his opened windows were dreamy; the two or three men whose solo duty appears to consist in mowing the pots of chrysanthemums from one part of the grounds to another, were lazily even to go through that performance; the river was drowsy, as it lay winking in the glare; the young lady in book-muslin who found the broad walk so charming a promenade, and was there of course by the merest accident, had given up the fruitless peepings at her watch, and composed herself to dewy meditation; and Mr. Bates himself was dreamy; the influence of the hour was upon him; his soul was rested within him; he had much upon his mind,—oriental anxiety was aching him, as he told his friends pathetically. In the first place, there was Jenkins' half-erasing one at the end of the month; there was Rowles's account for the last two years still unpaid, and he couldn't put them off any longer; there was another picture returned from Manchester unsold; and there was the eight-ten-gallon cask of Allsop he had just put in 'turned' by the late thunderstorm; and worse than all, there was that horrid nightmare which had been keeping him sleepless for weeks, and, and like an undigestible piece of pork, always kept turning up when least expected; for the fact could be stuffed no longer—he was getting bald on the top of his head!

Getting bald! He didn't care a rush for Truefitt's young men; he never used to believe what those flippant and unfeeling creatures told him; but now, here was the evidence of his own eyes. His only hope of redemption was in making a good thing in the way of a marriage, and he was getting bald already!

Any odds you like I'll pitch upon the sunrise—I should say, your thoughts,' drawled a languid voice behind him.

'Oh it's you, is it?' said Algy, without removing the pipe from his lips. 'The most comfortable one is in that corner,' and eating a leather easy-chair with the toe of his Turkish slipper.

The owner of the voice, who had been testing the softness of the sofa with a delicate hand, muttered a feeble 'Tha-anks,' and dropped into the chair.

'I ought I'd look to, and—that sort of thing, you know. Eh? Tricomopoly?—No, thanks; too strong; always carry my own weeds. Dull?—oh, shocking. Going away next week—Eh? Baden, I took. Where are you going to?'

'The devil.'

'Ah, yes. What's the matter? down on your luck?'

'Yes; I've pretty nearly got to the end of my tether.'

'Hum, so have I.'

'Ah. Well, what's to be done then?'

'Marry.'

'Just what I was the king of.'

'I thought you were looked like it.'

'Well, of course, you see it's a risky off'r.'

'How much do you mean to go in for?'

'What, in?'

'Of course; what else could there be?'

'Well, I put myself down as worth twenty-five thou'.'

'Deuce you do!'

'Decidedly; so I don't object to a present income of seven-or-eight hundred.'

'But you don't get either one or t'other. But two to one you don't get either one or t'other within six months.'

'I think I shall; don't you see?' And Algy began to explain how many men of his acquaintance put the mother down at so much, and had gone in and won.

'I never argue,' said the other, without attempting to answer him; 'it's a dooced deal too short for that sort of thing. If a fellow begins that sort of thing, I stop him at once by offering against his proposition. Don't you see, it brings him to a point, practical, and all that. Then, too, there's the chance of a little event coming get out of it. Bet you five to one in fifteen you don't do it in six months; ten to one in ditto don't do it on three.'

'I'll take you.'

'Good,' said the other, deliberately taking out an elaborate memorandum-book—'All sorts of little transactions here; every one of 'em shut some fellow up. Know Paxton? Big, po-tive, Scotch brute in Gundel? Said other day in club, Jack Saltmarsh gave five hundred for the bay ponies Rossy Watson drives. Knew they weren't worth that. Told him so. Contradicted me, and began argument. Bet him two to one I was right. Paxton tried to draw off; knew he was wrong; only said it for argument. Beastly Scotchman! Kept him to the mark, and booked the bet. July 20.—Eighteen pots of glory with Mrs. Balfour. Contradicted me about Mario's age. Bet her directly. Couldn't say was mine, you know. 'August 3.—Old Jowler said he could tell the vintages of all the wine in—this, by smell. Argument. Bet him. Stopped argument."—'August, 8.—Even fiver with Haldane that the receipts of his theatre would fall short of a hundred per night after three weeks' run. Haldane positive the piece would draw. All puff and brag. Bet him. Got him in regular hole.' 'August 18.—Bet Tom Fletcher five pounds he would get tired of Bibs Fane in three months, and that she threw him over within it to time.' Here are you. 'August 21.—Bet Algy Bates ten to one in fifteen he don't get married to five-and-twenty thou' or an income of seven hundred per annum clear, within three calendar months from date above.' Well that's it?'

'Ten fifteen: all right.' So the bet was duly entered, and Dick Worsley, who affected a fashionable indifference to everything, put in the matter of business was particularly shrewd, then took his departure.

Then Algy lit another pipe, and pulled himself together to think the matter out.

Now it so happened that about this period of Mr. Bates's existence, he strange to relate, had fallen in love. Not for the first time, by any means, but the first time it was accompanied with the idea of matrimony; for, with Algy, the two generally meant something very different, and had nothing whatever in common with each other.

Miss Rose Chumley had been 'doing' the 'leading business' at the Theatre Royal Liverpool and Birmingham for some two or three years before she attracted the notice of London managers. At last a paragraph appeared in the 'Era,' announcing that 'Miss Chumley had accepted a liberal offer made her by Mr. Slum, of the Pantheon,' and would appear on such a night, in a 'new drama written expressly for her by Bertram Brown, Esq.''

The first night came, and the 'Pantheon' was crammed to the roof. A new piece by Bertram Brown was always interesting; and then the fact of its being written for an actress who was unknown to a London audience made it still more so.—Miss Chumley, rather nervous during the first act, while a running commentary of 'never poor,' 'no power,' 'oh, that's new,' 'very weak,' 'regular frost,' &c., went on from the expectant critics in front; then a remarkable exhibition of feeling in the next act roused the audience. From that time she gradually worked them up and held them in her grasp till the strong denouement in the last scene when the curtain came down on thunders of applause and Miss Chumley quite overcome by her feelings and the bouquets. Algernon Bates, sitting in the front stalls with Potts, the critic of the 'Sunday Magnet,' was enchanted. He saw at once that she would 'draw.' He must be introduced to her without any delay. He had a plot in his own eye then that would suit her style to a hair; no old prop and studied artificial poses, no showing the whites of the eyes in hysterical sobbing business—everything natural, unaffected, but graceful. She was 'charming,' Potts said; and that was something, coming from Potts.

'How well she kept it down in the first act. There's intelligence in everything, by Jove! Then, what a good-looker she is! By Jove sir, it's a treat, a positive treat!

And Bates was all in a glow of enthusiasm. Visions of his new comedy, with Miss Chumley bringing down the house, kept him broad awake all that night.

Now although Algy had not succeeded in getting publishers, theatrical managers, and picture-dealers to acknowledge his great genius, being people for the most part cruelly practical in their notions of the business of life, he had always found an admiring audience among the fair sex, generally succeeding in causing them to regard him as a man whose talent had been stifled and prevented from asserting its proper position in the world by the arrogant envy and spite of his enemies in power. For Algy was possessed of that gift which surely should be placed before all others: genius. Talent, energy, are trifles in comparison with the faculty of pleasing women. So he considered it only necessary for him to throw his handkerchief to Miss Chumley, and did not admit the possibility of her not picking it up with thanks.

Algy, therefore, enveloped in a complete fog of smoke of his own manufacturing, naturally thought of Miss Chumley at once. The only difficulty was the meeting—the actress's safety at the Pantheon at present could not be more than five pounds per week; and what was Algy? It must be increased by another ten before she could be put on his list. No, Miss Chumley was out of the question. 'Clearly because he is by, and real,' yes, he really did—you know, can't afford that sort of thing now.' Then he put down all the gods with money he could muster, and found that the list was not so long as he had reckoned. The tone of the year, more over, was dead against him.—everybody was away from town. He could go in pursuit; but where, and who should he pursue? It was a difficult matter. They were all sort of real now, here, there and everywhere. If he went to Brighton after Miss Smith, Miss Jones, at Scarborough, would escape him; and if he had a go to Mrs. Lazarus at Brighton, he should miss the Brown girls at Rome. The more he cast the matter over in his mind the more difficult it appeared; and he began to forget the bet with Dick Worsley.

The result of Algy's cogitations, which lasted several days, and during which time he consumed a vast amount of Cavendish, was his packing a portmanteau and starting off to Rome in chase of the Brown girls.' There were two Miss Browns, so that he stood a double chance of success. Old Brown was said to be worth a quarter of a million, and the girls adored Art. So Algy set off with the intention of personifying Art, and becoming adored by Mamilia or Josephine, it didn't matter which.

CHAPTER II.

HOW THE FIRST GAME WAS LOST.

It is the latter end of October, and Mr. Bates is sitting forlornly before a naked canvas in his studio; his palette and brushes are in readiness for use; but Algy heeds them not. He has just returned from Rome, having proposed to Matilda, the most likely of the 'Brown girls,' and been refused by the 'governor,' and the 'governor,' moreover, in a towering rage, which made him so far forget himself as to call our friend 'an adventurer, by Gad!' leaving any further chance of success out of the question.' Algy had taken Brighton on his way back, only to be disappointed by finding that Mrs. Lazarus, the rich widow, who once regarded him with eyes of favor, had left for Baden the week before. So, in sheer despair, he had found his way back to London.

What was to be done now? On the 20th of next month, barely three weeks more time would be up, and where he should get the money from for Dick Worsley, goddess only knew. He sat there, staring dejectedly at the canvas, till he began to think there was not much good to be got out of the prospect, and took up the 'Times.' Naturally enough he turned to the theatrical advertisements; he had quite dropped out of the civilised world the last two months,—the civilised world meaning with Algy the literary and artistic world of London, made up of theatres, editors' sanctums, Bohemian clubs, and exhibition rooms.

'Third representation of the Shadow on the Wall; or Sister Grace,—pronounced by the press and the unanimous voice of the public to be the greatest success ever known. Sister Grace—Miss Chumley.'

'Miss Chumley! Hm! ha!—Miss Chumley—Miss Chumley. Wonder what salary old Slum gives her now? Evidently the draw in the theatre. Let's see, who can tell me? Jackson's now, Caresey.'

Then he opened the door and shouted 'Jackson.'

Now Jackson was engaged in the evenings as a permanent super at the Pantheon Theatre, and during the day, to use his own words, 'went out assisting,' which meant that for the sum of eighteen pence an hour he lent his portly figure for the instruction of artists painting from the life.

Mr. Jackson, who was engaged by Algy to sit for a 'Dying Gladiator,' in which he consented would be a new and striking attitude, and it did not begin among the tedium of a long wait' unable by partaking of some of brown luncheon and the stairs, however made its appearance. Being interrogated as to the salary Miss Chumley was then drawing at the Pantheon, Mr. Jackson replied—

'Four, to his certain knowledge, but soon put her as much as fifteen pound, which he, Mr. Jackson, considered cheap at the money. Pleasant, notwithstanding very hard upon him, deposit half. That boast Levy, too, a man who blew his nose with a report like a cannon and wore Blucher boots. However, he would be responsible jealous and uncomfortable, that was consolation. A man who isn't in the profession never should marry an actress. Just as he comes home tired from the City or wherever it is, his wife is putting on her bonnet

"Time she was at the theatre already."

"Well, but there's no such desperate hurry."

"Oh, but I'm on when the curtain

Never mind; take a Hansom."

"Oh, say, the prince James wants to see me before I go."

"Does?"

"Yes; he's making me wig for Lady Ann's queen a lovely fizzer. Bye, bye."

As the poor husband has to eat his dinner comfortably himself to company; and as he has a half to call for company all day, he finds it, on the whole, rather slow. Poor Levy! And for the matter of that, poor Lucy! What affinity can exist between this ugly artist nature and a man who goes to sleep over Miss Faucit and Mr. Tennyson's rushingly nonsense?

(To be Continued.)

ANTI BIBLE RIOTS IN ITALY.

A letter from Italy to the Pall Mall Gazette gives an interesting account of the anti-Bible riots in various Provinces of that country, which the writer calls Bible-burn, from the fact that they are anti-Bible demonstrations, and generally take place at Easter, Christmas, All Saints Day, and other solemn church festival occasions.

The special riot referred to by the letter-writer Montecchio, took place at Margarone, last month. It seems that sometime, like a year ago a number of Bibles and Testaments—printed and published in London in the Italian language—were secretly introduced into Montecchio, a Bible society being formed by about fifteen young men, one of whom had been a member of a Protestant church or chapel in Padua. On several occasions during the past summer deputies had arisen (betwe n these funerals (most of whom are farmers and artisans) and certain hot conservators of their native town, most of whom appeared to think that new ideas were dangerous and ought to be suppressed. One of the young converts—little reading—the young man who had been to Padua—bolder and more outspoken than his comrades, ventured to send, private with the priest, first privately, afterwards in public, telling him that the "errors of his doctrine" were calculated to do a great deal of mischief. The priest, scandalized, declared publicly that whoever believed in the Virgin Mary should be saved, but that those who did not believe in her person any should not inherit the kingdom of heaven.

This was too much for the Bible reader, who, throwing aside all considerations of prudence and good manners, told the pastor that he (the priest) was grossly and stupidly ignorant in religious matters! He produced his Bible (an Italian one), with the name "Watts, publisher, London," on the titlepage), and began expounding the Scriptures to a number of persons, pointing out the places where he averred the priest was wrong. Finally, on Tuesday last he sent a written challenge to the chief priest, offering "in a spirit of truth" to argue the point with him, before witnesses, at 2 p. m. The news spread like wildfire through the town. The people rose en masse. Men, women and children flocked to the church, the former armed with knives and sticks, and surrounded the priest's house, where the Bible reader had already obtained admittance, and where it was supposed that the religious discussion had already commenced.

Cries of "Death to the Protestants!" "Long live the Pope!" "Long live the Virgin Mary!" were heard, interspersed with shouts of execration, the bells tolling at that time (the vesper bells) for afternoon service. The priest appeared at the window and entreated the people to be pacified, saying that there was not the least necessity for a disturbance, and that all would end happily if they would only go home and behave themselves. But while one man or one child may raise a crowd, it often takes a good many men to disperse it. The police were sent for, five mounted carabineers, armed with revolvers and cutlasses, (the entire police garrison of Montecchio) made their appearance and effected a passage through the crowd. One of their number entered the parsonage. The Bible reader was arrested and taken to prison, and the crowd, after renewed cries of "Long live our only religion!" "Down with the Bible!" "Death to the Protestants!" dispersed without fighting, but not without breaking the windows in the house of the Bible reader, where his parents sat in great alarm and tribulation, listening to the cries of "Down with Joseph, the heretic!" "Death to the Gebo family!" The apparent violence offered to the young man, however, was not intended as a punishment, but as a protection from average. He was detained in prison all night, and sent home at a late hour on Wednesday morning, with a caution to keep a civil tongue in his head for the future, and burn his Bible.

CANADIAN CHRONOLOGY.

Canada was discovered by Cab ton the 24th June, 1497; visited by Cortereal the Portuguese admiral, in the year 1509; in 1517 Sir Thomas Pe ks expedition entered Hudson's Bay, but did not explore it; in 1535 Jacques Cartier ascended the river St. Lawrence as far up as the present site of Montreal, and carried several of the Indians with him to France. In 1540 the French erected the fort of Charlesburg, and Cartier and Roberval explored the country round Montreal. In 1608 Quebec was founded by Champlain. In 1607 the Government was intrusted by Richelieu to the "Company of a hundred associates." In 1629 Sir D. Kirke conquered the French possessions in Canada, which were returned to France by the treaty of St. Germaine in 1632. In 1633 Louis XIV erected Canada into a Royal government with the laws and usages of France. In 1665 the colony was granted to the French West India Company. In 1690 Sir Wm. Phipps was sent to conquer Canada, but failed. In 1711 the British American Colonies sent a fleet to conquer the country, but the expedition was wrecked in the Gulf of St Lawrence. The attempt was repeated in 1746 and 1775 without success. In 1759 the capture of Quebec by General Wolfe finally put an end to the French rule in Canada, and the country was ceded to Great Britain in 1763 by the treaty of Paris. In 1775 the Americans invaded Lower Canada landing at St Johns and marching on Quebec. The attempt ended in the death of Gene al Montgomery who commanded the invading forces, and the surrender of the Americans to the British troops under General Carleton. In 1791 Canada was divided into two Provinces Upper and Lower Canada.

New Brunswick's First Year's Experience of Union.

To the Editor of "The Morning Star."

SIR,—As a subject more than one prevails in this Province in relation to the Taxation imposed by the Union and by Parliament, and especially as to the effect upon the inhabitants of this portion of the Dominion I desire to submit a few facts gathered from New Brunswick's first experience of Union, and ask for them the careful consideration of the public.

The average expenditure in New Brunswick for roads bridges and education for the seven years terminating in October, 1866, was $214,649 per annum. The sum estimated under Acts of the Legislature and voted for these services the year previous to the Union was $257,390 whilst the amount provided for the same services by the Local Legislature in 1868—the first year of the Union reaches $373,980, being $116,590 more than the appropriations of 1867, and $40,311 over the average expenditure of the seven years preceding.

These figures clearly show that so far as the local services are concerned, they are provided for upon a more liberal scale under the Union arrangements than they were previous to Confederation.

In order a statement of the taxation of the fiscal years 1866 and 1867 as compared with the collections from all sources for the year ending the 30th June, 1868.

The public records and accounts for 1865 C show, that there was collected in New Brunswick from Customs, Railway Impost, Light dues, Sick and Disabled Seamen and Buoy and Beacon funds (less drawbacks) $1,021,705; that for the 12 July, 1866, to 30th June, 1867 (be y ar preceding the Union) there was collected from the same sources (less drawbacks) $950,515; whilst during the first year of the Union there was collected from Customs, R 44ty Impot, Light dues, Sick and Disabled Seamen, Buoy and Beacon dues, Lxcise Stamps and duty on Bank circulation, all the sources of revenue, $996,250, showing a red cti n of taxation as compared with 1867 of $44,265, and with 1865 of $115,515. The sum of $996,250 paid to the Dominion Treasury is made up as follows:

Customs, Railway Impost, Light dues, Sick and Disabled Seamen and Buoy and Beacon funds (less drawbacks)	$840,000
Inland Revenue Department	24,000
Duty on Bank circulation, &c.	2,250
	$9 6,250

These comprise all the items of taxation, the proceeds of which pass to the Treasury of the dominion To complete the amount received from New Brunswick by the General Government, we have to add the difference between the receipts and expenditure of the E. and N. A. Railway. The Superintendent furnishes me with a statement showing the receipts to be, in excess of ordinary expenditure, $29 945, from which is to be deducted, $13,460, payments on account of locomotives freight cars, and permanent way leaving a balance to be added to Customs, Excise, &c., of $16,486, making the contribution from New Brunswick to the Dominion Treasury for the year to be, as near as may be, $1,012,736

I now give the sums paid, or to be paid from the Dominion Treasury on account of New Bru swick for the year ending 30th of June, 1868, exclusive of $410,764 paid on account of railway stock and railway subsidies:

Interest on debt of New Brunswick, commission and charges connected therewith	$ 478,000
Subsidy to Local Government	314,637
Salary to Lieut. Governor	3 413
Judges' salaries and travelling expenses	25,500
Marine and Fisheries, Light Houses, Lights, Buoys and Beacon, Marine Hospitals, sick and disabled seamen	40,525
Provincial Penitentiary	8,250
Election expenses	4,750
On account of Geological Survey	1,000
Immigration and Quarantine	2,000
Militia, as furnished by Accountant of Militia Department, $57,000 of which for Camp of Instruction, ordered, and contribution to Provincial Rifle Association	65,761
Subsidies to Steamers	7,600
Inspection of Steamboats	1,000
Indians	1,700
Collection and protection of Revenue, including fees and Registration of shipping	55,000
Post office deficiency estimated at	24,000
	$949,163

These figures show that during the first year of the Union New Brunswick has received from the Dominion Treasury $939,863 for services, for which she, before the Union, was called upon to provide, and $18,423 more than we have paid into the General Treasury from all sources of Revenue. Consequently, we so far have not contributed a dollar towards the expenses of the General Government, Public Departments, Parliament, Ocean Steamer service, Intercolonial Railway surveys, the purchase, extension and furnishing of the Governor General's residence, maintenance and repairs of public buildings, the publication of the News, Gazette or public printing. So much for the past year.

The provisions of the Act of Union and the appropriations of Parliament will require to be paid on account of New Brunswick for the current year, $1,082 472, or $139 763 in excess of what we have contributed to the Dominion Treasury during the past year. They may be stated as follows:—

Interest on debt of New Brunswick, commissions and charges connected therewith	$ 424,000
Subsidy to Local Government	314 37
Lieut. Gov'r's Salary	3,000
Judg s salary and travelg expnses	25,000
Penitentiary deficiency	8,200
Observatory	750
Geological Survey	5,000
Immigration and Quarantine	5,200
Militia, Stores, Military School, Drill Sheds and Barrack Rent	80,000
Steam Communication	10,000
Lights, Buoys and Beacons, Sick and Disabled Seamen, & Light Houses	48,150
Dredge and steam tug for Harbor of St. John	2,000
Fishery Overseers	2,500
Indians	1,700
Expenses incurred by New Brunswick on account of Delegations for Settlement of Union	29,300
Collection and protection of the Revenue, Customs and Excise	68,000
Post Office deficiency	24 000
	$1,082,437

This is exclusive of the $1,175,000 voted for payment of Railway Stock and Railway Subsidies.

It is quite clear that this year the ordinary expenditure by the Dominion on account of New Brunswick must be in excess of the revenue received, and that we, this year as in the past, will contribute nothing towards the expense of the General Government, Parliament, or Departments, nor to the expenditure on Intercolonial Railway and defences.

Surely the people of New Brunswick can have no grounds for complaint, touching the financial view of the question.

THURSDAY, JULY 23, 1868.

The New Governor of Ontario.

At last the official announcements is made that Mr Howland is Lieut. Governor of this Province, and that he was sworn in yesterday at Toronto. The public mind will perhaps never get rest on the matter, but they will not so easily forget the sacrifice of principle Mr. Howland had to make to obtain the promotion. But how will the Tories swallow it? A man but of yesterday in politics, one who has risen from the common herd, a Yankee by birth, and perhaps by education, raised to the high office of Lieut Governor of Ontario, were the would be aristocrats of Canada have been passed by. How will they be able to recognize him? And then placed in the office by J. A.! Still worse. Are they prepared still to follow the men who will barter away to any political rene, ade the highest office in his bribes, as the price of re aining his own position? Are they satisfied to still fall down and worship the Leader who recently used all the arts, no matter what their claims may be, if by doing so he can retain power a year or two longer? We wonder if John Sandfield McDonald is still satisfied with the combination. He, too, sold his p rty, entered the parent combination, had the promise, we are told, of the Governorship of Ontario, by this base sale of himself, together with the defection of McDougall and Howland the Tories were enabled to retain office a d the sweets of office, but Yankee Howland is too cute for John Sandfield. John Sandfield got a promise, but Howland got a written guarantee, so the Yankee outwitted the two canine Scots, and now enjoys the reward of his treachery to his party. John Sandfield must feel the inferior position in which he has placed himself. To him, of right almost, belonged the Governorship. He more cunning namesake, McDonald, of Kingston, has both bought and sold him, and what reformer will be sorry to see him thus humbled. Had he remained true to his party Sir J. A would not have now the power to trample on him. The reform party with which he so long worked would not be as they are divided and their efforts wasted, and the country would not be under the iron heel of a man without principle, who is ready to snap the strongest ties of party and friendship to maintain himself. Premier. J. S. must grin and bear; as he made his bed he must lie.

We learn from the Toronto Telegraph that the Canadian Guardian is not to be discontinued. At the Conference, the committee reported in favor of selling the office material, renting the office and getting the Guardian printed at whatever office would do the work cheapest. We also saw in one of our exchanges that the Messrs. White, of Hamilton, had bought the office, and hence originated the idea that the Guardian was to be discontinued. We are informed, however, that whether the office material be sold or not, it is still the intention to continue publishing the p per. The Spectator people say they have not purchased the Guardian office.

The Port Hope Guide appears to feel very keenly the remarks of Lieut.-Col. Jarvis during the inspection of the volunteers there. It says: "He meted out to them a torrent of invective and sneering remarks altogether unbecoming even from the tongue of A. A. G. Jarvis, and insinuates that hospitality has a benign influence on him.

A brother of Mr. Rowland is to be brought out in West York, but he will not be allowed to go in unopposed, Sorely West Yorkers will not allow the stigma of returning renegade reformers to represent them in Parliament, to be settled upon them.

The Ladies of Kingston have presented a piano to the Lady of Sir John A. Macdonald.

FIRES.

Our town has suffered severely since our last issue from two extensive fires. The first, and one that will be most severely felt, was that of the extensive Steam Saw Mill in Auburnham, belonging to Messrs. McDougal & Lodgate, which was entirely consumed on Friday last, about five o'clock in the afternoon. The fire originated from a kiln that was used for burning the waste cuttings. When first seen every effort was made to extinguish it, but owing to the [illegible] of dry steamer everything was [illegible] and the whole, including [illegible] was soon a mass of flames. It is [illegible] that the flames caused which is inconceivable except [illegible] Where it was seen that the flames had enveloped the mill, and that it could not be saved, the engineer threw off the steam to prevent an explosion, and for this he had barely time. The current of air through the mill at the time was such as to carry the flames [illegible] Several of the workmen were forced to throw their coats and vests that had caught fire off while engaged, so instantaneously were the flames communicated to the woodwork. Barely fifteen minutes elapsed from the time the alarm was given until the whole was one mass of flame that no one dare approach for fear any house, too, and a new building lately erected for Mr. Peach, were consumed. The people who gathered were engaged to save Mr Peach's stuff, but Mr. Peter Glover, who kept the boarding house, lost almost everything he had. He was down at the time the fire commenced, and the men who had just left their tour at noon, were in bed; by the time they were aroused it was too late to save any except a few things. His horse also was consumed in the stable, no one thinking of him, and a buggy, a cutter, and two sets of harness. Mr. Bailey's residence for a time appeared in great danger, indeed was on fire in several places, but the persistent exertions of Messrs Wrightson, Hern, Mason, and others saved it, with a trifling damage done to the roof. In the removing of the furniture more or less damage would be done, although the utmost care was taken. The loss to the Messrs. McDougall & Lodgate is very heavy, as I to be $20,000, while they have only $8,000 insurance on it. The great evil arising from it being able to fulfil their contracts this year is very great, while over 100 hands are thrown out of employment, many of whom depend wholly on this kind of labour for their sustenance. We understand that the owners intend rebuilding as soon as possible.

The second fire took place on Monday, about six o'clock p. m., and consumed the American Hotel, occupied by Mr. H. Morgan; a building belonging to Mr. Hafley, occupied by himself and Mr. Stinson, and did considerable damage to a building adjoining belonging to Mr. R. Rowe, and to two or three buildings in the rear of the hotel. Mr. J. In Brown's Cabinet Shop was believed to be in danger and the contents were removed. The building, however, was saved. Fears were entertained for the Commercial House also, and the contents were partially removed, but it was not necessary, as a continual application of water to the roof saved the building. Had either the Commercial House or Mr. Brown's Cabinet Shop taken fire the damage would have been terrific, as just behind them were piles of wood and lumber, Duggan's Waggon Shop, and several wooden buildings that could not have been saved. The loss of the hotel equals about $4,000. It was owned by Mr. R. A. M rrow, insured for $1,700 in the Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance Co. Mr. Morgan had no insurance on his furniture, his loss will be considerable. Mr. Hafley's loss on building is nearly covered by an insurance of $1000 in the Liverpool, London & Globe, and $1200 in another company. His goods were also insured to the amount of $2000. The only stand & to the goods is the ass consequent on their removal, which is always considerable. Mr. Stinson has suffered but was insured to the amount of $500. Mr. Chilton had an insurance of $800 on goods and $200 on furniture; both were removed but some what damaged. Mr. Rowe's building is a little damaged; loss fully covered in the Liverpool, London & Globe. The cause of this fire is supposed to have been the throwing of a match into the manger by some one in the stables; no first appearance we are told was put out, but unnoticed it commenced with some hay in the loft, and when the whole space was destroyed. If this is a version of the matter is true, it is another lesson in allowing drunk men to carry matches into stables and dangerous places; others believe it to be the work of an incendiary.

The subject of another fire engine is again being discussed on the streets; there can be little doubt of the necessity for something more than we have at present. It is useless now to discuss the matter. We believe, however, that if the ratepayers were called upon for a verdict, it would be in favor of a steam fire engine. The Firemen deserve the greatest praise for their unwearied efforts to quench the flames.

ACCIDENTS.—The Millbrook Messenger says that Messrs. David Hunter and William Armstrong received severe injuries through Mr. Hunter's team getting frightened and running away. Mr Armstrong's arm was broken close to the shoulder joint, while on drawing to jump off to save himself. Also that Jonathan, son of Mr. Francis Gardiner, of Mount Pleasant, while working with a cutting machine, the horses became restive; he got off and was driving them, but slipped and fell. The cutter entered his heel, cut through the strong tendons and laid open the joint. He is under the doctor's care.

SUNSTROKE.—The Colorado Sun says that four cases of sunstroke took place in the Township of Murray on Wednesday last; three of which proved fatal. Also that Mrs. Lizzie McIntosh died suddenly at her residence near cold springs, on Thursday morning having been struck by the sun; and a man in the employ of Mr. George Hackney, of Baltimore, was struck on Wednesday and died on Thursday last. He leaves a wife and [illegible] children.

The Globe says that some one has started the story rumour that Sir Frenc. Hincks is to be brought from the West Indies and made Governor General of Canada. The Globe, however, thinks that the Government will hardly perpetrate anything so [illegible]

MR CARROLL'S DISMISSAL

"We have copied some remarks from the Berlin Telegraph, anent the above question. DISMISSAL OF MR. CARROLL.

As most of readers are aware, Mr. Carroll, Crown Land Agent at Peterboro', has been dismissed by that model reformer, Mr. Richards, the Commissioner of Crown Lands, in order to make room for a Tory. Our esteemed cotemporary the Brockville Recorder, is unwilling to believe that Mr Richards would be guilty of such a petty act, but we suppose the Recorder is satisfied to believe that Mr. Richards did step to his law office to dismiss Mr Carroll, because he would not convert, during the last election, to Hagyard's political principles, and support the "Combination." To what extent Mr Carroll sinned in this respect, we are not prepared to say, as the leading organs of the Government do not assign any reason for his being so summarily ejected from his office. If he was at such pains to perambulate the post, this, no doubt, would have been blazoned forth to the public long ere this, so that in the absence of any such reason we take it for granted that it was on the other ground that he got his "marking ticket."

Robert has known as a highly competent and faithful public servant. One, however, of the numerous and "obscure" organs of the Government, namely the Chatham Planet assigns the following cause for Mr Carroll's dismissal, which may be worth quoting :—

"If Mr. Carroll preferred electioneering to looking after the duties of his office, he could not justly complain if the government did not advertise to relieve him from the responsibility of an office he apparently cared nothing about, or most assuredly he would have returned to looking after it and to further the interests of a party opposed to them."

Now we do not know as a fact that Mr. Carroll did or did not engage in electioneering during the late general election. If he did, he certainly was no more guilty in this respect, than other officials holding rather higher position who were not of the same political stripe as himself. Is it not a fact that several employed in the administration of justice in Ontario, were found engaged, undoubtedly with the knowledge of the Government, in advancing their political interests in different constituencies in the province? Is the Planet not aware of this fact? Or is it, as usual, content to grumble with that infirmity of memory to which it now and then shuts out unpleasant recollections? The Planet must surely be aware that Mr. Hayes, the only unbiassed Crown Attorney of the County of Peterboro took a most active part in the last election in Kent and his own County, and that too in the most brazen and unprincipled manner. If it was just to send Mr Carroll to the right about, is the Government not equally bound to serve Mr Hayes in the same way? It would appear not. In the face of these plain facts, he is still allowed to feed at the public crib! Why make it a case and deal at the other? Does the Coalition Government hold that it is right for an official to interfere in behalf of Government interests, but all wrong to interfere on the opposition side? This is rather a dangerous doctrine to hold, if carried out to its legitimate results, Mr Hayes cannot expect anything of either the present when the Reformers of Ontario assume the reins of power. If this view of the case is not held to the Coalitionists then they are bound to treat Mr Hayes as they have done Mr Carroll, and at once declare Mr Hayes' office vacant. This they will handily dare to do, as it would give mortal offence to Sir John A. Macdonald, who considers Mr Hayes his wardmen-led boy.—Berlin Telegraph.

DROWNED IN LAKE ST. CLAIR.—A young man named Andrew Chisholm was drowned a few days ago while bathing off the schooner "A. Stephens," on which he was employed, and which was lying at the time in Lake St Clair, about ten miles from Windsor. He is said to have relatives residing somewhere in Ontario. His clothes have been handed over to the police authorities here, from whom any further information may be had by those interested.—Globe.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box

THE ERIE CANAL.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it in 1867 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at the result, it is gratifying to know that the sale of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, neuralgia, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

DIED,

At Peterboro, on the 21st inst., Frederick, infant son of Mr Harold Uin.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the last ten years never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of disagreeable action when the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its effects and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER, was won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, which is very much superior to any thing in the history of medical preparations. It never fails to cure Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Cholera, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, and Summer Complaint of any description, and we can safely say that it never has failed in giving satisfaction to those who have used it. It is a powerful and speedy remedy, and all that we claim for it is, that it will do all that we represent it to do, or the money paid for it will be refunded. It is also an effectual remedy for Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, and all diseases of the Bowels, Stomach, &c.

Prepared only by the Proprietors,

NORTHROP & LYMAN,

Agents for Canada.

Sold in Peterborough by J. W. Gilmour, A. W. Kemp, Wm. Cowper, Dimond & Walsh, in Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any other Medicine for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Colds, Distemper, Thick Wind, and all diseases of the Wind or Horse's stomach, as a Condition Medicine surpassing everything of the kind. Easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times and seasons, even the most delicate being perfectly safe while giving it.

It relieves the breathing apparatus of all suffering from the most deep-seated cough in the short space of forty-eight hours, and from the first dose is perceptible a difference in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural climax, thus expelling the cause of the disease, and restoring the diseased lungs and tubes to their natural size, by which the horse's appetite is much improved, all derangement of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

THIS well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction, from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution, and married ladies will find them particularly suited. A trial for a short time will bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, dizziness, a deathly sickness, palpitation of the heart, weakness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other remedies have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N.B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle containing Pills, by return mail.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very many symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, constant desire to pick the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, tickiness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits. Pain in the head and stomach, coated tongue, trembling, coughs, indigestion, low spirits, slight fever, and a general wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are infallible and safe administered to the child alone or in the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach, thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant medicine.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N.B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONSCIENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PUBLISH OUR NAMES AS PROOF TO THE JUDGMENT OF WHAT WE HAVE ASSERTED. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comforts of the horse have been neglected; but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former, here all can avail themselves of the use of an article which is known more than any thing else besides to know to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the more, their loss the stuff more to go to both use "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

Kit Kobb makes a Speech at the Fenian Fair in Buffalo

No you don't gentlemen. Not if we and stand speechless. Your way to Ire land isn't be through Canada. You can I gave a Sun Burst on our coat. Our flag is to No Thoroughfare just at pre We're very much obliged for the inter you take in our affairs, but we don ing you properly. The Ira ed centuries has bereft us of all spi ous feel of the op ressor has left upon us. We don't hi ompanions of the past. The ld through the mire of centuries. You ——ster really, you do. Does you know you're out? Do they give grub in the State prison now? Gen yonke an honor to the Green repub No other country on God's foot could produce such patriots. The at the ancient Kings of Ireland are c , in their cave for joy at your appr The harp that once thro Tara is being tuned for your special bene The collar which Malachi won from proud invader, and unlimited spoi will be showered at your feet. The and wages of emancipated Irish women throughout the States is a fitting tribute to your worth. You are sweet creatures, gentlemen—so young and so fair.

You have a very pretty flag there— green is beautiful to see, and we admire it very much, but it looks best where it is. It would be good for its constituents to travel out it to the north bank of the St Lawrence. The climate of Canada would have the effect of charging it to an negrescible and that would be disagreeable. No, thank you, we can't accept your kind offer just now. We have a bit of hunting of our own which we have stood by for some years—a thousand or so—and please God, we'd stand by it for a few thousand to come. It suits us and we are satisfied.

No, gentlemen—on the whole, I think you had better not come our way. Canadians have an awkward style in handling a bayonet which might prove unpleasant. Go by way of Mexico, or round by China or anywhere but through Canada. There are thirty thousand good reasons why you shouldn't. There are thirty thousand good men and true, ready to explain why you shouldn't. Behind these are four millions of loyal Canadian people, and, behind them is the great British Empire. No gentlemen, my route is west, tie in that way.

But gentlemen, if you insist on coming, come prepared. Bring your coffins with you for times are hard, and we might not be able to give you as decent a burial as you would wish. Confess yourselves before you come, and be ready for another and longer journey. Canada does not forget two years ago. She remembers that the blood of her sons then spilt is yet unavenged. She remembers the cut-throats who, without cause violated her borders and carried mourning to hearths and homes. So help us Heaven, it will be a short shrift and a long rope for those who try it again.

A PAINFUL SIGHT.

A day or two since there was found on the docks a middle aged, respectably dressed man, in a lonely state of intoxication, and placed in one of the cells for safe keeping. The man had evidently been on a spree for some time, and the effects of it had nearly destroyed his reason.—From his story, told in the morning, it was found that he was a lawyer of Chicago who had made a reputation at the bar. He was a sober, steady, and hard-working man until he entered the field as an out and out Democratic politician. His great object was to see that gentleman in the Presidential chair. In the great political excitement he took to drink, and consequently neglected his business. Some weeks ago he resolved to quite drinking, and to cut aloof from old companions, went to St. Paul to spend a few months. There he met old acquaintances and his days were one continued long drawn out dissipation. Finding that it was necessary for him to return to Chicago, he set out, accompanied by his son. Arriving in this city, he concluded to remain here until the next morning. His son's persuasions failed to induce him to go on, and the to boy left him behind. When found in the streets the man had been drinking heavily, and was nearly out of his mind. When placed in the cell he appeared persons and excitable, and in a few minutes gave evidence of suffering from an attack of delirium tremens. Stimulants were given him and and he lay down to sleep. About 12 o'clock at night the station keeper was aroused by the cries of a man, and upon going to the cell found a most startling scene. The effects of the stimulants wearing off by sleep, all the horrors of insanity were visible. The man's eyes glistened with fear and terror. His whole system was under the same effect. He had crawled as closely into one corner of the cell as possible, and clinging with all his power to the bars, and trying to get away from the imaginary demons that surrounded him. His cries were frantic in the extreme. The station keeper told our reporter that he has looked upon many miserable scenes in his life, but upon no one that equalled this. He tried to quiet the man, but the attempt was useless. On every side of him he could see the venomous and disgusting reptiles, their mouths open, ready to attack him. He begged and pleaded that they be kept from him. They stared him in the face, he said. Their greasy eyes looked full into his. Their slimy folds crawled over his face, and played even him before striking the deadly blow. It took some time to turn the man's mind from the scene; and when his nerves were once more quieted, his strength was gone, and his whole frame shook like an aspen. On Saturday morning, he was sent to Chicago, where he lives.—Daily Herald.

Some men are behind their age, and these are the clogs upon the wheels of progress. Others are ahead their age, and their speculations may or may not be useful. But the real men, of immediate use, are the men of their age. "serving their own generation, according to the will of God." That's the phrase. It has a divine meaning. It exactly defines the practical philanthropist, the genuine citizen, whose life is a boon to his contemporaries.

An Irishman being in church where the collection apparatus was nobled on the election box, when it being passed to him, whispered in the collector's ear that he was not worth [illegible] and could not vote, but he was ready to make a speech.

A western paper is responsible for the suggestion that the ballad-girls are wrongly [illegible]

TEMPERANCE ITEMS.

Mr Garrison was among the speakers in the Temperance Convention lately held in Boston. He said he had been a teetotaller for forty years but had taken no prominent part in the reform years ago, because he didn't wish to do it with the appearance. The cause was then reputable, while he was in it now; but now the cause is gotten a ban, and said Mr. Garrison, with pardonable pride, "I believe I am no playman."—a fact which the most whimsical pleads confirmed.

TOM SAYERS.—The famous athlete Tom Sayers was once asked by a gentleman, "Well, Thomas, I suppose when you are training, you use plenty of beefsteak, and London porter, and pale ale?" The boxer replied: "In my time I have drank more than was good for me, but when I have business to do, there's nothing like water and the dum bells." After retiring from business, he took to drink and died a sot. Cold water made him a Sampson; rich bad had him in his grave.

CHARLES DICKENS ON WINE COUNTRIES.—The following from Dickens is to the point, and he has a good opportunity of knowing whereof he speaks:—"The wine shops are the colleges and chapel of the poor in France. History, morals, politics, jurisprudence and literature, in its spirit as forces, are all taught in these colleges and chapels, where professors of real rationality deliver those lessons, and where hymns are sung nightly to the precepts of demoralization. In these haunts of the poor, theft is taught as the morality of property, falsehood as speech, and assassination as the justice of the people. It is in the wine shops the cabman is taught to thank it heroic to shoot the middle class man who disputes his fare. It is in the wine-shop the workman is taught to admire the man who stabs the faithless mistress. It is in the wine-shop the doom is pronounced of the employer who lowers the pay of the employed. The wine-shop breed, in a physical atmosphere of malaria and a moral pestilence of envy and vengeance, are the men of crime and revolution. Hunger is generally a bad counsellor, but drink is worse."

STATISTICS OF INTEMPERANCE.—Of the number of deaths which occur in England and Wales from excessive drinking only an imperfect conception can be formed, but it appears, according to the returns of the Registrar-General, that in the 10 years 1856-65, no less than 4,422 deaths were directly ascribed to delirium tremens, and 3238 to intemperance; the deaths from the two forms of alcoholism being 8,160, or on an average 816 per annum. High temperature probably increases thirst, and at the same time renders the action of ale to be less dangerous; for delirium tremens is much more fatal in the hot than in the cold months of the year. The results, extending over a period of 20 years, show that while the deaths ascribed to intemperance were equally distributed, the deaths by delirium tremens were distributed over the four quarters unequally; the smallest number occurring in winter, the greatest in summer. The effect of the alcohol and the heat in producing delirium tremens is greatest at the age of from 30 to 40; but it is also apparent at the earlier age of 20 to 30.—Times.

MODERATION.—May tell us that moderation is temperance. Moderation is temperance until the steam is up, and then the locomotive dashed on with such fury that you cannot overtake it; and wife and children, and fortune, and happiness are all dropped onward, dashes in pieces. It is good moderate drinking but it is Gone America that is the only true principle of temperance. As men and women passing the bar of God before our eyes, we dare not think for we feel that "to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." So of the traffic. When the intoxicating cup was on all our tables and sideboards men were ever craving it and ever using it. Now that it is removed we seldom think of it. So remove the traffic, that scourge of the world, and men will return with delight to the pure beverage which God hath given them. Through the help of the Lord God Omnipotent we will deliver this world from the scourge of intemperance. Then the kingdoms of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—London Patriot.

THE COST OF LIQUOR.—Over two thousand millions of dollars are paid in a single year in America for intoxicating drinks. This money given for a year and a half into the United States Treasury would extinguish the national debt. Well does The Nation (Boston) say of these awful figures:—

"Take this vast amount to pieces. It would purchase a navy of one hundred monitors, and two thousand war-vessels, thoroughly equipped, the proudest armament that ever rode upon the seas. It would build a National Capitol worth one hundred et million dollars, and a Capitol for every State in the Union worth fifty millions each. It would rear one hundred thousand houses of worship, at an expense of twenty thousand dollars each. It would pay the expenses of all religious, charitable, and benevolent societies in our land; including the ministry, Bible, Tract, Missionary Societies, etc., for the next fifty years, since all of these do not cost now, over forty millions of dollars annually."

How great are the poverty, crime, and misery these figures prove! How earnest should be all moral and loyal men to abolish this fruitful, this almost sole remaining source of troubles, social, personal, national. Only Prohibition can extirpate this iniquity. The great war for the Prohibition of Slavery was waged against a mightier and more profitable business; $4,000,000,000 of property was in that iniquity, and its business relations were inextricably interwoven with every factory, counting house, and workshop in the land. Yet God hewed it up, root and branch, and cast it forth as an abominable thing. So will the gigantic evil, if only his people will pray and labor and believe.

Parents who desire to instil into the minds of their children a love for reading and study, instead of a love for idle and vicious sports, should keep a live, entertaining paper constantly within their reach.—It will not fail of a practical influence.—Its movements will be turned to profit and the mind directed in pleasant channel.

An eminent journalist has offered a reward of $1000 for a rule that will make his hair stand on end. Before ambitious authors enter the field of competition it may be well for them to understand that the generous journalist is perfectly bald.

An Irishman after blistering his fingers on trying to pull on a pair of boots, declared that he should never be able to get them on until he had first worn them a day or two.

MESSRS A. C.—Gentlemen:—I William Storms, of Brighton, C.W., make use and sell [illegible] medicine to let you know what the Great Shoshonee Remedy has effected for me. My wife was [illegible] with consumption and died. I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after being [illegible] and [illegible] just as she died done. I had very [illegible] a cough, rung out nearly all night and every night, could not sleep unless a little toward [illegible] morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking [illegible] medicine from a regular physician but it did not [illegible] me enough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to get and [illegible] about two hours.—When there I saw Esq. Wellington, and hapened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me or right." He said there was the Great Indian Remedy just introduced. I bought one bottle, and I believe it was all I ever [illegible] but before I got home I felt relieved. I took it home with me; to [illegible] myself and wife which I did through me who [illegible] us, we [illegible] took a table-spoonful at once which I did through me who [illegible] every night. The Cough, Night sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the lung, &c., gradually left me, and I [illegible] and [illegible] took [illegible] three bottles. I am not taking it now, and my business and [illegible] as well as ever. I was [illegible] My wife's father-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Poetry.

"Papa, What is a Newspaper, and What does it Contain?"

Organs that gentlemen play, my boy,
To answer the taste of the day, my boy,
Whatever it be,
They hit on the key,
And pipe in full concert away, my boy.

News from all countries and climes, my boy
Advertisements, essays and rhymes, my boy,
Mixed in parabolas,
And published at regular times, my boy.

Articles able and wise, my boy,
At least in the editor's eyes, my boy,
And logic so grand
That few understand
To what in the world it applies, my boy.

Statistics, reflections, reviews, my boy,
Little scraps to instruct and amuse, my boy,
And lengthy debate
Upon matters of State
For wise-headed folks to peruse, by boy.

The funds as they were and they are my boy
The quibbles and quirks of the bar, my boy
And every week
A clever critique
On some rising theatrical star, my boy.

The age of Jupiter's moons, my boy
The standing of somebody's spoons, my boy
The state of the crops,
The style of the fops,
And the rot of the rabbit balloons, my boy

List of all physical ills, my boy,
Banished by some body's pills, my boy,
Till you ask with surprise
Why any one dies,
Or what's the disorder that kills, my boy.

Who has got married to whom, my boy,
Who were cut off in their bloom, my boy,
Who has a birth
On this sorrow-stained earth,
And who totters fast to the tomb, my boy.

The prices of cattle and grain, my boy.
Directions to dig and to drain, my boy,
But I would like me to find
To tell you in song
A quarter of what they contain, my boy

HOW ALGY WON THE BET.

(From London Society)

CHAPTER III.

"SHUFFLE THE CARDS."

When Algy got back to his chambers after his expedition to the Hampton Road, he took out a letter from the litter of unfinished MSS., pen and ink sketches, unpaid bills, and other documents scattering broadcast over his writing table, and sat down to answer it. The letter was from Mrs. Jordin, a most particular friend of Algy's, and it begged to take pity on him and come down to their place in Hertfordshire, for as long as he could spare the time. Algy had deferred replying to the invitation, thinking it would rest, probably, with Miss Chumley whether he should be able to accept it; but he thought it would be the very thing for him. So he wrote off a note to Mrs. Jordin, in which he said that nothing could give him greater pleasure than going to them for a short holiday that he had been desperately busy lately and should rejoice in a little change, &c. Not a word did he say about Rome and Matilda Brown.

Two days later saw him bowling down to the Waterloo Station, having, as he expressed it, 'got over the Chumbley business beautifully,' which meant that he had not quite broken his heart about the 'Parthenon' actress. He might pick up the money in Hampshire, as likely there as anywhere. Never say die!

The Jordins, with whom he was going to stay, were country people and swells in their way, so Algy had got himself up accordingly. Nobody could tell, he thought, who he might meet while there. The Miss Jordins had very little money, but they might be some one else who it would be worth while 'going in for.' The door at it was there only being three weeks left to hunt.

Now no one understood better than Algy the great art of getting himself up so as to be 'effective' without showing that any 'effort' was meant. He knew exactly what colours suited him, what sort of coats and hats were most in his style. He never committed that great social error most men fall into, of wearing anything extra in the way of hats and coats because everybody else did, but managed to keep sufficiently near the prevailing fashion without allowing it to run his superiors. When he wished to produce an impression he went in for 'effects' in a decidedly professional manner. He 'got up,' as he jumped out of the Hansom at Waterloo was artistic in the highest degree. The particular time he affected the 'swell,' without any of the languid airs and graces of that animal; it was the swell carefully toned down and modified, with a dash of the man of genius in its composition. He was particularly happy in his boots, his gloves, and, above all, his umbrella; an umbrella, when carried with discretion, is always effective. Algy walked down the platform apparently in deep reading, but in reality taking everything in that he considered worth his while.

Miss Tatum the only daughter and heiress of Septimus Tatum, the eccentric soapboiler and M. P., standing with her maid at the door of the ladies waiting room was mentioned that the 'extremely interesting-looking young man' passed by without noticing her in the least, though she had plenty of time to observe his melancholy face, his small feet, and the elaborate way he carried carelessly over his left arm. Our friend Algy, however, had seen Miss Tatum a minute or two ago. He saw her how his cab get out of a brougham and pair outside the station, and happened to hear her tell the maid to take two tickets for Basingstoke; then, as he was paying the cabman, he heard some one on the platform say, 'D'ye know who that is, Jane? It's old Tatum's daughter, that is.'—Now Algy, of course, knew 'old Tatum' by reputation; who could have so much money and reveal vulgars? He also knew that the old soap-man had only one child, a daughter, who would have all his wealth. This young lady, then, with the blue almost and dawn chignon, would be Miss Florence Tatum.

'Good forehead and eyes, pretty mouth, bad nose; great pity about the nose, what there is of it,' said Algy to himself, 'setting up the points' of blue bonnet top dip. 'Then, what a heap of money, too; all from soap. Rather low and common—soap; if it had only been Austrian wood, or tea, or even tea; but the 'a' sometimes, rather deep-toned man goes against the grain. However, he's an M. P., and that ought to carry off the soap; there's a sense of respectability and respectability about the House of Commons which covers a multitude of sins.

Basingstoke! He distinctly heard her say Basingstoke. He was going to Basingstoke; that was where Bradshaw showed that he must change trains, and take the little branch line that went to New Cross for, where Mrs. Jordin's carriage was to meet him.

So Algy sauntered up to the book-stall and laid out quite a little fortune in 'Punch,' 'Illustrated London News,' and all the periodicals that were embellished with pretty pictures. He sauntered about there till the bell rang, and Miss Tatum, walking off her mind with dozen parcels to a second class carriage, got into a first-class by herself.

Just as train was about to start, and people were rushing to and fro in the usual frantic state of people at a railway station, Miss Tatum saw the 'interesting-looking man' come out of the refreshment room, and, as he entered that ever, lounge quietly up to her carriage, and—yes—actually open the door! He looked in for a moment, as if uncertain whether he should honour it with his presence then got slowly in and sat down opposite her.

Miss Tatum thought she had never before seen such—such—she couldn't find another word that better expressed what she meant—such an 'interesting-looking man.' His large, dark eyes seemed to gaze right away, beyond everything, into—into the Past; and his smile (did he never smile?) would be wonderfully sweet; how could it be otherwise with such a mouth!

'Did she prefer the window up, or down?'

'Oh, down, please.' She knew that she was right about the mouth; and if there was one thing she liked to see in a man, it was a keen gentle hand.

'Did she care to look at 'Punch'?—perhaps, though, she had seen it?'

'No, she hadn't seen 'Punch.' Oh, thanks.'

'Very dull, I'm afraid; very poor now. Want to see that picture?—allow me to cut it for you.'

'Oh, thanks, thanks.'

'Rather pretty, though, that high light on the girl's head, is it not? Du Maurier; but perhaps you don't admire Du Maurier?'

'Yes, I think it's pretty.'

Then a pause, during which Miss Tatum looks carefully at Mr. Fernie's cartoon, thinking that the 'melancholy' eyes are regarding her the while. Wasn't it odd that he must change trains, and take the little branch line that went to New Cross for, where Mrs. Jordin's carriage was to meet him?

'Basingstoke,' he said, 'the many reminders received from them cured him to learn their cartography by a T.'

It was from Miss Tatum's papa. The eminent soapboiler began by expressing his thanks to Mr. Bates for his thoughtfulness in so long after his duties were at an end to 'see that an elderly gentleman, the good enough, the good, prevented his calling again.' Mr. Bates to thank him in person, but trusted that he would excuse that necessary, as some one was waiting for him at the station, and he was in a hurry. He would be very glad to see him, and dinner on table at seven, sharp.'

So Algy went over to Lyme House, and made himself very agreeable to the soapboiler, as also to the soapboiler's fair daughter, whom he was not looking that way. After the interval of a few days Algy called, and was again pressed to come and dine, which he did. In short Algy made himself so much liked at Lyme House that, when the time (he made his own time, by-the-by) arrived for him to leave Mrs. Jordin's and [illegible] Mr. Tatum begged that he would 'do Lyme House' the place of abode for another week or so. This was one to Algy and two for himself; for he worthy soapboiler was that week going to have his house full of guests, and proposed giving a series of entertainments—private theatricals, balls, and dinners—and he knew that Algy was a useful man at that sort of thing. One friend saw the position at a glance, and that there would be a capital chance for his distinguishing himself. So he took over his household goods to Lyme House, and was installed as master of the ape-aching ceremonies.

'He was invaluable,' Miss Tatum told her papa; 'she didn't know what they should have done without him.' It was 'Oh, Mr. Bates, how shall we do this?' &c., and, 'Oh, Mr. Bates will you look here, and tell me what you think?' &c.—He not only was the manager-in-general the principal actor, the organizer of the amateur orchestra, and the scene-painter in the theatricals, but he actually wrote the pieces they performed—quite impromptu you know,' Miss Tatum said and believed though it was only an old two-act comedietta Bates had by him ramped up for the occasion. Then he got up that Irish jig in the hall, which, but for it, would have been a dismal failure, and was the life and soul of the 'big dinners.' Little Miss Tatum used to listen to him rattle about art and literature, uncritical politics, and cynical banter on social topics, quite lost to admiration at such talent; 'how clever Mr Bates is; and knows everything, you know.'

At length the day drew near when all this was to end; there was to be a dance the next evening, the last of the long-talk soapboiler's entertainments, and the day after Guy Algy was to return to London

'To-morrow,' said Algy to himself, the night before this last dance, hanging over his candle, cigar-holder in hand, 'to-morrow I shall know my fate, Bates or widower.'

CHAPTER IV.

'HEARTS ARE TRUMPS.'

'A capital band and the very best of Mr. Godfrey's valses.' Miss Tatum was in high dancing order, and went into the ball-room that evening with the full intention of enjoying herself thoroughly. 'A good dancer, with good music and nice partners,' was her utmost ambition in the way of enjoyment. Yet why should Mr. Bates find himself unconsciously indulging in a satirical grin as he said this to himself? Miss T. was not different to other young ladies in her ideas of enjoyment.

Mr. Bates that evening was silent and abstracted; he was by turns tender and stern in his demeanour towards Miss Tatum. When asked by her timidly, if anything had gone wrong; was there enough encumber in the back cup—pap wanted particularly to know what he thought of it!—he only gazed fixedly a nothing in particular and sighed heavily. He took Miss Tatum down to supper, but drank the governor's sparkling Moselle in gloomy abstraction; then he proposed that they should have a turn in the conservatories before returning to the ball-room. Miss Tatum was nothing loth, so they went out.

A lovely night and a most romantic moon peeping from behind drifting masses of clouds, sometimes silvering the garden into almost the brightness of day, then leaving all dark and sombre. Algy, with his partner's little hand resting lightly on his arm, stood looking out on this scene. There was a silence for some minutes; the scene was impressive, and the silence rendered it more so.

This was Algy's receipt. 'Take a young lady who has been whisked round a well-lighted ball-room some scores of times to Strauss and Gungl's music by the same young gentleman; add to this some really genuine champagne and supplementary claret cup; serve it up in a moonlit verandah, hanging to the same young man's arm and it will be found cooked to a proper degree of sweetishness.'

'It is very lovely,' he said, looking up into the sky, and turning his face so that the moonlight fell across it with a good effect; he had often studied this with the footlight on the stage, and knew that it caused his eyes to come out well

'Beautiful!' from miss, in almost a whisper; and as her gaze was turned heavenwards she could not help observing Algy's fine profile chiselled into delicate marble, and his large eyes looking wonderfully large just then.

'This time to-morrow I shall see it shining on the Thames from my dog-kennel in town.'

'To morrow! do you leave us to-morrow?'

He was watching her narrowly, and saw a shade pass over her face; it was disappointment.

'Yes,' he said, 'I must go back to the mill; it would not do for a poor miserable drudge like myself to have too long a spell of happiness; it unfits one for the workaday world again. I—I already feel—just enough of a sigh to be heard by Miss Tatum's attentive ears. 'Yes, I must go back to the grindstone.' You would think he was a galley-slave at least from the way he put his case. 'I shall think,' he went on, with the very quintessence of sentimental melancholy in his voice, 'I shall think, to-morrow, when I see yonder light, of this place, of this hour, naturally'—here he gave a slight tremble—'and of something—I mean some one else—I mean no one else.

No answer, but he thought he heard that rested on his arm was heavier than it had been; so he went on. 'There are some days, Miss Tatum, which are times of [illegible] times as forming oases in our life's desert. My visit at this house has been one to me. There are hours, too, hours when tears rise in the heart and gather to the eyes almost involuntarily, and feeling is stronger than speech—its very nature to deprecate use of giving expression to what—to what the heart would fain utter. Have—have I your permission to call this hour mine? may I think of it, in after days, as I shall think of it, oh, how often—may I then think of it as mine?'

'You may, Mr. Bates,' in a tremulous whisper.

[illegible] should take her hand in his to give due force to his words, natural enough too, that he should hold it there beyond the time necessary to give it a gentle squeeze—shake, we mean.

There was another impressive silence, in which the moon played an important part, or, as Algy would have expressed it, as theatrical parlance, 'did the leading business.' Somehow or other, too, Miss Tatum's hand was again held in his. Then, suddenly, 'Miss Tatum! Florence! for the once——' and at the person that rang to his deep voice she felt her face burning and an odd choking sensation in her throat.

'I cannot bear this longer. I know how weak it is; but I cannot, cannot help myself. Florence, do you not see that I love you? Forgive me my weakness; pardon it as springing—as springing from the strength of my love. I did not mean to have told you this. How could the struggling, unsuccessful author, the penniless disappointed artist who has seen the dream of his ambitious youth fade and die away under the blighting influence of—of ill-starred enemies, leaving him almost without a home, how could such a man ask you to share his lot? Ay, even though he saw in you the realization of his ideal, though since he has known you his thoughts have known none else; even then he could not tell you this. The very pride, which has been the chief obstacle to his success in life, prevents it now. This foolish weakness, which made his forget his purpose for the moment, your noble nature will forgive, I know. Good-bye, Miss Tatum—I had rather not face the people inside just now.

Will you think of me sometimes in after years, when—when you are happy, and I——. Will you think of me then as one who staked his all on a vain hope which his sense of honour bade him give up, though it was to drive him forth again into the world a soulless vagabond? Good-bye. Ah! your glove your glove, Miss Tatum! Good-bye, for ever. I could not stop in England for then I might see you, and it—it—wouldn't do, you know.'

Pressing the hand that lay passive in his, he turned to go. Was it only he heard then, and his own name following on it in a little choking whisper? At all events, Algy thought it was, so he went back and stood looking down on her. She lifted her face, and he saw tears glistening on her eyelashes; then he thought it was a fancy thing.

'How could you, how could you be so cruel? What do you take me for?'

A pause, during which he regarded her gravely. Then she looked up at him shyly. He held out his hand, and her little one came fluttering out to meet it. It was enough for Algy.

'Florence!' and he was drawing her towards him gently, while Miss Tatum's resistance thereof was not more than he was able to overcome.

Of course there was a regular row with the soapboiler papa. Over and above the fact of Algy's not having any money, Mr. Tatum had the great air condemn for literary men, whom he stigmatised as a sort of people living by their wits, which, in his eyes, was a sin against respectability; for a he argued, 'how could a man be worth anything who got his money in such a precarious way? Clever—clever—talent! Oh, I daresay; what do they bring him in? You're a little simpleton, child, to be taken in by such a fellow.'

Then the little simpleton flushed and bumped her little foot as she did brave not be for lover. 'He was noble and honourable in everything. Though he [illegible] her so, he was going away without even telling her of it, because he knew he was so poor. He was, papa.' And she would never, never marry any one else, him;' and papa was very, very cruel,' and she [illegible] loved Algy so dearly,' and he was so good and noble,' and she knew dear papa wouldn't break Flossy's heart;' and the flowers in her hair were flung over papa's shirt-front, and the little fairy had down her head upon the crackling cambric as she went in for a 'good cry.'

So ultimately papa was obliged to give in and Miss Tatum had her own way. Then, when on the next day Mr. Bates came out of the soapboiler's 'study,' after seeing the handsome sum the old gentleman included to settle upon his daughter at once, and she still handsomer sum that would eventually come to her, he told himself that 'this was a better thing than the Chumley business;' then he gave a sigh to the memory of Miss Chumley. 'Poor Rose; wonder how she'll get on with old Lacy! Ah, well it's all for the best. Really most providential that I couldn't get to the Hampstead Road so early that morning as I had intended! In that event he might have been the future Mrs. Bates, and I should have missed Florence. Poor Rose!'

The very morning after Algy's visit to Mr Tatum's sanctum, Dick Winslow received the following note:—

'Lyme House, Hants, Oct 7th.

'DEAR DICK,—I am going to marry Miss Tatum on the 19th instant. Miss T., the future Mrs. B., has settlements to the tune of a thou' per ann. You will see that I have done the best within time. Don't trouble yourself about the few fifties till convenient.

'Ever always,

'ALGY BATES.'

It is better to weep with Jerusalem sad, than laugh with Sodom at night.

A NOBLE DOG.

There is in the museum of Berne an object which attracts universal attention from visitors. It is only the skin of a noble dog, stuffed and set up so as to look as natural as life. But that dog had a history. His house was the convent of St. Bernard, away on an Alpine summit. There, in pleasant weather, he was wont to roll about and play in the porch with the fellows, as jolly as any dog. But when a storm came on and the rough weather set in, Barry exerted himself up for the occasion [illegible] and didn't find it [illegible] blanket strapped on his back, he would go in search of lost travellers in those [illegible] passes.

Never a fall of snow so heavy or so [illegible] but Barry could find his way. [illegible] he keen scent could discover a traveller at a great distance. If they were not [illegible] benumbed to walk, refreshed them with food he brought, and gaily excited them to warm cloak, and then went bounding gaily onward to show them the way. [illegible] they were fast sinking into unconsciousness he would warm them with his breath, [illegible] tongue, pull at their clothes, and if all efforts to arouse them failed, he would run off for other help. Forty years and more [illegible] owed their lives to noble Barry.

[illegible] he had earned a warm and comfortable home in the valley, when his age of service was over, and this honorable niche in the museum when his short life was ended. There he stands with his bottle and [illegible] about his neck, as if ready to start on his old mission.

Some people live all through a long life, and never accomplished as much good as this dog did. There are poor boys and girls on every side of us—cannot you [illegible] some? Will you not at least be willing to try as hard as noble Barry did? The good Temperance cause has saved thousands—will you not take right hold of this work? In the night of your child's study, and work, if you cannot save at least one? If every child would bring just one into this society, how old King Alcohol would shake on his throne! If you succeed in winning one sinner from the evil way, I am not [illegible] what that you will stop at that! Your success will encourage you to your second good work away down to the end of your life. You will [illegible] regret be repaid [illegible] under this head.

When the Law of Veracity is Violated.

When we state as a fact what we do not know to be true,

When we intentionally [illegible] a false impression, with the object of [illegible],

When we find that we have, though [illegible] accidentally, conveyed a false impression and do not hasten to correct it,

When we state a matter in the least degree different from the shape it has in our own minds,

When, in the statement of what may be true in fact, we purposely omit any circumstances which are necessary to a correct apprehension of the truth,

When we exaggerate or extenuate any of those circumstances,

When we purposely arrange the fact of a true representation in such a manner as to deceive,

When, without intention to deceive, we accompany the statement with a look of the eye, a tone of the voice, a motion of the head, or anything that may influence the mind and conduce to a false impression.

Do Nothing Young Ladies.

At a recent social gathering a young lady informed me that she never could. On test do you suppose was the nature of my reflection on hearing the declaration? I said to myself rather the girl ought to be [illegible] by, or she is very lazy. Never one word. Then, I queried, is she poor and sickly, or [illegible] your shoes and thinks your shoes and bonnet? Or requires the time to [illegible] your pretty gaiters, and dress the ladies to your stocking? Or your aged mother, or your more indulgent sister? Or do you live all your own time? Should the last suppose you do not care, may you never marry; and the chances are that you never will. There is not one young man in a hundred that can afford to marry a woman who belongs to the neglected household duties.

Young man, if it should ever be your [illegible] to hear a woman declare that she never sews, because! Shun her as you would old chaos and fever. If you should be insane enough to make such a one your wife, you may be sure before the honeymoon is over the horrors of bottomless stockings and [illegible] will be upon you. The lady's sewing will be done by others, while she mopes in idleness or [illegible] in [illegible] ignation. Then you may bid farewell to all your dreams of domestic felicity, and would-be [illegible] flowers at the [illegible] of frost.

I have heard ladies, educated and intelligent ladies, declare with the utmost pride their ignorance of the art of cookery. They could not make a cup of tea, boil a good bread, or cook a simple dinner; and was out of their power. Poor unfortunates!

Doubtless, parents are much to blame for thus neglecting the education of their daughters; but surely there is no excuse for a girl who could not, by the exercise of a little energy, perfect herself in the most useful branches of domestic knowledge. If a young lady of the present day can thumb the piano, make use of a few French phrases, dance, flirt, and do nothing generally but set off nature to a good [illegible]—she is considered 'finished.'

Advice to love-lorn—Telling them to stop sticking to them.

A truly great man never gets away from the simplicity of a child.

Never open the door to a little vice, it will [illegible] the door open.

The repentance [illegible] of unwise [illegible] age is but too often a regret for the [illegible] of [illegible] youth.

Installation of the Lieutenant-Governor.

The Hon. William Pearce Howland was yesterday sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario, in the Legislative Chamber, Parliament Buildings.

At one o'clock Mr. Howland arrived, accompanied by Col. Bernard of Ottawa and the new Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor, Ensign Curtis, who was on Saturday last gazetted to the 10th Royals, in order the more fittingly to assume his present duties. The guard of honour presented arms as Mr. Howland entered by the private door to the Speaker's apartments, where a number of regular and volunteer officers had already gathered to be present at the ceremony.

The assemblage in the Legislative Chamber was not large, and did not probably exceed 150 persons.

The following oaths were then administered by Chief Justice Draper:—

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE.

I William Pearce Howland do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and will defend to the utmost of my power against all conspiracies and attempts whatever which shall be made against her person, crown, or dignity, and I will do my utmost endeavor to disclose and make known to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, all treasons and traitorous conspiracies which may be formed against her or them; and I do faithfully promise to maintain, support, and defend to the utmost of my power the succession of the Crown, which succession, by an Act entitled "An Act for the further limitation of the Crown, and better securing the rights and liberties of the subject, is and stands limited to the Princess Sophia Dutchess of Hanover and the heirs of her body, being Protestants, hereby utterly renouncing and abjuring any obedience or allegiance unto any other person claiming or pretending a right to the Crown of this Realm, and I do declare that no foreign prince, person prelate state, or potentate hath or ought to have any jurisdiction, power, superiority, preeminence, or authority, ecclesiastical or spiritual, within this realm; and I make the declaration upon the true faith of a Christian.

So help me God.

W. P. HOWLAND.

OATHS OF OFFICE.

1st. You shall well and truly execute the office and trust of Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Ontario and the Territories depending thereon, and duly and impartially administer justice therein.

So help you God.

2nd. You shall do your utmost endeavors that all the clauses, matters, and things contained in the several Acts of Parliament heretofore passed, and now in force, relating to trade and Her Majesty's colonies and plantations be punctually and bona fide observed, according to the true intent and meaning thereof.

So help you God.

3rd You shall well and truly execute the office of Keeper of the Great Seal of Her Majesty's Province of Ontario, according to the best of your knowledge and ability.

So help you God,

A faint effort of applause was made at these proceedings closed, but the indifference of the assemblage was manifested by an utter disregard of the attempt, and the Lieutenant-Governor retired, after receiving the congratulations of some of the officials present to the Speaker's room.—After remaining for a few minutes, he left the building for his residence, the band playing as the carriage drove off. A faint cheer was arranged for on the occasion also, but failed before being attempted, and the carriage drove off amid the moody silence of spectators. The proceedings were of the most formal character, and but for the military display would have been tame indeed. A salvo of artillery was fired at the new Fort as the proceedings closed.

A lunch was, we understand, afterwards partaken of at Mr. Howland's residence, about fifty official persons being present.

In the evening, Mrs. Howland was at home to a very large number of guests invited by card a week ago. Refreshments were provided. The usual course for Governors has been to hold a levee, and to invite afterwards those who called upon them. Mr Howland has introduced a new fashion.—Globe, 23*d*.

THE NEW ATLANTIC CABLE.

(From the Pall Mall Gazette.)

As the Monitour has now confirmed in an official manner the statement of a concession of the right of laying down a submarine telegraph cable between Brest and the United States, it may be worth while to mention a few of the particulars of this enterprise. A corresponding concession has been granted by the State of New York, and the cable will be laid direct from Brest to New York City. This concession is understood to be an exclusive one—on the French side, at any rate—for twenty years. The grounds upon which the projectors have found favour with the French and New York State Governments have been, chiefly, that the proposed cable will obviate the circuity and delay incident to the present line, and will also lessen the existing liability to casualities. By the only route we now have not less than four submarine cables have to be employed, while the static fluid has to perform four land journeys also before a message can be sent from the Continent of Europe to New York. These intervene—1, the North Sea, or the English Channel; 2 the Irish Sea; 3. the Atlantic; 4, the sea between Newfoundland and the American Continent; while the wires have also to be carried across England, Ireland, Newfoundland, and, lastly, from the coast of British America southwards to New York. It is perhaps, surprising that with the circuity messages are sent from Europe to the United States as quickly as they are; but there is no doubt that communication will be very much accelerated if, as is said, a merchant or a broker at Paris will be able literally to speak into New York. It may possibly be a sanguine calculation that messages between those cities may be sent and answered in half an hour, and that messages may be sent from Berlin to Paris but to New York and answered within an hour; but the difference of time must obviously be very great. It is thought also that the directness and simplicity of the route will very much diminish the chances of communication with America being from time to time put out of gear. Ocean teleg aphy has now been carried to such perfection, that there is more fear of mishap by land than by sea; and, in point of fact, during the last two winters, when we have several times been alarmed by a stoppage of messages, the explanation has in each case been that storms had blown down the land telegraphs sometimes in Newfoundland, sometimes on the American mainland. From this danger, whatever it may amount to, the new line will be exempt. As the capital is still repugnant will, it is stated, be only $1,000,000, and the work [illegible] with only two

MR. HOWLAND'S APPOINTMENT.

(From the Quebec Chronicle, Monit rial.)

Mr. Howland's principal qualification for this high post are medium talents a respectable character and the recollection of useful services rendered the Coalition in bringing several Liberals to its support after Mr. Brown's defection, and in helping to split up the Grit Party. By this appointment Sir John A. Macdonald procures his gratitude, obtains the opportunity of playing further havoc with the Grits, by making still another convert, shows his firmness and pluck at his Sir George Carter, even at the expense of the feelings of his true blue friends, demonstrates his skill in Cabinet-making and political chess. Sir John is still some blood." with a will of his own and a skill which out-flanks all his enemies. What cares he for having the sentiment of Ontario with them or not well or ill-founded? This is another essay in high politics, another triumph of ex-ample than another proof that a converted or natural-ed Yankee is as good as an other man. But though Sir John A. may be coolly railed at for a few days, by his Ontario press, just to save appearances, their ample stock of Christian patience and forgiveness will move him against any unpleasant future consequences. He knows his men better than to fear any endeavor at their hands. What matter if that their judgments and sense of propriety are offended by this or that act, so long at the Opposition receive another buffet and so does against? We hope that the United States will reciprocate generously in this matter, and amend their constitution so as to make Canadian-born citizens eligible for the office of the Presidency. Under all the circumstances it is the duty of Ontario to bow submissively to this last dispensation, and endeavor to extract all the good possible from an act which, rightly or wrongly, many of our people regard in the light of a mistake of misfortune.

THE WORLD MOVES.

At the recent meeting of the Synod of Ontario, in connection with the Church of England, the following motion was moved and seconded:

Moved by the Rev Dr Jones, seconded by James Shannon, "That an address be presented to the Provincial Synod by the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario, affirming the duty and the benefit of Union with the Wesleyan Methodist Society, provided all essentials of Catholic Doctrines and Discipline be maintained; and praying the Provincial Synod to take steps to facilitate such a union."

The motion was left over as notice of motion for next Synod, but it shows there is a growing tendency among Episcopalians in this country to emerge from their positions of exclusiveness and self-constituted pre-eminence, and take more regard for the presence of other denominations, especially where strength is to be gained. It is well known that the Diocese of Ontario, with their worthy Head, Bishop Lewis, is the most bigoted and High Church part of the Canadian branch of the Episcopal Church, and this coming from them looks like the right kind of religious progress.—Perth Courier.

RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION IN THE STATES.—A case of the deepest interest involving principles of religious liberty as well as of parental jurisdiction, was decided by Judge Sutherland, in the Supreme Court of the State, in this City, on Friday last. A young woman of Catholic parentage and training was converted from the Roman Catholic to the Protestant faith. She was a person of good character excellent conduct, intelligence, and strong convictions. Shortly after she had become a member of the Methodist denomination, her father had her arrested for the offence, and incarcerated in a Catholic institution, known as the "House of the Good Shepherd,"—an institution which has a department called the Reformatory Department, the inmates of which are forcibly detained and disciplined for the benefit of their souls. A few days ago, some friends of the girl attempted to secure her release on a writ of habeas corpus; and she was brought from the institution to the Court. She testified her renunciation of Catholicity and her adhesion to Protestantism, and expressed her anxiety to return to the friends who had protected her. Her father however, declared she was a wayward girl, and that it was to keep her from evil that he had put her under restraint, by confinement in the Catholic institution.

After the hearing of evidence and argument, Judge Sutherland decided that the writ must be dismissed, and the prisoner remanded to the custody of the House of the Good Shepherd. Upon she was taken out of Court by her custodians, evidently in a very distressed state of mind.—N. Y. paper.

A NEW REMEDY FOR SUNSTROKE.—A correspondent sends the annexed remedy for sunstroke, which, he thinks, may prove of some service during the warm weather to those suffering from the effects of heat:—In Egypt, where sunstroke is of frequent occurrence the Arabs dissolve some salt in water and pour it into the ears of the patient. This almost immediately relieves the sufferer. We know not what the effect, simple in its character (beyond the statement of our correspondent), of this remedy would be, but its application could not injure the patient. Should it prove an active agent it would have a tendency to dissipate the dread now entertained against exposing the person to the heat of the noon day sun.—Globe.

LOST IN EARS.—On Saturday night last a shoemaker named Hopcroft, living in Stratford, cut off the ears of his apprentice with a pen knife, as a punishment for impertinency with his employer's wife. The shoemaker feigned absence from town, and returning to his own home at midnight crept slyly up stairs, where he found his spouse in the boy's company. He gave her a thrashing, and then cut one of the young rascal's ears off, leaving the other hanging by a piece of skin.—Statesman.

The Princess of Wales gave birth, to a daughter, her fourth child, at half past four on the afternoon of the 6th inst. A bulletin issued at Marlborough House on the morning of the 7th says that the Princess of Wales is progressing as favourably as possible, and that the infant Princess is quite well.

We learn that the report is true that the Prince Minister has promised to Halifax, as payable terminus, a company with the leader of the Ontario Government; and that the Minister of Militia and the Minister of Public Works are about to follow be the same destination.

THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1868.

WEST YORK.

The elevation of Mr. W. P. Howland to the Governorship leaves his seat as representative for West York vacant, and John A. with his usual tact, has issued the writ already. The nomination will take place on Monday and polling on the 10th, we believe. The government are bringing out a brother of Mr. Howland, who is said to be very wealthy, and by means of his own wealth and a few local lenders they expect to get him elected. What money can do will be done; a defeat will not be permitted if bribery can prevent it, so that we may hear of very lively times over this election. The reform candidate is Mr. Amos Wright, who is considered a sterling man, not venal, and who has been well tried in the past. It is true that he will not be able to cope with the government candidate in money matters, but it is believed that there are enough true reformers in West York to place Mr. Wright far ahead. They had better, however, not be too sure; they have wily antagonists to deal with; besides this is a very busy season of the year. Farmers will very unwillingly leave their harvest fields to canvass or even vote, so that if they wish to succeed they must be busy. The West Riding of York has generally returned a liberal member, even Mr. Howland was returned in that interest, but sold himself for the honors of an office. This may arouse the constituency to activity, so that they may not again be at the mercy of a man who would sell them for a mess of pottage. Mr. Brown was asked of no candidate, i.e. in his absence nothing could be done. We regret to learn that he is detained on account of the illness of Mrs. Brown, for while safety the World learns that some of our local members have not got rid of the rancour and ill-humour of the late election. It is well known that until this day some of them cannot afford to speak to many of the electors who honestly opposed them in the field and yet, forsooth, they will slam the door against those men to whom they will not allow to be obtained from the cauldron or at the door. other times speak to get to them for reform. tion concerning which we made that are about as "New grants." Are not our politicians magnanimous noble fellows? Let there be a loud and unanimous protest entered against such one sided justice, such lop and crop work, that men of such calibre may learn that they have not gone to Parliament represent a few partizans but to represent the whole community and show justice to all whether they voted the Reformer or Conservative ticket.

During the stay here of Dr. Ford, from the Crown Land Office, we have been informed that our local member monopolized his whole time almost. No one could see him unless in his presence. He kept all mes and papers before him, and went so far as to give directions to the Crown Land officials in the matter of certain lots; may we suppose in the interest of certain parties. Are these things so? Can it be possible that he would so far forget himself as to interfere in this way? or may we not rather say what he has to do in the matter? Answer—making votes? eh! or property? eh!

SUSPICIOUS.

On Saturday last, Mr. McWilliams, jailer, from a letter sent by one of the prisoners in jail which he intercepted, was apprehensive that some attempts would be made to liberate some of the prisoners now confined in the county jail. He accordingly watched on Saturday night remaining out till near 2 o'clock Sunday morning, but nothing occurred. He watched also on Sunday night and shortly before 12 o'clock he saw a man in the wood yard at the north of the Court House. He came to the wood shed close to where Mr. McWilliams was sitting, got hold of a ladder, placed it up against the jail wall and ascended to the top of the wall, going to where a corner of the jail is close to the wall. He then placed a plank which he had carried up with him, on the wall and on the sill of one of the windows. He was talking to one of the inmates, Ann Brennin, but what passed between them could not be heard. Mr. McWilliams then went and took him the ladder and going over a wall is where the interloper was, fired off a shot to raise the alarm. This caused him to return to the wall, and in going to where the ladder was he was observed to stop and give an object unnoticed. He said his name was James Wade and that he had merely gone to the cow where Ann Brennin was to enquire where her child was. He was then told to let him alone for policeman the wall, which he refused, saying no night as well to shot as to break his neck. The ladder was then placed against the wall when he came down and was shut up till next day, when he was brought before the Mayor and committed to take his trial for an attempt to break jail and let the prisoners escape. On Sunday he was admitted by the jailer to see Wm. Montgomery, and it is supposed his attempt at night was to carry on some plan there concerted between them. His name is James McCabe. From Trenton, and is said to be from the Penitentiary but a short time.

Wright's Steam Saw Mill at the head of Rice Lake was destroyed by fire on the 22d. About 30,000 feet of lumber, 50,000 pickets and a large quantity of slab were also burned. It is said to be the work of an incendiary. Insurance on Wright's property, $2,100. The next morning Breen's Hotel was consumed. Insured in Mutual, $1000.

Mr. Daniel Morrison, formerly of the Toronto Colonist, has accepted the position of City Editor of the Toronto Telegraph.

FIRE ITEMS.

In our last issue we had the unpleasant duty of recording the result of two disastrous fires, which have disabled a heavy loss on several persons, and is more or less of a loss to the community. In this week's minutes of the Town Council we learn that the worthy engineers of the Fire Engines are rather, and which leaves but just at the moment the engine is most required. Some part of it will give way, but what will be the consequences. Independently altogether, however, of the state of the present engine, there is a growing need and a growing desire in the minds of our citizens to have a Steam Fire Engine. It is well known that one engine is not capable of being worked in more places than one at the same time, and who that has attended these fires but knows that much valuable property could have been saved if there had been another engine. The town is now almost rebuilt, at a great expense to the owners of property. A fire in any of those new blocks will do more damage than it could do burning down the old ones. If we wish, therefore, to prevent the destruction of those fine buildings, our City Fathers should not delay one day in providing an other Fire Engine; even in the matter of insurance, property holders would be paid in a year or two, as it we had engines and supplies of water they would be willing to take risks on more advantageous terms. Let our City Fathers consider the matter; a fire may arise at their own doors some day.

THE NEW DOMINION MONTHLY.—This excellent monthly, for August is received. The contents are mostly original and very varied. The New Dominion Monthly is well suited for family reading, and is so cheap, 10 cents a number, that every family can afford to take it. It can be obtained at Stratton & Armstrong's, Peterboro, or from the publisher, John Dougall & Son, Montreal, at $1 a year.

Frank Leslie's Magazine, for August, is also received.

Godey's Lady's Book, Harper's Bazaar, The World of Fashion, &c., all the serials can be obtained at Stratton & Armstrong's.

RIFLE MATCH IN HAMILTON.—A match took place on Friday last, at the ranges of the Victoria Rifle Club, between Companies 1, 2 and 6, of the 13th Battalion. The shooting, especially that made by Company 1 and 2, was splendid. The contest resulted in No. 1 leading No. 2 13 points, and No. 6 47 points. The two highest individual scores were made by Private D. English and Ensign Lailie of No. 5. Company, the former being credited with 50 and the latter with 49 points. Private English was a member of No. 1 Company of the 57th Battalion. The members of No. 1 will learn with pleasure of the success of one of their comrades.

UNION SABBATH SCHOOL CONCERT.—We have been requested to announce that Mr. French who is at present instructing a Union Class of children from the different Sunday Schools, will give a concert at the close of the term on Friday (to-morrow) evening, in the Music Hall. Tickets, 15 cents each, can be obtained from the children or at the door.

A great conflagration took place in London on Monday, when 17 houses and $50,000 worth of property was destroyed. To the want of water is attributed one-half the loss, at least.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Helm, Kennedy, Chambers, Toole, English, Burnham, Wrighton and Stevenson.

The minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed.

A petition from Jas Lince and others, asking for a side-walk on the east side of Aylmer street, was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

Accounts from R. Hamilton, $30 04; George Stethem, $42 45; Board for prisoners, $1 92; Tom. Colling, one dozen pails, $2 40, were referred to the Committe on Finance.

A By-law to prevent pigs running at large was introduced by Mr. Burnham, read three times and passed.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Burnham, the Town Trust Commissioners were requested to grant Messrs. McDougall & Lidgate a lease of a portion of land in the south of the town to build a Mill on and for piling ground, and also the right to make a bunch to the railway, at a nominal rent.

On motion of Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Toole, Jas. McFadden and Andrew Kane were appointed pound-keepers for the town.

On motion of Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Helm, the Chief constable was instructed to get the Fire Engine repaired.

The Council adjourned for a week.

SAD ACCIDENT NEAR KINGSTON.—The Whig says—one of the most melancholy accidents that it could be our duty to record, occured on Wolfe Island, at the foot of the Bateau Canal, Tuesday morning, about 8 o'clock. Two little names Randall, between 10 and 13 years of age, of Mrs. Capt. Charles Sisley, took her little boy, about 4 years of age, down to the water to wash hats. The girl was held into slipped with him into the water, which is quite deep at the shore, and drowned. The other girl in her fright ran up to the house for the mother, who rushed frantically to the shore and plunging in, succeeded in getting the child out, but the latter was beyond recovery. Dr. Sparham was immediately sent for, but on his arrival life was extinct. Randall is a tailor and has been in business on Wolfe Island for some time past.

A fire in Hull destroyed 1,000 acres of timber, 50,000 cords of wood, 3 saw mills, 2 grist mills, 2 planing mills, 2 shingle mills, 2 lath mills, 2 stave mills, 2 barrel factories, 2 boarding houses, 1 store, 1 blacksmith shop, 1 stable, 1 boat house, 1 boat, 1 scow, 1 tug, 1 steam engine, 1 boiler, 1 steam pump, 1 steam crane, 1 steam capstan, 1 steam derrick, 1 steam tug, 1 steam scow, 1 steam barge, 1 steam launch, 1 steam tow boat, 1 steam lighter, 1 steam boiler, 1 steam engine

St. John, N. B. July 24.—Last night a salute of 21 guns was fired by Capt. Vernon's battery of Volunteer Artillery, in honor of Governor Wilmot's appointment. Accounts from Fredericton state that the ceremony on opening the Governor was read by Mr Sanders, clerk to the Executive. The oaths of office were administered by Judge Allan, and the proclamation was then read. The Mayor and corporation presented a congratulatory address, recognizing in his Excellency's appointment a reward for eminent services, embracing a period of twenty years' range. His Excellency made a brilliant reply, congratulating himself, and the people of the Province, that the day had arrived when a son of New Brunswick might aspire to so high a dignity. He spoke in glowing terms of the future of the Dominion, and trusted New Brunswick would remain true to herself in all honorable competition.

Nearly all the religious ladies of Great Britain have ordered their parties with regard to Mr. Gladstone's bill for disestablishment of the Irish Church. Congregational lots and Baptists are a unit in favor of the bill; so are the United Presbyterians. In the General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland, a large majority declared for the bill. The Irish Presbyterian Assembly declared, by a small majority, against the bill. The Established Church of Scotland is against the bill. The Wesleyans are divided on the subject, and avoid any official demonstration.

Bryan's Warner.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health it is truly have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and when taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25 cts per box.

The Suez Canal.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1867 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, fever-sores, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach, Phthisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, rheumatic, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind. It is at once a safe and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bites, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

Is positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Colds and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; it is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears away the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the consolidable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural sheen-it thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the dilated vessels to their natural size; by its use the lymphatic glands and derangements of the digestive organs are excited, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of any disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms:—Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, acquiet sleep, faintings, trembling, coughs, indigestion, lowspirits, fightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe, and administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other nauseous medicine.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 27

For they canna leave the Customs
Without the five per cent.

As they're taxed our rarest bukies,
It may be my opinion,
That they'll tax the sun for shinin'
To illumine the Dominion;
For the Bible, as a gift to man,
Was by his maker given,
An' hath the Sun an' Gospel,
Are alike free gifts from Heaven,
To tax the poor man's numbers
For any pr vate spec,

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonee Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died, I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats, coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician but I did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me, to his astonishment at once which I tell through my whole system at night I took a table spoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night sweats, Raising of matter, pain in the lung, &c., gradually left me, and I am hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr Lewis Josephus of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in front and sensible Language we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Sore Eyes, the various Skin of sores, humours, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, exceeding the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has in each and every case of the most Marvellous Cures ever accepted in the annals of the Great Medicine. Each being the case, in addition to the former persons and celebrities, we defy them to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Lineament Pills is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the alter of suffering humanity.

Poetry.

"ONLY A YEAR."

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

Only a year—no voice, no smile,
No glance of eye,
No clustering curls of golden hair,
Fair but to die.

One year ago,—what loves, what schemes
Far into life!
What joyous hopes, what high resolves,
What generous strife!

The silent picture on the wall,
The burial stone,—
Of all that beauty, life, and joy,
Remain alone!

One year,—one year,—one little year,
And so much gone!
And yet the even flow of life
Moves calmly on.

The grave grows green, the flowers bloom fair,
Above that head;
No morning tint of leaf or spray
Says he is dead.

No pause or hush of merry birds
That sing above,
Tells us how coldly sleeps below
The form we love.

Where hast thou been Thy year, beloved?
What hast thou seen?
What visions fair, what glorious life,
Where thou hast been!

The veil! the veil!—as thin, so strong
I wing in vain;
The mystic veil! when shall it fall
That we may see?

Not dead, not sleeping, not even gone,
But present still;
And waiting for the coming hour
Of visions sweet will.

Lord of the living and the dead,
Our spirits clear;
We bow in silence at Thy feet
This sad, sad year.

Selections.

THE GOLDEN TEST.

Lionel Harcourt, at twenty-one, became absolute master of a quarter of a million. No wonder his life looked bright to him. He had but to form a wish and his purse enabled him to gratify it. Friends flocked around him, or such as the world calls friends. They ate his dinners, drank his wines, borrowed his money, flattered his taste, professed the warmest friendship, and in the warmth of his heart and simplicity of his nature he believed their protestations never suspecting what it was that made him such a favorite.

So two years sped. He had spent heaps upon heaps; how large he did not know, for he kept his money transactions in the hands of a business friend.

One day he dropped into the office of his agent and called for a thousand pounds.

'You are spending money fast, Harcourt,' said his friend gravely.

'That's what money is meant for, isn't it?' said Harcourt, lightly.

'Yes, but——'

'And I am liberally provided. It will take me a long time to spend a quarter of a million.'

'Not at the rate you have been spending it the last two years.'

'You don't mean that,' said the young man seriously.

'Yes I do.'

'Have I exceeded my income?'

'Largely.'

'How largely?'

'Within the last two years, you have got rid of a hundred thousand dollars.—You can judge how long the money will last at that rate.'

'Three years more.'

'Four, including interest.'

'And then I shall be penniless?'

'Yes if you continue; but that I hope you won't do.'

'And yet,' said Harcourt, respectfully, 'it has been so pleasant to gather my friends about me. Such warm hearted, pleasant fellows!'

His friend regarded him fixedly.

'You have perfect confidence in their friendship?'

'Yes.'

'And you don't think they are attracted by your dinners and readiness to lend money, or rather to give it, since not one in ten of your loans will ever be paid.'

'Of course, I do not think so basely of them,' said the young man indignantly.

'Your think their friendship would be unchanged if you were to lose your money?'

'Certainly; you cynic, Mason, or you would never doubt it.'

'Suppose you put them to a test,' said his friend, quietly.'

'How do you mean?'

'This. Let me report that you have lost money by speculation—you know you lost by the Grand Combination Petroleum Company—shut up your establishment, give up your luxurious habits, come into my office as a clerk for a month and see how your friends will stand the test.'

The novelty of the plan struck Harcourt. It will be a clever mystification.

'I'll do it,' he said, promptly. 'When shall I begin?'

'Next week. By that time the report will have got round. You must not forget yourself. Lay aside your fine clothes and dress yourself in accordance with your altered circumstances. Seek a cheap boarding place, and we shall see what will be the result.'

'Very well. You will find that I am right, and that I don't rely vainly upon the friendship of Boulton, Gray and Ponsonby.'

'I hope you may be right. It will increase my respect for human nature.'

The next day it was currently reported that Lionel Harcourt was a bankrupt.—His extravagance and unfortunate speculations had brought about this disastrous result. Everybody was surprised at first. His friends regretted the money they had lost, and the purse which had ever been open to them. How much more they regretted will appear in the sequel.

It was with rather singular feelings that Lionel Harcourt started to visit his friends, knowing that his bankruptcy had been reported.

He met Fred Belton on the street.

'Ah, Belton,' he said, 'How are you?'

'How are you Harcourt?' said Belton but not with his usual cordiality. 'Sorry to hear of your loss of fortune.'

'Yes, it is unlucky; but then I never valued money so much as friendship. I am young and may get back my money.'

'Yes, of course,' said Belton, in an embarrassed manner.' I hope you will.'

He had borrowed two thousand of Harcourt, only a short time before, which he didn't intend to pay if he could help it, though abundantly able. He was afraid Harcourt would mention it, and he wanted to get away. In his loose unbusiness like way, he had neglected to take any acknowledgement of the money lent, and there was no legal proof of it.

'Of course, if I can help you in any way, I will, he said, coolly. 'I suppose you will be looking for a situation in some counting room?'

'Have you a vacancy in yours, Belton?' asked Harcourt, beginning to understand for the first time the man whom he had feted and obliged.

'Well, no,' said Belton, 'but I may find one somewhere.'

'I won't trouble you, Mason has offered me a clerkship.'

'Has he, indeed. You had better take it by all means.'

'I don't know; I thought I might go into business for myself.'

'But you would need capital.'

'But I have provided for all my debts, and I have enough owing to start me in a small business. I shall owe me about three thousand dollars, Gray one thousand, and you two thousand, then there are other small ones.'

'I owe you two thousand dollars! Surely you are mistaken.'

'Not at all. A year since you borrowed a thousand.'

'I repaid it; you have forgotten.'

'And three months since you borrowed a thousand. Both are still due.'

'Then you have my note?'

'None were given.'

'I regret to say you are under a misunderstanding. I owe you nothing; but if a loan of fifty dollars will be of service.'

'It will not,' said Harcourt, haughtily. 'I had you good morning, sir. There is a cabbed, been a mountebank sliding. I thought you my friend; I discover my mistake.'

Speedily was for a bankrupt's and Belton to himself. He can't prove the cost, and he can't afford to let two rooms go when I can just as well retain them.'

Harcourt, disgusted and disappointed at Belton's baseness, kept on his way until he reached Talbot's store.

'Is Mr. Talbot in?' he inquired of one of the clerks.

'Who is it?' asked Talbot, who was reading the newspaper.

'Mr Harcourt.'

'Tell him I am particularly engaged,' was the reply.

The answer was carried to Lionel.

'Does he know who it is?'

'Yes sir,' he replied.

Lionel smiled slightly and left the store. He caught sight of his friend Gray, on the other side of the street.

'Oh Gray, good morning.'

'Good morning, Harcourt,' said Gray half cordially, curious to know the particulars of his friend's ruin. 'What's this I hear? Are you really bankrupt? Shan't you save anything?'

'My debts are all provided for, luckily, and I shall have clear the money I have lent out. I believe you—'

'Excuse me, Harcourt,' said Gray, hurriedly. 'There's a man opposite I wish particularly to speak to.'

And he turned away, fearful of what was coming.

'All alike,' said Harcourt, bitterly. 'I couldn't have believed it. And yet these men have eaten at my table, and professed the greatest friendship for me. Ha, who comes here? It is Miss Ridgely. I wonder whether she will act in the same way.

Miss Ridgely was a fashionable young lady, who for the last three months had paid violent siege to Lionel's heart. He was not in love with her, but might have been flattered into offering himself if his property had continued.

Miss Ridgely made a very slight inclination, ignoring Lionel's evident intention of speaking to her.

'She too!' he said to himself. 'This repays me for all. I might have been fool enough to marry her, and so wrecked my happiness.'

The next day he went into Mason's office, a clerk on six hundred dollars a year, as he took care to have it understood. He obtained board at a cheap boarding house, and entered upon a new life. Every day he met his old friends on the street. They just acknowledged his bow, and no more.

Lionel looked after them with a quiet smile.

'I am glad,' he thought, 'that my eyes are opened at last.'

So things continued for a month. But one morning, Belton and Talbot, walking arm in arm, were almost paralyzed with astonishment at encountering Harcourt driving up street in a stylish buggy, behind a handsome pair of bays. Lionel was elegantly dressed, never in his life had he looked handsomer or brighter.

'Good Heavens! is that Harcourt?' asked Belton.

'Let us speak to him,' said Talbot.

'Come and dine with me to-day. I've been meaning to ask you for some time.'

'So have I,' said Belton, 'come and dine with me to-morrow.'

'Thank you gentlemen,' said Harcourt, 'unfortunately, I shall be otherwise engaged.'

Just then, Miss Ridgely passed, and seeing the handsome equipage, bowed sweetly, but with a surprised look.

Within twenty-four hours all Lionel's old friends had come back to him. They tried to make up for their past coldness by the warmth of their profession. But he had learned a lesson by which he was resolved to profit. The friends who had deserted him were treated as mere acquaintances. He had lived handsomely as his wealth enabled him to do, but his surplus thousands were no longer invested upon selfish parasites, but bestowed judiciously upon such as needed it.

A Great "Sell" in Chicago.

A shrewed joker succeeded in completely astonishing some classes of business men in Chicago, who are usually keen to "smell a mice." On Tuesday evening a rather shabby looking young man went to the Briggs House and took one click that he was the driver of Robert Bonner's horses, and that Bonner was on his way to Chicago with five of his famous stud. He asked that a suit of the best rooms in the hotel be assigned to Mr. Bonner and himself, a request with which the clerk was only too happy to comply. The applicant stated that a stenogle was to be given to Mr. Bonner, and proceeding to the office of Ives Light Guard Band, by the same adroit story secured the services of the Band for the ensuing evening. Then he went to an extensive livery stable and engaged a hard wagon, with four horses and a driver. The band got aboard and were driven by direction of the consequential horseman to a private house in the river, where the famous horses went to be disembarked, and were required to play a number of popular airs out of compliment to the captain of the vessel. After amusing himself in this fashion for a while, the "agent" said Mr. Bonner was coming by the cars and would leave the team at "Mr. Patterson's" residence in the suburbs. Thither went the band discoursing sweet strains on the route. These demonstrations and the report that soon got abroad that the famous Bonner was coming to Chicago, attracted a large crowd of people to the hotel to witness the expected ovation. Time wore away, and no Bonner appearing, the stable proprietor, who had been most duped to the hotel to partake of the refreshments to be provided on the occasion and who had got tired waiting therefor, became anxious to "sell." Taking a buggy he drove out to "Mr. Patterson's" where he found the band drawn up. A knock at the door by the anxious stable keeper elicited the fact that no "Mr Patterson" lived there, that no Bonner was there, and no driver of his fast horses. The hotel, who for more than four hours had followed the track of a worthless wag, then, at midnight, went back to the city in melancholy consort, with the out witted stable keeper for a leader.

Desperate Robbery in London

Instances have occurred in various cities and towns, of exchange offices being robbed in broad daylight by a bold and sudden dash at the treasure thus displayed, but most of our citizens will remember how nearly successful a coup of this kind was upon the funds similarly displayed in the office of Mr. Biden nearly three years ago. No doubt with this, or some other lawless scheme in view, a man stopped at Strong's Hotel about ten days ago, registering his name as Frank John Tom, from New York, and from the manner in which the robbery of last night was executed, he must have occupied his time since in arranging a plan for the successful carrying out of his bold project. Yesterday, having doubtless decided upon the course to be adopted, Johnston hired a horse from the livery stable of the Isle Wm. Conte—a fast nag known as Dick Dunne—he rode about the city and into the country, apparently with the sole intention of indulging in a little healthful recreation. In the evening about half-past eight, he alighted from his horse on North street, near the corner of Talbot, and calling a young lad named Walsh, who was passing at the time, asked him to hold the animal till he returned, when he would give him ten cents for his trouble. The boy agreed, and our enterprising stranger next turns up on Richmond street, where he was observed by the cabmen, who are generally to be found there, to pass and repass between Bonnin's store and the cottier, four or five times.—The crash of shattered glass next attracted their attention, and simultaneously with it, the strange man passed them at flying speed round the corner and disclosed upon Dundas street. The cry of "stop thief" was raised, and a brisk pursuit was at once made by a miscellaneous crowd, which soon swelled to the number of two hundred, or more.

The amount of money stolen was about $250, in Canada bills, and between $30 and $40 in American money. Mr. Bonning offers a reward of $50 for the apprehension of the thief. There is also a reward of $200 offered for him by the authorities in Michigan who are anxious to catch him so as to bring him to account for his evil deeds there.—London Advertiser.

The Speed of the Earthquake Wave.

A California paper relates that "the earthquake wave which followed the recent eruption in the Sandwich Islands was transmitted to the Pacific coast, and recorded on the government self-registering tide gauges, San Francisco and Astoria, in about five hours. On the 23rd of December, 1845, a similar wave was transmitted from the coast of Japan to the Golden Gate, in 12 hours and 38 minutes." From Hawaii to San Francisco, the distance is more than 2,000 miles. The impulse communicated to the waters by the earthquake shock proceeded, therefore, at the rate of 400 miles per hour, or 6⅔ miles per minute. This fact—if it is a fact—will be of very great interest to scientific men.

An Illinois editor, while learning the printing business, was also courting the minister's daughter. On going to church, what was his surprise to hear the minister give out for his text, 'My daughter is grievously tormented with a devil.'

The Richest Banker in the World.

(From Fun's Monthly)

At times in the haunts of business, especially on Change,—Nathan Rothschild was a marked object. There he stood, day after day, leaning against his pillar on the right hand entering from Cornhill. He was monarch on 'Change; and the pillar in question may be said to have been his throne—but in his case, a gold grande. No consideration would induce him to do business anywhere else, so devoutly attached was he to that particular spot. There, with his back resting against the pillar, and with his note book in hand, he was always to be seen, during usual hours of business, entering into transactions with the merchants and capitalists of all countries.

Little would a stranger, who chanced to see the money potentate of the world, standing on the spot in question, have fancied, from his personal appearance, what an important influence he exerted on the destinies of Europe. No one could be more unprepossessing than he—just such a man as the boys in the street would have thought a fine subject for a 'lark,' unless, indeed, they had been deterred by the lowering expression or sullen aspect of his countenance. He always looked sulky, never indulged in a smile, nor even relaxed the rigidity of his muscles. In private, his intimate friends mention that he occasionally made an effort to smile, but never with any marked success,—he smiled at best but a little more than a species of spoiled face.

His countenance were a thoughtful aspect, but his whole appearance was that of a stupid clownish farmer of the humbler class. His features were massive; he had a flat face, its conformation being peculiarly in chance erratic of the faces of the Jewish race of people. His features seemed to be huddled together without anything like regularity in them.—His nose had a good deal of the cock-up form. His mouth was very large, and his lips thick and prominent. His forehead was more than a average height, considering the altitude of his face. His hair had a nothing of a darkish tone, and was generally short. His complexion was pale, except where it was slightly tinged with color by the weather. He was short and thick, though being somewhat under the general height, it is possible his pit belly, and corpulent aspect generally, may have made him appear shorter than he really was. He usually was to be seen in a great coat of a dark brown color; and as he paid but little attention to his personal habiliments, his lobster had no difficult customers to please—but it is respect to taste and style, though not on the question of price.

It was one feature in Nathan's conduct, when on 'Change, but he never, except when engaged in business, entered into any conversation whatever with the multitude by whom he was surrounded. Apparently as deeply lost in thought, and as melancholy in countenance, as if he had been in the 'vast wilderness' of shades referred to by Cowper, or been the 'last man' described by Byron. Whether his reserve was constitutional, or whether it arose from the pride of purse, or whether from the matters which he must have been occupying his mind, or from the constant operations of those he was constantly engaged with, can only be conjectured.

"ALL AROUND MY HAT."—We observe that last year's custom, amongst the Augustines and other sprigs of staid and sensible parents, of wearing a cotton wreath, or mid-summer round their hats is already revived: and the weakness the sexes, once again to engage the exclusive attention of weak-minded young men, to the neglect of other more important matters—such as the due arrangement of their several necktees, "cockles," and the like. But we are told the "wearing of the wisp" is a great protection to the head. Well, we'll concede that, as we believe there is a fine instinct in nature to protect the weakest part and nature cannot so ably have made exception in this case, although she may have good reasons for doing so, when she found that to the subjects of her protection she had given to animals of the assinine species the form and bearing of men.—Exchange.

At Akron, Ohio, a few days ago, two persons of opposite faith married themselves, with a little aid of the Mayor, by repeating the following formula:—"In the presence of our spirit and earth friends, I take Electa A. Sanford, whom I hold by the right hand, to be my lawful wife, hoping by kindness and affection to be to her a faithful and loving husband while in the earth form." The lady then repeated:—"In the presence of our spirit and earth friends, I take Abel Underwood, whom I hold by the right hand, to be my lawful husband, hoping by kindness and affection to be to him a loving and faithful wife while in the earth form." The mayor then said:—"Having pledged your marital vows in the presence of these witnesses and of the world, I now, in the name and by the authority of the State of Ohio, pronounce you husband and wife." The Beacon says they have no form of ceremony in which the word death occur.

FEMALE LIBERTY.—In Paraguay women do all the farm work (tending the flocks and tilling the ground), and fill all the petty offices of Government, and it is alleged that Paraguay is the only country in the world where woman has a perfect equality with man. She holds office, high, works on the farm, recruits soldiers, serves in the hospital, guards the house, tames horses, and, in fine, she is free. Man has taken off the shackles, and she is equal to the situation.

An infidel, who had been attempting to prove that men have no souls, asked a lady, with an air of triumph, what she thought of his philosophy. "It appears to me," she replied, "that you have been employing a good deal of talent to prove yourself a beast."

A Man with Four Wives.

A few months since a young man named John White came into Shannon village and obtained some kind of [illegible] are not informed what. Immediately upon his return, White borrowed a horse of his father and some money, we believe of her brother, stating that he wished to get Shannon. He failed to return, and it was then that he found out from some source that he had sold the horse. Subsequent events prove that he went to Chicago, formed the acquaintance of a sister of a young lady whom he had recently married left in Shannon town-lap, made a proposal of marriage, and the young lady, like a dutiful daughter wrote to her parents referring the matter to them. FORCE OF A MOTHER'S LOVE.—A striking illustration of the force of a mother's love for her child has recently been exhibited in Iowa. The circumstances are reported in noticing the pardon by Gov. Merrill of a woman, Catherine Ardle, who had been sentenced four years ago to the State Penitentiary for life. She confessed to murder and was sentenced to be hanged, but her sentence was commuted to life. Since then it has been discovered that she was entirely innocent, that her son was the murderer, and that he saw him from the gallows and [illegible] that she was guilty of the crime.

'Did you know,' said a cunning Yankee to a Jew, 'that they have Jews and monkeys together in Portland?' 'Indeed!' then it is well that you and I are not there,' returned the Jew.

THE END OF A SAD STORY.

An application lately made in the Divorce Court in London shows the final scene of one of the most miserable dramas ever enacted in private life. In October, 1861, the papers contained an account of the suicide of a gentleman at the Spa Hotel, Gloucester. Three months before that he and his reputed wife took rooms at that Hotel, under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Desmond. Early in October the lady was confined and seemed to be doing well, when suddenly, unfavorable symptoms set in, and she died before medical aid could be procured. Her supposed husband was in great distress. He declared that she was the only friend he had in the world, and attempted to commit suicide. The second attempt was unhappily successful. At the inquest evidence was given to the effect that the supposed Mr. Desmond was Lord Forth, the eldest son of the Earl of Perth; that he had separated from his wife, and that the woman whose death had led to his self-destruction was a Hereford lady who had left her husband.—It also transpired that Mrs. Drummond, who was really a Mrs. Lloyd, had died from intemperance, and that Lord Forth was an habitual toper. His wife had applied for a divorce from him on the ground of repeated cruelty, drunkness and adultery, but the charges were not sustained. Sir Cresswell Cresswell refused to grant a decree on the ground that she had committed adultery with a Mr. Dering, son of Sir Edward Dering, member for East Kent. Lord Forth, who was a niece of the Earl of Essex, had, in fact, gone to the United States with Mr. Dering. The death of Lord Forth enabled the pair to marry.—The prospects of happiness under such circumstances was of the darkest, and it turned out the worst as was hopelessly bad.—In the next act in the drama was an application on the part of Mr. Dering for a decree from Viscountess Forth, on the ground of her adultery with Captain Blakely. This officer, who was a particularly handsome man, was well known in London, and also in America during the civil war. There was no doubt but that he had committed the offence charged against him; but the evidence seemed to indicate collusion on the part of Mr. Dering, and therefore the Queen's Proctor intervened with a view to prevent a dissolution of marriage. The jury, however, decided that although Mr. Dering had not taken sufficient care of his wife there was not sufficient evidence to prove collusion. At the trial, which was heard a few weeks ago, it was stated that Viscountess Forth, or Mrs. Dering, had died in Lima of yellow Fever. On Wednesday the matter came up again on the intervention of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Capel who endeavored to prevent the decree for divorce being made absolute, and they stated that Captain Blakely had also died of yellow fever within a few days of their daughter. Thus, out of five actors in this most miserable story, only one (Mr. Dering) survives. All the rest—Viscount Forth, Mrs. Lloyd, Viscountess Forth and Captain Blakely—have died in the full vigour of manhood or the full beauty of womanhood.

The Crops in the States.

A report has just been issued from the U. S. department of agriculture on the condition of the crops on July. It states that there has been a large increase in the amount of corn planted, the increase in the Southern States amounting to 2,500,000 acres, and the whole Union to 3,108,000 acres. The drought in the South has retarded its growth, but the condition of the crop in that section is generally good. In the West the average is high, with the exception of Ohio and Indiana, where the weather has been somewhat unpropitious and the storms destructive. In the East in the last part of June the growth was small, but the hot weather of July has brought a large portion of the crops into splendid condition. The condition of wheat as shown in the July return is above the average for last year in all the States except Vermont, Connecticut, the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas and Nebraska. The season has been peculiarly favorable to the growth and ripening of this great bread crop in all except the Southern States. Rye, oats and barley promise abundant crops. No serious drawbacks are reported and few complaints of bad condition are received.—Potatoes so unexceptionably unproductive last year, are in an unusually fine condition and the average is increased in every State except Rhode Island—the natural result of extremely high prices of last year's crop. Fruit is variable. Apples and peaches are less promising than usual.

Tobacco covers as large an area as usual in Virginia, Kentucky and Connecticut, somewhat less in Indiana, Illinois and Missouri. Its condition is good in Kentucky and Michigan. Elsewhere a little below the average. Sorghum is generally doing well in the West, but not so well as usual in the middle belt of the Southern States. Cotton shows a falling of everywhere, except in Texas and Alabama.—The decrease in Missippi appears to be 18 per cent., 24 in Louisiana, 12 in Georgia, 13 in Arkansas, 18 in South Carolina, 20 in North Carolina. The average reduction in acreage is about ten per cent.—With this diminished breadth there is clearer and better culture and a more general use of fertilizers, so that the yield may be quite equal to last year, the season being equally favorable with a like experience as to insects an other causes of injury. The correspondent, as might be expected, declares that the crops are all in splendid condition, and if not injured by a drought the finest yield for many years will be the result.

THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOAN.—We stated on Friday last the London Times of the 9th instant had announced that the Canadian Intercolonial Loan, to the extent of £3,000,000 stg., would shortly be put on the market, and that the fact excited so much interest as slightly to affect the price of consols. Cable despatches have since been received conveying the information that Mr. Rose did put the loan on the market, a few days after the departure of the "Moravian," to the extent of £2,000,000 stg., which is the whole amount at present needed. £1,500,000 of the sum be offered is covered by the Imperial guarantee (the Act limiting the rate of interest to 5 per cent) and £500,000 upon the credit of the Dominion. If we are not misinformed, the loan was offered in the proportion of three-fourths guaranteed and one-fourth without the guarantee. The bids were very satisfactory, amounting to £8,250,000 stg. The lowest tenders accepted were at a premium of 2½, and the highest at 6¼.—Montreal Gazette.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.—During the thunderstorm of Friday evening, a young man named Frederick Walden, living a few miles north of Trenton, was killed by lightning. He was on his way to the field after some cows, when he was struck by the electric fluid. Death was instantaneous.—Whig.

THE IRISH SOCIETY.

A late English paper says:—The Irish Society was established 250 years ago. It is a missionary work, conducted entirely by the Irish branch of the United Church. Its purpose is to teach and to instruct to the Irish speaking population. Its plan is not so much to encourage controversy as to teach the Word of God, through the medium of the old Irish language, which is still the home language in many parts of the country, and which is spoken by more than 800,000 persons. This society has been the means of building twenty churches, which are filled with converts, and where the service is conducted in the native language. Still more numerous are the school house which it has erected. It maintains scholarships in Trinity College, Dublin, for the study of the Irish language. And it can now upon its books 12,000 scholars, who are learning to read the Scriptures in their own tongue. It maintains 11 missionary clergymen, 22 inspectors of schools, 40 Scripture readers, 13 mission schools, in which are 429 children, and 250 Irish schools, in which the 12,000 persons are receiving instruction. To maintain this agency its income last year was only £7212, the greater part of which was collected in Ireland. So the Irish Church has not for the last fifty years at least neglected or been unsuccessful in missionary labors.

A contemporary, remarking on the presence of armed sentries at the doors of the Fenian Congress, now being held at Buffalo, thinks that they have wonderfully flexible laws over the way. Down south they throw men into prison, as Ku Klux Klansmen, if they appear in public with fire-arms in their possession; while up north the Irish Ku Klux are allowed to parade in the streets armed and uniformed, and with the avowed intention of murdering their neighbors on the first favorable opportunity. A Fenian picnic is to be held near Buffaly next Monday, and probably the present meeting is in some way connected therewith. A raid may be intended, but we think not. A more terrible danger threatens in the west. On Tuesday and Wednesday the Fenian Sisterhood are to hold a picnic near Detroit. Having become disgusted with the "byes" they are going to manage the next raid themselves. An invasion by a couple of thousand Irish ladies of Fenian proclivities would be awful. The men would be decidedly preferable.

THE WEATHER IN ENGLAND.—The whole country is at once anxious and stupified by the long drought. I hardly remember, even in some of the hottest parts of America, seeing a country burned up.—Scarcely a green blade is now to be seen. No dew falls in the evening to refresh the withered leaves. I have seen trees so blasted as to give impress a that blights had settled upon them—the ground is hard and cracked. In many parts the root crops will be wholly lost, and in light soils there may be much depreciation of grain. The cattle are now driving to water because the intolerable dust on the road, and water carts are in use throughout the South-Eastern counties. Distress of a serious character stares us in the face. The high price of fodder will put up all the animal food. I pay one and sixpence sterling a pound for butter at Midsummer, in the country!

Patrick Boyle, the publisher of the Irish Canadian newspaper, arrested on suspicion of Fenianism shortly after the McGee assassination, with three others, is again at liberty, the others having been previously released on bail. Boyle was held in custody until it was discovered that there was an error in the warrant for committal. This document required to be signed by two magistrates, but one of the officials in question, Alderman Boulton of this city, was not at the time duly qualified to act as a magistrate. A habeas corpus was accordingly applied for, and the prisoner brought up before Justice Morrison, who, after several adjournments, decided on Monday last, on wholly technical grounds, that the committal was informal and the prisoner consequently entitled to his discharge.

REBEL OUTRAGE IN WEST VIRGINIA.—On Sunday, the 19th inst., a party of the Irish Democracy in Clay Township, Monongalia county, Va., went to a church on Day's Run where a congregation was assembled, and hooting open the door cursed all Union men and soldiers who were there, and dared them to come out and fight. They were all armed, and swore they were ready to fight for the Southern Confederacy. They wore the rebel badge of red, white, and red. The minister was obliged to discontinue the service, and with a part of the congregation retired to the woods and concluded the meeting.

A few days ago a gentleman visited Wooster, Ohio, looking for a site on which to build a paper mill. As soon as his errand was known, the business men of the place, instead of raising their rents and the price of lots, at once proposed to furnish him, free of cost, a suitable site and a steam engine to run his machinery. He accepted the proposition, and will erect a mill that will cost about $35,000. This is the way they do things out West, where the true secret of growth and prosperity is recognized in the attracting of labor and capital to a town instead of driving it away.

A country girl in Iowa having been decoyed into a house of ill-fame at Des Moines, the farmers of the vicinity organized a vigilance committee, and at night took possession of the house, turned all the inmates out of doors, and then set fire to the house. The building was entirely destroyed. The missing girl was not found, and it was feared that the keeper of the house, who was arrested, would be hung by the mob, as it was strongly suspected that the girl had been ruined and then murdered.

The Hon. Mr. McDougall finds that he has business connected with the public works at Halifax at this time, as Mr. Cartier discovers work there connected with the militia. The fact is, all our prominent men, and especially those who have a remarkable talent for throwing dust, are going to have a hand in the great Nova Scotia battue. The Twelfth of August is at hand, just the time for sport, and the baronet, the knight, and the Hon. Will bag the Blue Noses if they can.—Witness.

EARTHQUAKE.—What appeared to be a sharp shock of an earthquake was felt on the side of Montreal Mountain on Monday morning, at ten o'clock. It was accompanied by a grating and rumbling noise, something like that of a vessel slightly touching the ground; and a trembling movement which caused doors and windows to vibrate with considerable violence. It lasted several seconds.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1868.

WEST YORK.

The nomination took place on Monday, and the polling will be on Monday and Tuesday next. The candidates are Mr. Wright, Liberal, and Mr. Bell, the government candidate. They are both old Reformers.—Even Mr. Bell, we are told, is an old reformer, but it comes with very bad grace to come out under the wing of the Tories. If Mr. Bell had opposed Mr. Wright on personal merits, we have no doubt but that the Tories would have brought out a candidate to oppose both. But by some means they have got over Mr. Bell, and by thus getting an old reputed Reformer, they hope to split the reform interest. This is the old game of John A. Macdonald. They found they had no man who would have the ghost of chance to be returned as a conservative in West York, and immediately they go to work and get over a man who is ready to sell himself for a consideration. They have found after years of venality that too many have their price, and thus they are enabled to get over by honest or dishonest means, men who have borne as good a political character as possible. But if the electors of West York remain true to their principles, they will reject the man, no matter what his antecedents, who is ready to work with their enemies for any consideration. Mr. H. S. Howland would be preferable to Mr. Bell, for he refused to be elected unless he could be by Reformers. Mr. Bell does not care how or by whom only send him.

NOVA SCOTIA.

The Return of Mr. Howe and the other delegates from England, and the intelligence that their mission had been without success has aroused the anti-union party in Nova Scotia. The most violent outbursts of language and declarations of their intentions to break the tie that binds them to the sister provinces, are indulged in. Annexation is openly and freely talked of, and the people are represented as determined not to remain in the confederation. We are not in a position to fully know that these are the sentiments of the mass of the people, but there must be something serious up when John A., Cartier and the other members of the Dominion government have gone down to see what can be done. It appears that the Imperial government has imposed the task on the Dominion government of pacifying the sister province, and they have undertaken the work. Much better if they had gone to work at first appearance of dissatisfaction, and having found out the cause, removed it, or never have forced them into a union distasteful to them. There can be no doubt but that the dissatisfied colonists have got the best of the bargain, as may be seen by Mr. Tilley's letter given about a week ago. The true cause of their discontent must arise out of the disappointment of some of their leaders, and they in consequence stir up the people, until at length our would-be statesmen find they must go and try their hand at politics. Why in their tariff and postage system was disturbed, they spoke very plainly and denounced strongly the forcing system of John A. & Co. Messrs McDonald and Cartier through their cunning and shuffling aided by the hierarchy of Lower Canada, succeeded in carrying things with a high hand in the late Province of Canada. The loyalty and patriotism of Upper Canadians caused them to bear with it rather than do anything that would endanger our connexion with England, hoping by Confederation or something like it to get free from the grasp of men who acted without principle and retained office at the price of honor. The Blue noses, however, do not seem to be patient; they will not permit John A. McDonald to bind heavy burdens on them, nor will they patiently submit to be imposed upon. We trust, however, that they will not allow their passions to get the better of their judgment, and that they will refrain from every method of redress except legal and constitutional means. The legislature of Nova Scotia meets this week and we suppose that the ministers have gone there to await events or to propose some amicable arrangement for the general welfare. We trust they will be successful in allaying the feeling that prevails, and that they will be able to return to Ottawa to announce their success in making things pleasant and harmonious.

On Mr Howe's arrival his organ speaks as follows:—"We take it for granted that, as a justice of course, our representatives will declare this Province free from, and do everything in their power to place Nova Scotia practically out of Confederation. Let the Canadians do their best, and they cannot hold Nova Scotia against the will of the people; and this proves two things worthy of remark: first, that the Canadians are a low, sordid and tyrannical people, he insisting on holding and muzzling sister colony in bondage; and secondly, that Canadians are a very weak minded and ignorant people to imagine that they have the power and ability to do so."

We must await the result of the present mission ere we pronounce judgment; but we fear that the time for making things pleasant and harmonious has passed away.

WHAT'S THE MATTER!

There are evident signs of dissaffection in the camp of our Roman Catholic fellow electors, as will be seen from a perusal of a "Catholic" in the last Examiner, and from Mr. Fitzgerald's letter to the Canadian Freeman. Mr. F. claims to be a leader among his countrymen in this County, and as such, sought an appeal to them through the columns of our town contemporary. Mr. F. bases his claims strongly on the grounds of Roman Catholics, in large numbers, being subscribers to that paper. Was it not very ungenerous, indeed, to refuse the information Mr. F. wished to lay before his Catholic countrymen. What change has come over the vision of their dreams? Even the Review, the great mouth piece and defender of Catholics, especially during election times, gives them a cold shoulder when their services are not wanted. O! they are fine fellows when their votes count, but at other times we must be guided by policy! Why was the kernel alluded to withheld! Why was that spicy article not given? Very ungrateful Review. Ah! there's a fling at Majors Perry and Carnegie, our (their) liberal? and impartial members. Who, I (Mr. F.) presume, we have to call our prominent men. What's up? unwillingly compelled to call Majors Perry and Carnegie your representatives. Tired of them already. No man can serve two masters. They cannot be the representatives of Roman Catholics and also of Orangemen. You may try it, but it won't work, gentlemen. The Catholics are dissatisfied and so are the Orangemen. We think with Mr. F. that the gentlemen would have displayed better taste by staying away from the Orangemen's dinner; they are no Orangemen; they wish only to make the society a political machine for their own aggrandisement, and their toast of Protestant attachment accords ill with their past history, especially during the late election contest, and there can be no doubt but Mr. Fitzgerald is right in saying that men who owe their election to Roman Catholic votes, which it is well known they do, should not have attended the Orange dinner.—Catholic electors may forgive Mr. Cameron for all he said, but his presence was out of place, no doubt. Yes, Mr. Fitzgerald, this is the return you may expect for your services: they will use you to-day and abuse you when it suits them. You say your friends pass round thick, fast, uncharitable remarks against you as a people, and they will do so as long as they straddle the fence. A "Catholic" in last Examiner hits the nail on the head. They have succeeded in removing the only Catholic official in the County. There it is. Who did it? Who went to Toronto three times to encompass that end? Will Mr Fitzgerald make the enquiry? Who howled to drive him away? Who voted for the men who succeeded in removing your Catholic countryman? The men who now disregard your opinions and feeling, and yet Mr. Fitzgerald and his countrymen will return like a celebrated animal to their wallowing in the mire again. Don't be so hard on them; it was a matter of policy to be present at the Orangemen's dinner. If they had not, you know, they would not be able to mount a Protestant horse at next election, if the Catholic horse becomes unmanageable. They are only trying to serve two masters; its perfectly right in politics; you know you tried every thing in Emsimore to get them elected. They are only doing as you did.

THE CIRCUS.

On Monday evening while the circus people were exhibiting or preparing for it a row was commenced that appeared at one time to become serious, we did not learn how it commenced but suppose through the rashness or roughness of some one who, perhaps, had taken a little old Roe. A few blows of clubs and stones were exchanged, and two shots from a revolver in the hands of one of the circus party fired, but luckily no person received any damage, other than a bruise caused by a club or stone.

Gambling, and its consequences: As is usual with all those circus arrangements, there is one for gambling, one for amusements, one for cheating, or any other thing whereby a few limes can be made.

Not a few of those who are too often desirous of trying their luck at such things get "nipped", losing a little of the "needful" and in one case an individual who staked his watch lost it also, of course he was a little "corned" which enabled the sharpers to play the game the better. The loss of his watch sobered him off somewhat, when he tried to get his man before the mayor, but it was no go, he had left.

Another one of the gang, however, was not so successful. He was brought before the Mayor for gambling and cheating, and sent up for trial at next court, perhaps he may have an opportunity of enjoying Canadian hospitality for a short time.

Should these shows be permitted in Town—is a question that forces itself upon us at the present time, notwithstanding all the performance and attentions exhibited and talent displayed and conversation too, the strong desire there is in the minds of many to see the sights, it does not require a great stretch of reason to detect the preponderance of evil, morally and pecuniarily. They pay the town about $50 as a license, and pay their tavern bill, beyond this they leave us nothing while they usually take away a few hundreds of dollars. There are always blacklegs, pick pockets and gamblers enough in the town to pick up any stray dollars in their way; and there is the tail end, drunkenness and row, and a few weeks or months in jail, and all this for $50. All they get above what pays their way goes out of the country and to us at least is lost. There is no extra business done on show days, while the labor lost, to the community is beyond our computation. Taking all these circumstances into consideration it may reasonably be argued that it would be better not to grant a license to such exhibitions. It will be held by some that there must be recreation for the people, and that this is as harmless as any other sort of amusement, but a general holiday, excursion or pic-nic affords as much pleasure and answers the same ends, while they draw no more of the rowdy class than we may chance to have, and we have the satisfaction of knowing that all spent only changes hands to be used at home, next day, perhaps will return to the giver.

Girls' Attendance at the Grammar Schools.

During the pre-sent week the annual meeting of the Grammar School Masters' Association for the Province of Ontario was held in Toronto, and the subject of permitting girls to attend the Grammar Schools discussed, and we are glad to see by the Toronto papers that a resolution in favor of permitting them to enjoy all the privileges of the boys was passed. A committee was also appointed to prepare an address on the subject, embodying their views so as to induce the authorities if possible to make just and equitable provisions in the apportionment of funds for the girls as well as for the boys. There can be no doubt of the wisdom of the adoption of the resolution, and we trust that it will meet with the approbation of the Chief Superintendent of Education. For our part we cannot see why girls should be denied any of the privileges accorded to the boys. The only argument sought to be established against the girls attending the Grammar School, is the fear of the sexes mingling in the room. It does not necessarily follow that the classes should be mixed, different times can, if necessary, be set apart for each, and thus remove the cause of anxiety on that score, and the bugbear that girls do not require to study the classics to fit them for their proper sphere in life can be removed by not requiring them to study classics. What is sought for girls is that they enjoy the superior training of the Principal, as well as the boys, and that they have all facilities, granted to the boys, for attaining a thorough English education. During the past session of our Grammar School we have found that several of the young ladies took private lessons from the Principal, and we have heard their parents say that they would have done so no matter who the lady teacher might have been. Now, if these young ladies found it necessary to receive instructions from the Principal, why deprive others who may not be able to pay for private lessons, of receiving lessons during the Grammar School hours. We cannot have come to that pass yet that we will not try to fit our daughters to be suitable companions by education as well as by birth for their own brothers. We say by all means let the girls have the same opportunities that boys have.

THAT SILVER.

We have once and again called the attention of our town dealers to the "silver evil," but without effect. This, we know, is in some degree due to the fact that former attempts to remedy the evil and has been tailed, and now, we suppose, there are few willing to take the matter in hand lest the result may prove as before, abortive. Past failure, however, should not deter us from considering the general interest, nor should it deter us from making another effort. We will ere long be compelled to take some steps to abate the evil, and if possible get rid of it altogether. Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Belleville, Lindsay and every town of importance in the country have adopted the Toronto scheme, to take and give small silver at ten per cent discount and large at four per cent discount. Now, why is it that Peterboro is last in this important scheme? All our readers know that a few produce dealers and brokers are the only parties that make any thing out of it; the general community lose. The large produce dealer buys his silver at four per cent discount and pays it out in small quantities at par. The seller thinks the taking of one dollar, or even five dollars, is a small affair, but if he considers that he has to take this at every sale he will find that in the end it becomes a large amount. He also imagines that he should get as much goods for a silver dollar as for a dollar bill, but here he is mistaken, for no merchant will give as much for 96 cts. as he will for $1. The silver-at-par man will tell you that he does it, but are the people such fools as to believe it. If he does not change his prices he has on such profits that he can afford to lose four per cent. Will any sane man, if he can avoid it, lose, say $2 a day on silver, not try to put it on the goods in some way; and this, we have no doubt, is the way they do. The loss to the merchants of Peterboro arising out of the silver question is immense, and yet they bear it, because those individuals cannot be prevailed on to join to crush it out. Now, that all other towns have ceased to take silver except at a discount, our town will be flooded with it. Already small silver is imported from Toronto, and ere long our merchants will find to their cost that delays are injurious. Besides, now is the time to give it a fatal blow; let us unite with the other towns and cities and soon, instead of a depreciated currency, we will find our own currency in circulation; merchants will be able to deal on more liberal terms with their customers; mechanics will get more for their money, and all this without injury to any one. To stop the unjust gain of silver dealers is no injury. Let us have a public meeting to discuss the matter at any rate, and the sooner the better.

THE WEATHER.—Since our last issue we have had some refreshing showers that have cooled the atmosphere and moistened the earth, stronger hopes are now entertained of the root crops which were suffering from the continued drought, pasture is already revived and although it has kept back the harvest a day or two it has been received with thankfulness.

UNION SCHOOL.

There was no meeting of the Board on Tuesday evening in consequence of there not being a quorum present. The committee on appointments held a meeting to consider the applications, of which there were nine or ten, in all; the greater number being for the Northward School. We believe Miss Maria Dowling received the appointment to the North-ward School. The case of the Primary Department was not decided. The committee will meet on Monday evening for that purpose.

HORTICULTURAL.—A meeting of the Directors of the above Society was held yesterday in the Council Chamber. The by-laws that were rejected at a previous meeting were read over, and some alterations proposed with a view to adoption at a meeting to be held on Friday evening, 14th inst. A committee was named to draw up prize lists, and make arrangements for the exhibition to take place on the 9th of September.

At a meeting of Protection Fire Company No. 1, held in their hall on Tuesday evening, 4th August, 1868, being regular monthly meeting, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, Lieut. Robertson in the chair:—

"Moved by Capt. Gibbs, seconded by Capt. J. O'Donnell,—That the thanks of this Company are hereby tendered to Messrs. McDougall & Co. for their liberal donation of $50 00 given by them for our services at the late fire. Also, to R. Rowe, Esq., for providing lunch for this Company on the evening of the 20th July, 1868."

RICHARD HALL,
Secretary.

The thanks of the committee of the Peterboro Protestant Home are due to the following:—Mr. S. White, a shank of veal; Mr. Howden, an ox head; Mrs. White, a piece of veal; Methodist Pic-Nic, a large basket of cakes; Presbyterian Pic Nic, a large basket of cakes.

COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting of the Association held last night, it was agreed that the match for the season will take place on the 25th and 26th instant, at Peterborough. Prizes to the amount of $100 in cash will be awarded, besides other prizes "in kind." A committee has been appointed to solicit subscriptions and donations for the Association. The prize list will be published in a short time.

THE PRESS ASSOCIATION.—The next annual gathering will be at Cobourg, thence across the great Lake to some places on the American side, and then to Belleville.

"CONSECRATING THE COLORS."

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The writer in the Review who undertakes to justify the recent strange ceremony, concerning which I asked for an explanation, must be shallow indeed if he thinks that such miserable attempts at wit, or the side issues of printers' blunders, will satisfy me or the public generally, that "consecrating the colors" as performed at Peterborough is a ceremony warranted by authority, usage or common sense. I differ from him as to his statement of the scarcity of common sense; I believe it is very common amongst common folks at least. The very expression itself intimates its abundance. Sense signifies perception, sensibility, understanding, reason, opinion, consciousness, &c., and common means belonging to a number, public, general, &c. So when these are put together, we have what plain matter-of-fact people understand by "common sense." Surely "One who knows" ought to know this, and in saying that "common sense is a very uncommon article" he lays himself open to a charge of perpetrating a libel upon the expression, as well as to a suspicion that he has but a moderate share of it himself.

I have been thus particular in definition so as to enlighten the man of knowledge. Suffer me to go a little further and instruct him about the "consecration." I give Johnston's definition. The verb signifies "to make sacred, to appropriate to sacred uses." The noun, "a rite or cerem ny of dedicating and devot ng things or persons to the service of God, with an application of certain solemnities." A church is consecrated to the service of Almighty God; so is a Bishop. Now, we never think of turning a church into a drill shed, nor require a bishop an command a Battalion. But a flag is consecrated to God, to the Queen, and to the Dominion of of Canada" by a certain imposing ceremony. "One who knows" see a no inconsistency in this, finds fault when exception is taken to so objectionable a ceremony and really justifies it.

If the Rev gentleman who performed the ceremony had undertaken to enlighten me, he would no doubt, have done so in a more gentlemanly manner, than "One who knows" has done.

I am, dear sir,
As ever, yours,
COMMON SENSE.

Peterboro, 4th August, 1868.

It is due to our correspondent "Common Sense," to say that the errors that crept into his last communication were the work of the printer and were inadvertently passed over in reading or in correcting.—[ED. EX.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—If not trespassing too much on your columns I would like to enquire through them whether we are to have a horticultural show this year or not. A gentleman went round in spring taking subscriptions, and promising a fine show; but we hear nothing of the show coming off. The subscriptions and government grant should be sufficient to enable the committee of management to get up something; but before the day comes there should be some information given in relation to the articles to be exhibited and the regulations of the society. And some other subscribers think they should advertise in some way so that those interested might have an opportunity of judging whether we shall be able to compete at all. I fear the honorable directors are waiting to see when their own few favorite articles are about to be in prime; then, I suppose, we will have a show no matter who is ready, and perhaps with a week's notice. Hoping this will meet the eye of some of the directors and more them to action, but especially to affording necessary information, so that members may not be in suspense.

I am, sir,
Yours truly,
HORTICULTOR.

Peterboro, August 3rd, 1868

An unkind thrust at our Contemporary—our M. P's. and the Orangemen.

The following letter of Mr. James W. Fitzgerald, P. L. S., we clip from the Freeman, of 30th July. It is strange indeed that Mr. Fitzgerald has been compelled to seek ventilation for his epistle in a Toronto Journal. But then it contains some very ungenerous hints of defection in certain quarters. It reprimands our western representatives and it exhibits signs of disaffection among the Catholic electors that must not get ventilation in this County. In order to aid Mr. Fitzgerald in his good work we republish it. It is true, being in the Examiner it will not be read by as many Catholics as would have been if in the Review; we don't mind, however, but a few of them will find access to it, altho' in an ultra Protestant paper, as they have been led to believe:—

PETERBORO ORANGE VOLUNTEER DINNER ON 13TH INSTANT.

(To the Editor of the Canadian Freeman.)

SIR,—The Peterborough Review, having for reasons known to itself, declined to publish the enclosed, may I ask you to insert it in the next issue of the Freeman, and oblige

Yours very truly,
JAMES W. FITZGERALD.

(To the Editor of the Peterborough Review.)

DEAR SIR,—In common with many readers of the Review, I expected to find in either of the two last editions, some appropriate comments upon the circumstances attending a demonstration which has lately taken place in this town. The subject to which I allude, appears to me as one in regard to which you owe to a large number of your subscribers, some explanation. Generally speaking, you are most assiduous in your efforts to cater for public information, and on your descriptions of matters and things you bestow much care and detail. In the present instance, however, you appear to have observed remarkable, if not suspicious reticence: for instead of the full and glowing account we expected to hear of, the Orange Volunteer Dinner, which came off in the Battalion Drill Shed on the 13th inst., you have treated us only to a dry uninteresting list of toasts and responses, a barren catalogue in fact. Surely the occasion was one which should merit from the Review something more than a mere passing notice. It offered plenty of food and juice one would imagine for a very spicy article; but you have withheld the kernel, and given to your readers the empty shell.

The gathering covered by the loyal brethren, included amongst its members those, who I presume, we have to call our prominent men. Our two worthy representatives for the West Riding were there; the Mayor of the town, several J. P's, members of Council ad infinitum Colts, Majors, officers and men of volunteer companies, some of the latter, it is said, wearing portions of Her Majesty's uniform, and it may be remarked, before their eight days drill had yet expired.

Even your contemporary, the Examiner, was much more explicit on this subject, for it gave us a tolerably full account of how gloriously the celebration passed off, and of the distinguished part taken in the proceedings by our liberal and impartial members—Majors Perry and Carnegie—who differed only in vieing with each other in their professions of Protestantism, and the degree of pleasure it afforded them in being present at the anniversary celebration of the "glorious, pious, and immortal memory."

These expressions of attachment to Protestantism and love for the "pious memory" may be, and doubtless are, very agreeable to those who uttered them and heard them; but to the Catholic constituents of those gentlemen the latter sentiment at all events, conveys quite a different impression, inspires a totally different emotion.

We think the gentlemen referred to, would have displayed far better taste and judgment, and shown a nicer appreciation for the feelings of a large number of their political supporters, had they abstained from so cringing, self-representative of the people at large, a part so prominent at a celebration which the most have known to be grossly insulting to every loyal Irish Catholic.

It is quite true that a leading Orangeman at that meeting stated, just prior to the last election, that they could elect their men without the aid of Catholic votes; but towards the close of the polls a different impression prevailed at the committee rooms, and it was not until the triumphant result came down from Catholic Emsmore, where myself and other Catholic friends spent days, and nights, in furthering the interests of Messrs. Perry and Carnegie, that their success was assured.

Is this the return we are to receive for our services? Is this the acknowledgement the Catholic farmers of Emsmore—already maligned and slandered enough in connection with that election, are to receive from those they industriously have returned to Parliament?

Depend upon it gentlemen, this game may be carried too far. The Catholics of Peterborough hourly hear from other members of the community untrue, ungenerous and uncharitable remarks, pass round thick and fast enough with out having their crosses fed by those from whom they should expect, at least, gratitude.

We do not believe that our members of Parliament, as such, should have been even present at that Orange celebration. We do not believe that officers and men of her Majesty's volunteers should, as such, in uniform or full uniform, have been present at that Orange celebration. And we further believe that the Battalion Drill Shed, built at the public expense, and out of the taxes of the Catholic rate payers of this County, should not have been devoted to any such purpose.

It is about time the Catholics of this county should bestir themselves. The offspring of the Robinson Emigrants, who used to be looked down upon, are becoming more enlightened, and alive to a sense of their true position. It is time that the poisoned atmosphere of this county should be purified, and the barriers of ignorance, intolerance and prejudice removed, that people Catholics from obtaining fair play, fair representation, and a just recognition of their rights and privileges in all matters that concern them as good citizens and loyal subjects of the State.

I am sir,
Your obdt. servt.
JAMES W. FITZGERALD.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT OTTAWA.—On Wednesday morning the new house built by Mr. Frank H. Badgley, on Sandy Hill, was found to be on fire. The fire was discovered at about half-past six o'clock by the workmen who were engaged in finishing the interior. One or two of them started immediately to give the alarm to the firemen, and shortly after the bells rang and in a very short time the several engines and hook and ladder companies were on the ground doing their utmost to save the building, but in spite of all their efforts the flames defied them, and they had the mortification to see the fire gain upon them at every minute, for when apparently got under in one place it burst open in another with greater force, and so the work of the brave firemen went on till at length it became a certainty it could not be saved. Still they were indefatigable in their labors till the house was totally destroyed. Fortunately the flames did not reach any of the neighboring buildings. This was a new building put up by Mr. Badgley for his own residence. He had insured it in the Ætna of Hartford for $2,000, but it had run out on Saturday or Monday. Mr. B. being absent a short distance from the city on Tuesday afternoon, hastened home to renew the policy, and very fortunately arrived in time to effect his object on the evening preceding the morning on which his house was burned. By so doing he has secured $2,000. This does not cover the loss, for the house is said to have cost several hundred dollars more than this sum.—Ottawa Citizen.

AUSTRIA AND ROME.—The breach between these two powers, formerly so intimate and friendly, seems to be growing more serious every day. Last letters from Vienna, published in French papers, state that the question of the sale of the property of the clergy forms the subject of meetings of the Austrian cabinet. Mr. Buest has proposed the measure to the Emperor as one of urgent necessity under present circumstances. It is expected that that proposition will bring out from the court of Rome new and solemn remonstrances. The Bishops continue to publish orders commanding the clergy to have in the registry of births a separate column for the inscription of children from parents married under the civil law; and who, therefore, will form a class distinct from legitimate children, without yet being designated openly as illegitimate. The Austrian government, in order to put an end to such a degrading distinction, has withdrawn from the Catholic clergy the keeping of the registers of births throughout the empire.

An odd episode in Mr. Disraeli's history has lately been revealed. It seems that in '41 he contested a borough, and a number of election "squibs" were circulated, among them one from Mr. Yardley—now Sir William Yardley, the Police Magistrate—whom Londoners know so well. It was a list of the judgement debts still standing against Mr. Disraeli's name on the register.

The result of Mr. Yardley's manœuvre was a prompt challenge from Mr. Disraeli for a duel. In all probability the meeting would have taken place, had it not fortunately happened that the Mayor of Shrewsbury heard of what was going on, and the two intending belligerents were consequently summoned before him and ignomini

How the Government of the Dominion is to be Governed.—It is satisfactory to find that the great preponderance of opinion among the Lords who spoke last evening was against any re-opening of this question. The speech of the Duke of Buckingham gave full assurance that this delicate question will be treated with due care by the Government. The Nova Scotians are such good Subjects that even their unconstitutional conduct is worthy of respect. If they have any reason to fear the Protectionist prejudices of the Canadians, if the Dominion Parliament do indeed intend thus to sacrifice the interest of the Maritime Provinces, we have little doubt that the whole influence of the British Crown will be used in defence of the weaker parties. It must not be forgotten that, after all, the Governor General is a British official, and, though the limits of interference on the part of the Home Government are undefined, and are, perhaps, incapable of definition, yet they certainly extend to suggesting the outlines of public policy, and to remonstrating against unjust and retrograde legislation. The circumstances of the times also demand that the Queen's representative should not be afraid to assert her authority. A new Confederation is necessarily a prey to provincial jealousies, and the more these prevail the more necessary is it that a strong Executive should influence the fresh and ill cemented Legislature. If due care be taken on the head, we have a confident expectation that the present discontent will pass away.—London Times.

The Imperial Parliament.—The Imperial Parliament was prorogued on Friday. Her Majesty the Queen was not present. Her speech was read by the Lord High Chancellor. It speaks of the foreign relations of Great Britain as most friendly and satisfactory, and says there is no reason to fear war in Europe. No reference is made to the United States. The Abyssinian expedition has vindicated the honor of the Crown. The connection of attempts at rebellion in Ireland renders the further use of the exceptional powers granted by the two Houses needless. The Queen thanks the Commons for the supplies voted for the Government, and congratulates them upon the passage of the Irish and Scotch Reform Bills, and the Bill for the purchase of the telegraphs throughout the kingdom. The speech also announces that a dissolution of Parliament will soon take place, in order that the people may reap the advantages of the more extended system of representation recently provided, confident of their fitness or their new duties, and that their voice will be for the perpetuation of that civil and religious freedom which are secured by the institutions of the nation and the settlement of the realm.

Another Victim of Intemperance.—Joseph Lancaster, an old and respected inhabitant of the Township of Sombra was accidentally killed, by being thrown from his waggon on Saturday evening the 25th inst. It appears that he in company with his hired man left home about sundown, and drove to London, a distance of about three miles. There they unfortunately met some friends who treated them to liquor, and with whom they remained drinking until about midnight, when they started for home both of them being under the worst of liquors. As too frequently happens under such circumstances the poor horses which had been treated to part hay all the evening, were then driven furiously homeward.—While driving in this way over a portion of the road which was rather rough, deceased lost his balance, and was thrown from the waggon with sufficient violence to cause his death within a few minutes. He leaves a wife and family and a large circle of friends to mourn his untimely end. Dr Gunhle held an inquest on the body the following day at which the above facts were elicited.—Canadian, Sarnia

Grammar School Teachers' Association.—At the afternoon session yesterday the question of the classical education of girls was taken up and, after a lengthy discussion, a resolution was passed favorable to the admission of girls to Grammar Schools, and a committee was appointed to draft a series of resolutions on the subject, embodying the feelings of the association, and report to-day. Mr. J H Hunter, chairman of the committee on the Upper Canada College question, read an exhaustive report, entering fully into the past history and present administration of the College, for which he received a vote of thanks. Fifteen hundred copies of the report were ordered to be printed. This morning the association went into committee of the whole on the selection of text books, adjourning at one o'clock.—Telegraph.

Travelling in the Future.—An evening contemporary sketches the travelling facilities of the future: "When the railroad across the continent of America is completed there will be constant conveyances by means of railways and mail packets for passengers desiring to travel round the world. The grand tour will be 22,000 miles in length, will cost about $300, and will be accomplished in about eighty days. The English tourist will be able to visit America, Japan, China, Ceylon and Egypt. He will cross the Atlantic, North Pacific and Indian Oceans, the Red and Mediterranean Seas, the continent of America, and the Delta of Egypt. He will be able to leave England, say the beginning of May, and to arrive home again about the middle of July."

A Father Poisoned by the Dead Body of his Son.—A citizen at Detroit named McNamara is suffering from the inoculation into his system of a quantity of virus from a dead body. On Friday his little boy died, and he subsequently handled the body considerably. He held it in his hands to have a photograph taken, and at night slept with it in his arms. He had a few days previously received a stroke from a hammer on the forefinger of the left hand, making an abrasion of the skin, and leaving the flesh quite raw. Into this wound the virus found its way, and the hand and arm soon became fearfully swollen. His physician removed the poison by sucking, and expressed hopes of his recovery.

The Recorder of Hamilton Charged with Misdemeanor.—The Hamilton Times of the 29th ult., says: The startling development of iniquity in our public officials were continued this morning by the institution of proceedings against J. E Starr, Esq. Recorder of the city, on a serious charge. The proceedings were instigated by the ex-Chief of police, in retaliation for the part the Recorder had taken concerning the late investigation. The information charged J. E Starr with receiving for safe keeping, from Mary Ann Mallett, a defenceless of the town of Brantford, of the value of £500, and that afterwards he disposed of the same without the consent of the said M. A. Mallet, and converted the same to his own use, with intent to defraud the said M. A. Mallett.

An Old Bequest.—The trustees of William and Mary College, Virginia, received from England a few weeks since a remittance of $8,000, the accumulated proceeds of a legacy left for the college in 1742 by an English lady named Margaret Whitley. The original legacy was 50*l.* sterling to be applied by the executors of the Whitley estate to William and Mary College, and has been either unknown or forgotten until accidentally discovered by a lawyer in searching over some old papers.—N. Y. Times.

The Rev. Mr Pusshon was very shabbily treated by some persons in Halifax, who reprinted his lecture on Daniel and sold it before it was delivered. Other people had the indecency to carry the printed matter into the hall and follow Mr. Pusshon throughout tracing each line to find whether he delivered the production verbatim or not. Mr. Pusshon very justly complained of such ungenerous treatment.

The wrapper that no enemy can parry is a bold spirit.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box

The Erie Canal.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1861 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, &c, is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

DIED.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phisthisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the comatible lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the dis eased vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, *all derangements of the digestive organs cor*rected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE a CERTAIN and SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, excoriated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant medicines.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C W., who are the sole proprietors.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 8th June, 1868.

J. C. Ayer & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it burst out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disease grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be sound. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1859, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Ebbalon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J B S. Channing, of New York City, writes; "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Morrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous cancerous tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 25th August, 1859.

Dr. J. C. Ayer: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and recount to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been tainted for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I have from its formula, which your agent gave me, that the Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, &c.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July 1859.

Dr. J. C. Ayer: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health as much that I am sure for five years before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. TERAH.

Jules V. Getchell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken down man for some years, even no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The fact that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Debilities, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy but our space does not allow us to publish them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and the overcomes disorders which would be suppressed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidences of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has in all the cases that it did here when making he cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

How the Government of the Dominion is to be Governed.—It is satisfactory to find that the great preponderance of opinion among the Lords who spoke last evening was against any re-opening of this question. The speech of the Duke of Buckingham gave full assurance that this delicate question will be treated with due care by the Government. The Nova Scotians are such good Subjects that even their susceptibilities are worthy of respect. If they have any reason to fear the Protectionist prejudices of the Canadians, if the Dominion Parliament do indeed intend thus to sacrifice the interest of the Maritime Provinces, we have little doubt that the whole influence of the British Crown will be used in defence of the weaker parties. It must not be forgotten that, after all, the Governor General is a Dutch of Scotland, and, though the limits of interference on the part of the Home Government are undefined, and are, perhaps, incapable of definition, yet they certainly extend to suggesting the outlines of public policy, and to remonstrating against unjust and retrograde legislation. The circumstances of the times also demand that the Queen's representative should not be afraid to assert her authority. A new Confederation is necessarily a prey to provincial jealousies, and the more these prevail the more necessary is it that a strong Executive should influence the fresh and cemented Legislature. If due care be taken on the head, we have a confident expectation that the present discontent will pass away.—London Times.

The Imperial Parliament.—The Imperial Parliament was prorogued on Friday. Her Majesty the Queen was not present. Her speech was read by the Lord High Chancellor. It speaks of the foreign relations of Great Britain as most friendly and satisfactory, and says there is no reason to fear war in Europe. No reference is made to the United States. The Abyssinian expedition has vindicated the honor of the Crown. The cessation of attempts at rebellion in Ireland renders the further use of the exceptional powers granted by the two Houses needless. The Queen thanks the Commons for the supplies voted for the Government, and congratulates them upon the passage of the Irish and Scotch Reform Bills, and the Bill for the purchase of the telegraphs throughout the kingdom. The speech also announces that a dissolution of Parliament will soon take place, in order that the people may reap the advantages of the more extended system of representation recently provided, confident of their fitness for their new duties, and that their voice will be for the perpetuation of that civil and religious freedom which are secured by the institutions of the nation and the settlement of the realm.

Another Victim of Intemperance.—Joseph Lancaster, an old and respected inhabitant of the Township of Sandwich was accidentally killed, by being thrown from his waggon on Saturday evening the 25th inst. It appears that he in company with his hired man left home about sundown, and drove to Amherstburg, a distance of about three miles. There they unfortunately met some friends who treated them to liquor, and with whom they remained drinking until about midnight, when they started for home both of them being much the worst of liquor. As too frequently happens under such circumstances the poor horses which had been treated to post boy all the evening, were then driven furiously homeward.—While driving in this way over a portion of the road which was rather rough, deceased lost his balance, and was thrown from the waggon with sufficient violence to cause his death within a few minutes. He leaves a wife and family and a large circle of friends to mourn his untimely end. Dr. Gamble held an inquest on the body the following day at which the above facts were elicited.—Canadian, Sarnia

Grammar School Teachers' Association.—At the afternoon session yesterday the question of the classical education of girls was taken up and, after a lengthy discussion, a resolution was passed favorable to the admission of girls to Grammar Schools, and a committee was appointed to draft a series of resolutions on the subject, embodying the feelings of the association, and report to-day. Mr. J. H. Hunter, chairman of the committee on the Upper Canada College question, read an exhaustive report, entering fully into the past history and present administration of the College, for which he received a vote of thanks. Fifteen hundred copies of the report were ordered to be printed. This morning the association went into committee of the whole on the selection of text books, adjourning at one o'clock.—Telegraph.

Travelling in the Future.—An evening contemporary sketches the travelling facilities of the future: "When the railroad across the continent of America is completed there will be constant conveyance by means of railways and mail packets for passengers during to travel round the world. The grand tour will be 22,000 miles in length, will cost about $300, and will be accomplished in about eighty days. The English tourist will be able to visit America, Japan, China, Ceylon and Egypt. He will cross the Atlantic, North Pacific and Indian Oceans, the Red and Mediterranean Seas, the continent of America, and the Delta of Egypt. He will be able to leave England, say the beginning of May, and to arrive home again about the middle of July."

A Father Poisoned by the Dead Body of his Son.—A citizen at Detroit named McNamara is suffering from the inoculation into his system of a quantity of virus from a dead body. On Friday his little boy died, and he subsequently handled the body considerably. He held it in his hands to have a photograph taken, and at night slept with it in his arms. He had a few days previously received a stroke from a hammer on the forefinger of the left hand, making an abrasion of the skin, and leaving the flesh quite raw. Into this wound the virus found its way, and the hand and arm soon became fearfully swollen. His physician removed the poison by sucking, and expressed hopes of his recovery.

The Recorder of Hamilton Charged with Misdemeanor.—The Hamilton Times of the 29th ult., says: The startling development of impurity in our public officials were continued this morning by the institution of proceedings against J. E. Start, Esq. Recorder of the city, on a serious charge. The proceedings were instituted by the ex-Chief of police, in relation to the part the Recorder had taken concerning the late investigation. The information charged J. E. Start with receiving by safe-keeping, from Mary Ann Mallett, a debenture of the town of Brantford, of the value of £500, and that afterwards he disposed of the same without the consent of the said M. A. Mallet, and converted the same to his own use, with intent to defraud the said M. A. Mallett.

An Old Bequest.—The trustees of William and Mary College, Virginia, received from England a few weeks since a remittance of $8,000, the accumulated proceeds of a legacy left to the college in 1742 by an English lady named Margaret Whaley. The original legacy was 500 sterling to be applied by the executors of the Whaley estate to William and Mary College, and has been hither to unknown or forgotten until accidentally discovered by a lawyer in searching over some old papers.—N. Y. Times.

The Rev. Mr Punshon was very shabbily treated by some persons in Halifax, who reprinted his lecture on Daniel and sold it before it was delivered. Other people had the indecency to carry the printed matter into the hall and follow Mr. Punshon throughout tracing each line to find whether he delivered the production verbatim or not. Mr. Punshon very justly complained of such ungenerous treatment.

The weapon that no enemy can parry is a bold spirit.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box

The Erie Canal.—The Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1867 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster! Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

DIED.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dysjepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only thenty-five cents per bottle.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It oil sures the breathing apparatus, by removing from the cells of the coarsible lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the dilated vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed on the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, excoriated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child: drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 5 cts. per bottle.

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILLMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, their horses the sufferers, to avoid both use "Dailey's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OTTAWA, Ind., 6th June, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous tubercle, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it burst out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of your Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Tabulon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a disease swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous cancerous tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remained."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 25th August, 1859.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and resort to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary eruptions in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the sores healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that the Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1868.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am fit to Peter than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FREAM.

Jules V. Gotchell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken down man for some years, even no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Espy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and my doing you made me worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The fact that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Scirrhus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects, or some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the deceitful nature of these diseases, and as they know, too, the effects of the remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

TO A POOR YOUNG MAN.

Yes, you are poor! although your name
Battles with the names of gold men;
And you have notes, and stocks, and bonds,
To buy me over and over again.
But hand or heart I never can
Give up to such a poor young man!

How very poor!—your wide domains—
Your acres broad now meet my view—
But what is all this width or breadth
Unless the mind be widened too.
A liberal mind I never can
Discern in such a poor young man!

With you, affection is a mere;
And love a lie, and truth a jest;
And honor only vaguely known,
And honesty an interest!
Your bonds are bubbles, and I can
But pity such a poor young man!

So you may go; and when your heart
Is filled with honor as with gold,
When you are honest, true, and good,
Your hands are firm—your wealth untold,
Without these treasures, sir, you can
Be nothing but a poor young man!

Varieties.

How to Judge Character by the Hair.

Coarse black hair and a dark skin signify great power of character, with a tendency to sensuality. Fine hair and dark skin indicates strength of character along with purity and goodness. Stiff, straight black hair and beard indicates a strong, rigid, straightforward character. Fine dark hair signifies the combination of exquisitive sensibility, with great force of character. Flat, clinging, straight hair, a melancholy, but extremely constant character. Harsh, upright hair is the sign of a reticent and sour spirit, a stubborn and harsh character. Coarse red hair and whiskers indicate powerful animal passions, together with a corresponding strength of character. Auburn hair; with florid countenance, denote the highest order of sentiment and intensity of feeling, purity of character, with the highest capacity for enjoyment or suffering. Straight, even; smooth and glossy hair denotes strength; harmony and evenness of character, beauty affections, a clear and superior talents.

Fine, silky, supple hair, is the mark of a delicate and sensitive temperament, and speaks in favor of the mind and character of the owner. Crisp, curly hair indicates a hasty, somewhat impetuous and rash character. White hair denotes a lymphatic and indolent constitution; and we may add that besides these qualities there are chemical qualities residing in the coloring matter of the hair tube which undoubtedly have some effect upon the disposition. Thus red haired people are notoriously passionate. Now, red hair is proved by analysis to contain a large amount of sulphur, while black hair is colored with almost pure carbon. The presence of these matters in the blood points to peculiarities of temperament and feeling that are almost universally associated with them. The very way in which the hair flows is strongly indicative of the ruling passions and inclinations, and perhaps a clever person could give a shrewd guess at the manner of a man or woman's disposition by only seeing the back of their heads.—From the Secrets of Beauty.

FASHION AND MARRIAGE.

The New York Sun moralizes in the following fashion over the demands of "society" upon young men meditating matrimony.

The English girls as well as our own are begining to realize that fashion is imposing celibacy upon themselves and the young men of the land. A very lively discussion has arisen in the columns of the London Telegraph on the subject. Extravagances in dress is not the only hindrance to wedlock complained of; another and more serious one is asserted to be the most objectionable namely, the incompetency of young women to assume the duties of domestic life. From the lowest to the highest, they are taught there, as well as here, that the great and sad aim of woman should be to get "a good match," and this being so, the young men also very naturally wait until they can do the same. One sensible girl writes that it is "wiser to wait than to take up a burden that increases as the world grows wiser." "One who married on £120 a year" salary, and evidently could not get along very smoothly on so small an income, advises young women not to marry a man whose salary is less than £200–$1,000 in gold. "A Matron" advises the young men to wait until by industry and economy they are able to offer suitable homes to girls worth the waiting and waiting for." "A single Man" fears his sex does not exhibit courage enough in this particular. He thinks men are bold enough in ostentation, but are timid in self-denials; they sell themselves wholly to that sham called "society," and join the foolish race for show, lest their attire or their frugality should be considered mean or unfashionable. As the case stands on both sides of the Atlantic, it looks very much as if the prophetic day would soon come, when seven women shall take hold of one man, and agree to maintain themselves, but demand the privilege of being called by his name.

A VALUABLE SECRET.—The Scientific American says: The unpleasant odor produced by perspiration is frequently the source of vexation to persons who are subject to it. Nothing is simpler than to remove this odor much more effectually than by the application of such unguents and perfumes as are now in use. It is only necessary to procure some compound spirits of ammonia, and place about two tablespoonful in a basin of water. Washing the face, hands, and arms with this leaves the skin as clean, neat and fresh as one could wish. The wash is perfectly harmless, and very cheap. It is recommended on the authority of an experienced physician, and it ought to be tried at least by all those whose persons are so offensive in this respect.

An Irishman made a sudden rush into a druggist's shop in Glasgow. Drawing from his pocket a soda-water bottle, filled it to the brim with some pure liquor, handed it across the counter, and exclaimed:—

'There doother, smell that will you?'

The doctor did as he was directed, and pronounced the liquor to be jerusne whisky.

'Thank you, doctbor,' said the Irishman, 'hand me it again if you please.'

The doctor again did as directed, and asked Patrick what he meant.

'Och then,' said Pat, 'if yo will have it, the priest told me not to drink any of this unless I got it from the doctbor. So here's your health, and the priest's health, and the health of Mesee.'

'Do you ever have any 'hops' in Maine?' asked a Newport belle, who was dreaming for a ball, of a country cousin from the Pine State. 'Oh, yes lots; pe has forty acres of 'em in one field.'

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy for all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary persons, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I William Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless I was lifted towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me enough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got healthy and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was sick and for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the great cat boon ever laid at the altar of suffering is ready.

PUTTING ON AIRS.

'Tis not learning that makes the gentleman
Nor yet a dashy show,
For many who have both of these
Of manners little know
Some young men when they graduate,
Their heads go up quite high;
They so important look the same
To notice friends go by.

Good clothes don't make the best of folks,
As some who wear them think,
While those who have no showy goods,
In their opinion sink.
Yes, there are others too who will,
When you have on your best,
Bow so low and smilingly;
Ah! don't you feel quite blest!

But, friend, just don your working suit,
Your face not very clean,
You'll find those smiling ones go by
As if you ne'er were seen;
They seem to set as if your clothes
Were better far than you;
But do not feel aggrieved at such,
Their brains perhaps are few.

Be sure whene'er you see some one
Put on such foolish airs,
That you need never give a thought
To them or their affairs;
For people who have not sense enough
To know they're common clay—
Ah, well just let them pass along,
They'll find it out some day.

Give honor to earth's toiling ones,
They are the truly great,
They move the world, they guide the plow.
They uphold church and state;
No pampered appetites or tastes
E'er puff them up with pride,
Then give them room, yes, elbow room,
Ye nannies stand aside.

My Uncle's Story; or, Always Trust Your Wife.

'And have you told Agnes about it?'

'No sir.'

'Why not?'

'Well, I don't exactly like the plan of telling all your business matters to women. They don't understand it, and—

'There's where you are mistaken, Harry. Always confide in your wife. Always trust in her; and, take an old man's word for it, you'll see no cause for regret. I'm an old man, Harry, and may be a bit old-fashioned; but I've had considerable experience in my time. I know just how you feel—I felt so myself once, when I was young and foolish, and first married.'

'Do the three characteristics always accompany one another, Uncle?'

'You're laughing at me, you young dog! No, not necessarily; but, as I was going to say when you interrupted me, I have been cured by time and experience. Shall I tell you my first and most important lesson, Harry?'

'Yes uncle, I shall be very glad to hear it.'

My uncle Jedediah filled his old-fashioned pipe as full as its bowl would allow; gave the smouldering wood fire a poke with the tongs, and began this story:

'I was a farmer when first I married your aunt Martha, and a brisk, stirring wife she made me—none of your languid fine ladies, with white velvet hands and heart-like icicles. Her dairy floors shone like satin, and you could have seen your face in any one of her tin pans. Up before sunrise—busy as any bee in all her hives, ah, there was a wife to help a man along! Well, I saved money—first a little, and then a little more, until finally I had twenty new ten-dollar bills clear ahead of expenses. You needn't smile, Harry—two hundred dollars in those times was as much to me as two thousand would be to you now. There were no 'five-twenties' or 'seven-thirties' to invest in then, and the nearest savings bank was at Summerville, fourteen miles away. I hadn't told Martha about the money, because, you see, I was a fool, and I thought may be she'd want a new roof to the back kitchen, or a gold watch, like neighbor Royston's wife, or to squander it in some way. I hadn't learned yet how true and sensible and right minded she was. So I put my twenty bills away, first in one place and then in another. I put them in a little leather pocketbook, in the right hand corner of a big red chest—the very one that stands in the up-stairs hall now, at your brother's; but I couldn't be easy about 'em—it was the very place burglars would be most likely to search for just such plunder. Next I hid them away back of a beast, away over garret rafters; but I couldn't sleep nights, for fear of fire or rats. So I buried them under a big stone by the well, and I hadn't fairly finished the job before it occurred to me that a drenching rain would most likely make paste of my precious slips of paper. What to do I couldn't tell. I tried, first, one place, and then another, but somehow I couldn't be suited, until one day I went up the garret to carry a bag of butter-nuts for winter cracking, and there, under the eaves, I saw an old pair of boots hanging that I had laid aside months ago as unfit for use. 'The very place!' I said to myself, rattling the butternuts down on the floor, and never stopping to heap them up nearly, I was in such a hurry. Martha'll never think of disturbing an old pair of boots in her housewifery, and no burglar would ever dream of finding treasure in so unlikely a place as a pair of old boots.' So I watched my time when Martha was out feeding her young turkeys; she had a burdened and ten of 'em as likely a lot as there was in the whole country; and stole down stairs to my last hiding place, an envelope laid between the leaves of the big Webster's Dictionary my father had given me; and what a start I got only the night before, when Martha asked me the meaning of the word 'epidermis,' and I couldn't tell her, lest she should get down the big dictionary and look for herself. But she didn't. Well, I took out my envelope, and counted the bills, to see that they were all right, and then crept up stairs again. Martha was putting over the kettle for tea, and she asked me where I had been. I told her 'up garret, storing away the butternuts,' and mean enough I felt when she lit creased my lips. However, Martha never suspected anything; she was frank and open as the day herself, and didn't know, luckily what a speak she had for a husband.

'The next day I went out to the big pasture lot beyond the creek, to patch up a bit of stone wall that was getting rather shaky, and I hadn't been to work more than an hour or two before a passer-by gave me 'good morning!' as pleasant as might be; a man with a stout shaggy little pony, and a box waggon full of rags, and bottles, and old papers, and I don't know what else, with the front laden with tins.

'Good morning, sir!' says I, piling away as fast as ever I could.

'Any tea-ware wanted at your house, sir, this morning?'

'Don't know anything about it,' I answered, crustily enough.

'Give you nice tins for old clothes, rags old iron, bottles, cast-off boots,' he went on in a sing song kind of voice.

'But I never looked up, and after a short pause, they rattled on again—tins, bottles, and all, the man singing as he went. He hadn't any parcel of ten dollar bills on his mind; that was plain enough.

'Well, I worked away like a beaver till the sun began to get pretty high, when suddenly the thought came into my head, suppose the tin-peddlar should stop at our house, and Martha, thrifty house wife as she was, should take a fancy to some of his new and glittering wares! Suppose she should trade off my old boots with her cast-off trash! I had been in a profuse perspiration, but, as the idea crossed my brain I seemed to turn cold all over, in one second! Nothing more likely? why had I not thought of it before!

'I dropped hoe and spade and plummer line, seized my coat from the fork of the old Baldwin apple tree beyond, and set off in a run towards home. It was a short half mile, across lots, but to me it seemed the longest half-mile I had ever traversed!

'The first thing that met my eye as I crossed the threshold was a row of new shining milk-pans! Then she had bargained with the travelling vendor, after all! I went through the kitchen to the sitting room. Martha sat there at her needle, singing, she worked.

'She looked up at me and then at the clock, in astonishment.'

'Why, Jedediah, it is only eleven o'clock!' she exclaimed.

'I know it—I—I forgot something,' I stammered, wiping the drops from my brow, and hurrying up stairs without waiting for further explanation. As I went into the garret, I saw at once that the tinman had turned the corner under the eaves where the old boots had hung.

'They were gone!'

With my worst fears confirmed, I hurried down stairs again.'

'Martha!' I exclaimed, in an eager, husky voice, 'That tin peddler—did you—'

'Didn't you see my new milk pans,' said Martha, with innocent, womanly triumph in her voice, 'And I never paid a cent of money for them, Jedediah, only the paper and rags I had saved, and a few old things about the house that were of no use for—'

'Did you give that—that villain my old boots that hung in the garret?'

'He wasn't a villain, Jedediah, he dealt very honorably, I'm sure, and you said yourself, as much as a month ago, that the boots were good for nothing but to burn.'

'Did you give him those boots?' I almost shouted.

'I'm not deaf, Jedediah,' said my wife, a little nettled. 'Yes I did give him the boots, of course why wouldn't I?'

'Woman! you have ruined me!' I groaned, sinking down into the chair.

Oh, Martha, Martha! and I had been so long in saving it!

'In saving what, Jedediah?' Martha came close to me, with a bewildered air. 'I don't understand you at all.'

'I burst into tears; somehow the touch of Martha's hand on my shoulder unmanned me, and I told her all. She listened with changing colour.'

'Why did you not tell me this before, Jedediah?'

'Because I was a fool! I know you're not to blame, Martha. I knew no one would dream of money being secreted in a pair of boots, but—but—it was my all, Martha, it's hard to lose it so!

'But it's not lost yet,' said Martha, cheerfully (bless these women, how quick they are to help you up on your feet, when you're down). 'Follow the man—he was going on to summerville to-day tell him there was a mistake—get the boots back as soon as possible It is not likely he has discovered the money!'

'Not—I agreed with her that it was not likely. A fair gleam of hope sprang up again in my heart as I listened to my wife's cheering words.

'Saddle old Whitney, while I get you a morsel of dinner and prepare a cup of tea,' went on Martha, 'and you'll overtake him long before he reaches Summerville.'

'I followed her advice, and before the sun had reached its meridian elevation old Whitney and I were on our way to rescue the imperiled treasures.

'How eagerly I watched the road, as we trotted along—how anxiously I scrutinized everything in the shape of a horse and wagon, until I had gotten sufficiently near to convince me that it was not my tin-selling friend! At length after what seemed to me an interminable ride. I caught the glimmer of the sunshine reflected from a far-off heap of tinware, and made sure that he had not vanished into the ground or disappeared down some treacherous side road! I gave old Whitney a mighty admonishing touch with the whip, and speedily overtook the travelling merchant!

'Yes—there were my old boots swinging over the side of the waggon as carelessly as if there was no pocket of bank bills in the foot of the left hand one! I trotted up alongside of the tinman, trying to appear as unconcerned as possible, for I had been rehearsing my part as I came along.

'Good-day, friend!'

'Good-day, sir!' The man turned his goo-humored, sun-browned face towards me with a merry smile of greeting.

'I believe you sold my wife some milk-pans this morning—an old red farm-house, under the hill, with a row of cedar trees in front.'

'Yes, sir, I did; they were all right, weren't they?'

'Quite right, my friend; but I was a little annoyed when I found she had given you my large old boots. 'I've got a trouble—some corns, you see, and they were the only boots that I've got that I can feel really comfortable in, so, as I had business this way, I thought that if I could overtake you, I'd just change back again.'

'Oh, all right, sir,' said the man; 'let me see—old boots; I believe I have three or four pairs aboard to day, and—

'That is the pair—hanging on the side of the wagon,' I said, with difficulty restraining my eagerness to seize them myself. 'Thank you,' as he deliberately unfastened them from their string and handed them to me. 'What shall I allow you for them, sir?'

'They're not worth more than a quarter, I guess,' said the man, shrewdly surveying the worn-though sole and rusty uppers; 'if you've a mind to give me a quarter we'll cry quits.'

'I handed him the quarter, and rode on my way rejoicing, and yet fearful. Suppose that all my precautions had been in vain; suppose that he had found the twenty ten-dollar bills, after all! When I had left him well behind, and had reached a shady and secluded bit of wood. I trembling thrust my hand down the impromptu savings bank to ascertain if the precious deposit was safe!

'Yes, thank Providence, there it was, in the little tissue paper wrapping, undisturbed, and I involuntarily hastened old Whitney's moderate speed, to share my relief and gratification with Martha.'

'Is it safe? was the first question she asked, and I replied, swinging the old boots round my head,

'Safe! and to-morrow we'll drive over to Summerville and deposit it in the bank. And, I'll tell you what, I'll have no more secrets from you!'

'I kept my pledge; I had no more secrets from Martha! It is forty years since all this happened. My twenty ten dollar bills have grown into ten thousand dollar bills; but Martha and I have made them, and kept them, and shared them together. And now, Harry, just take your old uncle's advice, and tell your wife all about your business; you'll think you'll ever repent it!'

My uncle emptied the silvery ashes from his long-since extinguished pipe; he had finished his story.

A TRUE GHOST STORY.

'Oh, grandpa! Ned Burns says he saw a ghost, last night, as he came home from his uncle's; and it was white, and followed along quite close until he got nearly home; he says he was frightened dreadfully.—Now, grandpa, do you believe it was a ghost?' said Frank Hay, as he ran into the room, all excited and out of breath.

His grandpa smiled, and bid him be seated, and he would tell him a ghost story.

'What! a true one, grandpa?'

'Yes, my dear, for it happened in the town where I lived when a boy.'

'Oh, grandpa, do tell it.'

In a beautiful town in the south of England, there stood a white house—a nice house for those days. It was called the 'Haunted House on the Hill,' and no one lived there for years, as each tenant that had tried living there had left in a short time, declaring he heard noises every night and could see something white running through the house.

In those days there were many very superstitious people, and the house was a terror to the neighborhood; and as the simple story of 'something white,' &c., was repeated again and again, it grew to be a frightful tale.

One day a poor man came to the village and could find no home to shelter his family. The story of the Haunted House was told to him, in all its horrors, as it was to every stranger. Although poor and ignorant, he was a godly man, and did not believe in ghosts.

He thought at once that he would procure that house for his family, if he could. He found the owner, and made known his errand. The landlord then told him why it was tenantless, and said he—

'I don't know what ther that house is haunted or not; but if you will go there and live, with your family, I will repair it, and you shall have a rent free for five years, for I am tired of seeing it look so deserted.

The poor man gladly accepted the offer; but he resolved to go there alone for one or two nights, at any rate, until he had found what the ghosts were made of. That night he took a basket and wended his way to the silent house. The weeds had grown rank before the door, and it was with difficulty he could get through. After some time he managed to open the front door, which for long years had been closed. After examining each room carefully, he decided to sleep in one of the chambers, from which a door opened that led down stairs.

It was growing late, and after kneeling down and begging the protection of his kind Heavenly Father, he wrapped himself in his blanket and was soon fast asleep. After a time he was suddenly awakened, and he soon heard the clock in the church tower strike one. Now, thought he, this is just the time the ghosts are said to appear, so I must watch. Presently came a pit-a-pat up the stairs, and then a scratching noise at the door. He arose as quickly and quietly as possible; but the floor creaked, and before he could open the door, the pit-a-pats were growing fainter, and all he could see was 'something white' disappearing at the bottom of the stairs. He watched and waited and listened; but evidently the ghost was too frightened to appear again that night.

'Then, it really was a ghost,' said Frank.

Wait, said his grandfather, and you will know. The man said nothing to the villagers the next day of his previous night's adventure.

The next night he watched again; but before going to the chamber he sprinkled the stairs with fine sand. He was sure the form of the foot that made the pit-a-pat would be there in the morning. Then again he prepared himself to wait and listen. It was several hours before he heard anything, then there came a noise up stairs, and again the scratching at the door; and this time he opened the door in time to see 'something white' run, scramble, and fall over each other, in a very undignified way for ghosts to disappear. And although the moon shone brightly into the chamber window, it was not light enough for him to define the objects. But, at peep of day, he examined the steps, and what do you think he found? The sand was covered with rabbit tracks. White rabbits had burrowed there and multiplied; the villagers had avoided the place, and they had matters all to themselves.

'Well, grandpa, did the poor man move in with his family?'

'Yes dear; the landlord kept his word, and the poor man and his large family lived on rabbit pie, which was considered quite a luxury in England, and in which few could indulge except the gentry.'

And I should like to say to Ned Burns, or any other boy, who thinks he sees a ghost, if he can have the moral courage to go to it, he will find it is nothing to be frightened at, any more than the 'something white' which haunted the house on the hill, which proved to be only white rabbits.—'Aunt Ann' in Little Corporal

IT'S WHAT YOU SPEND.

It's what thee'll spend, my son, said a sage old Quaker, not what thee'll make, which will decide whether thee's to be rich or not. The advice was (trite remarks the Philadelphia Ledger,) but it was but Franklin's in another shape: 'Take care of the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves.'

But it cannot be too often repeated.—Men are continually indulging in small expenses, saying to themselves that it's only a trifle, yet forgetting that the aggregate is serious, that the seashore is made up of petty grains of sand. Ten cents a day, even, in thirty-six dollars and a half a year, and that is the interest of a capital of six hundred dollars. The man who saves ten cents a day is so much richer than he who does not, as if he owned a life estate in a house worth six hundred dollars. Every sixteen years ten cents a day becomes six hundred dollars; and if invested quarterly turns the same sum in [illegible] cents a day is child's play, some will exclaim. Well, then, John Jacob Astor used to say that when a man who wishes to be rich has saved ten thousand dollars, he has won half the battle. Not that Astor thought ten thousand much. But he knew that in making such a sum, a man acquired habits of prudent economy, which would constantly keep him advancing in wealth. How many, however, spend ten thousand in a few years in extra expenses, and when, on looking back, cannot tell, as they say, 'where the money went to.'—To save is the golden rule to get rich. To squander, even in small sums, is the first step towards the poor house.

What Fanny Wants for Sunday.

I am New England born, I want a hymn and a prayer on Sunday. Not that I do not like both, on other days; but I am always homesick without them on Sunday.—I want them in church, too. I said I wanted a hymn and a prayer. I want a sermon, too; but alas! I am so often disappointed, that I generally take a seat near the door, where I can leave at the precise point when I feel happy, and the sermon begins.

This is naughty, I know, but as I have gone into the confessional, I will make a clean shrive of it. I want what I want so much, and the lack of it spoils my Sunday. I want to know how to live; and the Rev.——only tells me that I've "got to die." I want to know how to manage with to-day: and the Rev.——only speculates about what may or what may not be in eternity. I want to be soothed, and helped, and propped, and comforted; and the Rev.——tries to scare me with an "angry God," and a "sure damnation"—I want earnestness in the pulpit; and instead, I find the Rev.——drawing lazily; "And the Lord God said unto Adam." I want to know what the Rev.——is talking about; and instead—half of the time, I am convinced—he don't ever know that himself.

Perhaps these reasons may be some excuse for my dogging the "sermon" occasionally; if not, I plead guilty, and ask you to acquit me of intentional irreverence. It still remains that who else soever can do without their Sunday, it is not I Fanny.—Fanny Fern.

In a copy of the United States Gazette published in 1797, we find the account of a flag presentation, which may edify that large proportion who have lately participated in affairs of that sort. On the day after the battle of Fort Moultrie, in 1797, Mrs. Elliott presented to Col. Moultrie's South Carolina Regiment a banner. Surrounded by the beauty and fashion of the day, the Colonel stepped forth and received the flag from Mrs. E., acknowledged it in a very appropriate and eloquent speech. In closing, he turned suddenly to his men and said: "My gallant companions, you see the reward of courage and fortitude! You have fought and you have conquered; and the brave fellows who fell in the carnage of yesterday are in heaven, riding in their chariots like the very devil!"

As before swift ships there swims a hill of water, and a corresponding one glides along behind, so always before us is a mountain which we hope to climb, and behind us still a deep valley out of which we have ascended.

Wouldn't Marry a Mechanic.

A young man began visiting a young lady and appeared to be well pleased. One evening he called quite late, which led the young lady to ask where he had been.

'I had to work to night.'

'What! do you work for a living?' she inquired in astonishment.

'Certainly,' replied the young man, I'm a mechanic.'

'I dislike the name of a mechanic,' said proud miss as she turned up her pretty nose.

The young man never called again. He is now a wealthy man and has one of the best women in the country for his wife.

The woman who disliked the name of mechanic is now the wife of a miserable fool, a regular vagrant about grog shops and the soft verdant and miserable girl obliged to take in washing to support herself and children.

You dislike the name of mechanic, do you whose brothers are but well dressed loafers.

We pity any girl who has so little brains, who is so verdant, so soft, as to think less of a man for being a mechanic—one of God's noblemen—the most dignified and honorable personage of Heaven's creatures. Beware, young lady how you treat young men who work for living, for you may one day be married to one of them yourself.

The Best Time.

One day a lady was teaching a class of little girls in a Sunday School.

"My dear children," she said, "how soon may we give our hearts to God, and become true Christians?

They didn't answer at first. Then she spoke to them one by one. Turning to the oldest scholar in the class, she asked:—

'What do you say, Mary?'

'When we are thirteen.'

'What do you say, Jane?'

'When we are ten.'

'What do you say, Susan?'

'When we are six.'

At last she came to little Lillie, the youngest scholar in the class.

'Well, Lillie,' she said 'and how soon do you think we may give our hearts to God?'

'Just as soon as we feel that we are sinners, and know who God is,' said Lillie.

THE FOLLY OF QUARRELS.—Two little boys were talking together, when one of them said, 'I wish I had all the pasture land in the world.' The other said, 'And I wish I had all the cattle in the world.' 'What would you do with them?' said his friend. 'Why, I would turn them into your pasture-land.' 'No you wouldn't,' was the reply. 'Yes I would.' 'But I wouldn't let you.' 'I wouldn't ask you.' 'You shouldn't do it,' he screamed. 'I should.' 'You shan't.' 'I will;' and with that they seized and pummeled each other in rough-and tumble fight. Such is a specimen of the causes for which people often quarrel.

PARIS AND LONDON.—A French paper publishes the following comparison between these two cities, taken from the latest census returns: Paris occupies seventeen and a half million of acres, and contains too millions of inhabitants and fifty thousand houses. London covers seventy-seven and a half millions of acres, has about three millions of inhabitants and three hundred and sixty thousand houses. The population Paris averages forty per house—that of London eight. Most of the houses in Paris range from four to five stories, while in London they are two or three stories high.

THRILLING ADVENTURE.—

To the Editor of the Louisville Courier.

FRANKFORT, Ky., July 20, 1868.—Yesterday it fell to my lot to have quite a rare adventure for these parts. It was a very short one but a very thrilling one. At four o'clock I was expected to preach in what is called Todd's Schoolhouse, about five miles north of Frankfort, on the Georgetown Pike. It is hardly necessary to add that it was a very hot day, as everybody in that latitude are aware that we have had several hot days of late. At the top of a long hill called "Mullin's Hill" there are woods and undergrowth, "shady nooks and caves of cool recess," where the blackberry bush lays forth its tempting fruit in luxurious profusion; and as the whole is a "spot" is one calculated to woo one from the glaring, dusty pike, to indulge in its proffered refreshments. Being exceedingly hot—very fond of the berries, and having ample time to meet my appointment, I yielded to my inclination—sought the shade and began to enjoy the delicious fruits. While thus engaged, my attention was attracted by a peculiar noise, somewhat resembling that made by the locust, and supposing it to be one of these, with a little variation to its song, I proceeded in the enjoyment, until the noise was repeated, and my curiosity was excited to see the locust that had such a peculiar song. The curiosity was fully satisfied, when I saw five feet from me a huge, glittering rattlesnake, apparently ready for battle. He was in an opening at my front, dense undergrowth of briers to the right and left, and my horse immediately behind me—the bridle rein over my right arm. My feelings can better be imagined than described during the brief interval that followed, and if I should tell you the multitude of thoughts that rushed through my brain in rapid succession it would take about all your space. I knew very little of its modes of attack, but apparently it was just ready to make its spring, consequently the thought of mounting my horse seemed hardly practicable and escape through the briars on either side was an impossibility. I kept my eye on the fierce, shining creature, and seemed transfixed for an instant, and, before I had time to make up my mind what to do, with traffic fierceness he made a spring at me. I had a small closed umbrella in my hand, which I threw out to check him. His fangs caught in it, and before he could recover himself I seized a stick (which providentially lay close to my hand) and gave him such a stunning blow the first time that he was unable to defend himself, and I soon despatched him. I have often heard that they usually have mates near them, but under the surrounding circumstances I did not crave an ocular demonstration of that fact, and concluded to curtail (for the present) further enjoyment of the "shady grove" and delicious berries. I threw him out in the pike, mounted my horse, and rode off triumphant over that a repeat. I was very sorry afterwards that I did not capture his rattles, but I had no knife, and I did not even take time to count them, but there appeared to be twelve or fifteen, and his body was about four or five feet in length. I had visions of comrades in ambush, and I am almost ashamed to acknowledge that it was with difficulty that I "retreated in good order." On my return, about two hours afterward, his carcase had disappeared; and, very strange, there were five timid rabbits on the pike in close proximity to the encounter. Could they have anything to do with it? Why there? This was a little mysterious. But my staying the serpent and escaping from the face of a terrible death are facts for which I am most devoutly thankful.

Respectfully,
REV. W. T. EGBERT.

A PRUSSIAN POISONER.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Daily News, gives the following account of a remarkable criminal trial recently held in Germany: One of those causes celebres has just been tried at Posen, which would almost justify the belief that men are occasionally born into this world as entirely destitute of all principle of conscience as others are of sight or hearing. The facts are shortly as follows:—The master bookbinder Wittman was accused of having poisoned ten persons in six years, viz., his four wives and six children. Wittman had worked as journeyman for a bookbinder named Pirsch of Wollin, where he made the acquaintance of Maria Ghem, Pirsch's housekeeper. Wittman was on a visit at Wollin, at the end of 1858 and beginning of 1859, on January 1st of which year Pirsch died very suddenly, and Maria Ghem, according to a previous arrangement, came into the possession of all his property.

Soon after this Wittman commenced business in Wollin, and in February, 1860, married Maria Gehm, who in addition to Pirsch's property, had also inherited some money through the sudden death of an aunt. Two sons, John and Paul, were the result of this marriage. Mrs. Wittman died very suddenly in 1862, leaving all her property to her husband and two children of whom the eldest died in the same mysterious manner three months later. In June, 1863, Wittman married his second wife, Charlotte Hohn, who possessed some fortune. The latter made her will in the following December, leaving everything to her husband, and died a week afterwards. In April, 1866, Wittman married his third wife, Augusta Koroszky, who was richer than her predecessor. Her fate may be told in almost the same words. She died in August, 1865, leaving her property between her husband and her mother. Only two months after her death, Wittman married his fourth and richest wife, the widow Bose, who had one child by her first marriage. This child sickened, immediately after its mother's wedding and died in a day or two, by which the fourth Mrs. Wittman inherited its property. Wittman then removed from Wollin to Posen. It is hardly necessary to add that the fourth Mrs. Wittman's life was not of very long duration, as she died in September, 1866, having made a will in favor of her husband a month or two before. Under the pretext that she had died of cholera, Wittman had made arrangements for burying her the day after her death; but the extraordinary mortality in the Wittman family had already excited attention. The police here took the matter up, and their first suspicions were strengthened when they found that Wittman had called in no medical advice. Wittman was arrested just as the funeral procession was about to start, and the burial of the body was prohibited. On examining the house a large lump of arsenic sufficient to poison a hundred persons was found locked up in a chest. All the bodies of Wittman's former wives, as also those of his two children, were then exhumed and submitted to a chemical investigation. The result was the same in all six cases; a large quantity of arsenic was detected, and there could be no doubt that Wittman had poisoned his four wives and two children. He has been found guilty and sentenced to death. It is not improbable that he committed eight murders, as the [illegible] of Firsch, during Wittman's visit and also of his first wife's aunt, are extremely suspicious coincidences under the above circumstances.

Dean Alford at the Anniversary of Cheshunt College.

The hundredth anniversary of the Countess of Huntingdon's College at Cheshunt took place on Thursday in the presence of a numerous and influential assembly. Divine service was conducted in the college chapel, the Rev. Newman Hall, L.L.B., Independent, reading the prayers, and the Rev. T. Binney preaching the centenary sermon. Mr. Binney eloquently advocated the claims of the institution, which he said was entirely unsectarian, a student being at liberty to enter the ministry of the Episcopal Communion, as well as any other. A cold collation was afterwards served in the college grounds, the Very Rev. the Dean of Canterbury in the chair. Amongst those present were Mr. J. Cheetham, M.P., Mr. Torrens, M.P., Mr. T. Chambers, M.P., Archdeacon Sandford, Professor Thorold Rogers, the Rev. T. Binney the Rev. Dr. Raleigh, the Rev. H. Allon, and numerous other Dissenting ministers. The Dean of Canterbury, who was received with loud cheers, proposed "Prosperity to Cheshunt College." He said the college represented to him a very sacred principle—that of hearty mutual recognition of one another as servants of our common Lord. (Applause.) We, in this land, had been long endeavoring to make our Christianity stand on its narrowest and finest point. (Hear, hear.) And the inevitable result of the equilibrium on the apex had followed. (Applause.) It had been an unstable equilibrium. (Hear, hear.) Our English Christianity had had to be propped all round. It was high time that this vain experiment were abandoned, and that the artificial props were struck away. This was one reason why he stood there that day as the proposer of prosperity to their college—that they might, if it were God's will, inaugurate, or at least give expression to, a spirit of hearty, loving recognition of one another as brothers and equals in God's work. (Loud and enthusiastic cheering.) But there is yet another reason, arising from circumstances within the Established Church itself. It was no matter of dispute that her Reformation vesture was a coat of many colors, and there were in it many pieces of the original scarlet. There were many who could say—and his own feelings went with them—that they were far from disliking the effect of an occasional stripe of warm color, or the glitter of an occasional spangle; and the more so as three centuries' wear had toned down and harmonized all, so that in the brightness there were no glare, and in the richness no incongruity. But the case was now widely altered. (Hear, hear.)—Men had risen who were for renewing and widening the same scarlet lines; who want to send them to the Vatican to be dyed and trimmed, and the spangles to be regilt and multiplied. Now, he said, if they were going to refit, let duffel grey bare its way in the matter likewise. (Laughter and "hear, hear.") If accidental remnants were to be cherished, much more the main fabric, woven as it was amidst prayers, and tears, and anguish and blood. "And then," continued the Dean, "when the motley vesture is ready, raw in its colours, and without the toning of ages, I am much mistaken if John Bull do not elect to have the whole garment homespun—to renegate the scarlet and the spangles to the Vatican and label them—'Not Wanted.' (Cheers.) For this reason, also, I heartily wish prosperity to the, and to like institutions; prosperity—let the word be truly understood—to dissent itself. (Hear, hear.) For this, gentlemen, is your true prosperity not to swell vastly in apparent numbers—not to [illegible] items of other churches—but to give in the last example of thigoodly purity, this orderly method of the English faith; then lay up for yourselves and us such store of this garment, which no moth can corrupt, that in the crisis of England's church we may bless God that we possess dissenters." (Loud applause.)

City of Dublin Election.

The announcement by the Tory party last Saturday, that they intend to put forward Sir A. E. Guinness and Mr. Kinahan as the "Church and State" candidates at the approaching election for the city, called forth, in a few hours afterwards the following, which was posted over the walls of the city:—"City of Dublin Election—Church and State!—Hurrah!—XX Porter and LL Whiskey—Protestants of Dublin, vote for the beer barrel and the whiskey puncheon—Up with the public house, down with the bible and religion—The dead Guinness voted against the Sunday closing of public houses—The living Guinness is to 'walk in his father's footsteps.' Upon the rock of whiskey and porter are the Protestants of Dublin prepared to build their Church, so that the gates of Heaven cannot prevail against it!—Orangemen of Dublin, read in your 'open bible,' 'Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink' [Hab. ii. 15], and then go and vote for Guinness and Kinahan, thus proving yourselves 'not hearers only but doers of the Word'—The brewery and distillery ruin criminals and paupers, increase taxation, blast the character of Irishmen, and bring destruction on our race!!—Are Dublin electors prepared to send a brewer and distiller to Parliament?—Charles Boxton, the great London brewer, has said—'The struggle of the library, the church, and the school, all united against the gin-palace and beer-house, is but one development of the war between heaven and hell'—Protestants of Dublin lovers of your bible and religion, on which side of this 'struggle' are you going to fight? For the beer house and hell, or the school, the library, religion, and heaven?—Electors of Dublin! let your cry be: Down with the liquor traffic and up with the people!!!"

"CHEEK,"—This slang term is sure to be found in the dictionary, but an illustration may give a better idea of it than a definition: A soldier, being on picket reserve, went to a farm house, as he said, to borrow a frying-pan, but for what his countrades could not imagine, as they had nothing to fry. Preferring his request to the good dame who answered his knock at the door, the pan was duly transferred to him. He took it, looked in it, turned it over and looked at the bottom, and then turned it over again and looked into it very hard, as if not certain it was clean. "Well, sir," said the lady, "can I do anything more for you?" "Could—could—could you lend me a piece of meat to fry in it, ma'am?" and he laughed in spite of himself. He got it.

HOPING AGAINST HOPE.

The Leader of Tuesday, in referring to the West York election, says that it is with extreme reluctance that the farmers are dragged out to record their votes for Mr. Wright, and no advantage were now taken of this apathy Mr. Bell might yet be returned for West York. Really we did not think that the man of the Leader was so very virulant. Although not practically acquainted with agricultural pursuits, we should suppose he had learned by this time that Canadian farmers, at this season of the year, are extremely reluctant "to leave their harvest fields for any purpose whatever," and surely if the harvest yeomen of West York are unwilling to leave their grain fields to elect a resident—a Reformer and an old tried representative—how much more unwilling will they be to leave them to elect a non-resident, a chameleon in politics, such as Mr. Bell. This confidence of the success of the latter, with an admitted majority of 200 against him in a very small vote, "is surely hoping against hope; truly drowning men catch at straws." In spite of all the changes that the Leader can ring on the great Toronto Bell, Amos Wright has been returned to represent West York in the House of Commons. No great victory, 'tis true, for a sound Reform constituency to return a sound Reformer, an honest man, and one of themselves.

The following is the state of the poll in West York at the close of the second day:—

	Vaughan.	Wright.	Bell.
1st Division	Richmond Hill,	200	4
2nd do	Burwick	82	30
3rd do	Kielnburg, 4 o'clock.....	118	48
York,
1st Division,	3rd Concession	89	41
3rd do	Carleton.....	76	84
		654	249
Etobicoke,	Islington.....	89	42
Wright's majority, 405.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—In common with the other parts of the country we have to record the failure in part of our expectations. The appearances at the early part of the season gave promise of exceeding large returns to the farmers. Every description of crops looked luxuriant, but the dry and hot weather during July exhausted almost the entire moisture needed for their perfections. The fall wheat especially gave promise of a very heavy crop; owing to the drought and heat it was hurried forward too fast, rust too set in, and the consequence is with abundance of straw, a shrivelled sample. Spring wheat with many is no better, still there will be a better sample than of fall. Oats and barley, where not early sown, are extremely light; peas but light too; and as for potatoes, fears are entertained that they will be almost a failure. The hay crop was fair, fully an average. The weather for saving the crops has been seasonable; so while deficient in some articles, others are good and saved in excellent condition. The rains on the last days of July and early part of this month have revived pastures and root crops.

The Mitchell Advocate comes to the Rescue of John Sandfield's Combination, Model Reform, Mongrel Government, in the matter of the dismissal of Mr Carroll. We have nothing to do with defending our correspondents in any remarks they may choose to make, but we are confident that if "a Catholic" had seen our Chaffers's remarks he would be able to refute them. In the meantime we advise the Editor of the Advocate to read the last number of the Berlin Telegraph.

The Disaffection in Nova Scotia.

The latest intelligence from Halifax conveys no improvement in the temper of the blue noses about Confederation. It is known that Sir John A. McDonald and Sir G. E. Cartier went to Nova Scotia in order if possible with other members of the Administration of the Maritime Provinces to patch up matters. So far they appear to have been unsuccessful. The two Canadian Ministers with Messrs. Mitchell and Kenny were before the Repeal Committee on Friday last, but effected nothing. A Convention has been sitting in Halifax for some time. The object appears to have been to consider what was their duty in the present state of popular feeling of dissatisfaction in the Province. It was closed on Friday night after passing unanimously the following resolution:—

"Whereas this convention have fully considered the reply of the British Government to the address of the representatives of the people of Nova Scotia to her Majesty the Queen, praying for a repeal of the Act uniting Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and the course which it is expedient to pursue in the present crisis of the public affairs of the Province.

Be it therefore Resolved—"It is the opinion of the Convention, that it is necessary to use every means to extricate the people of Nova Scotia from a Confederation that has been forced upon them without their consent, and against their will."

It is well to observe that the disaffected seem resolved to attain their object in a "lawful and constitutional" manner. While they do this we can have nothing to say.—Let us hope, however, that the crisis is about being passed, and that as time wears away so may those anti feelings lately so rife become allayed, and that eventually they may become reconciled to their alliance with their sister Provinces. Some few of the more violent and hair-brained agitators have been advocating annexation to the United States. This is a measure the people as a whole would never submit to if they could possibly help it. Bad as they may consider confederation, annexation would be infinitely worse. We are satisfied they view it so, and that as they become better acquainted with us they will find we are not such a bad people as they been accustomed to consider us. The Dominion Government has a difficulty in this matter of no ordinary kind to deal with, requiring their united skill and judgment to manage. Much will depend upon the tact and skill employed at this critical juncture. Let us hope that the extreme violence is about passing away; a kind word or a considerate action might do much to allay irate feeling, whilst an opposite course may cause the ill nature to manifest itself with redoubled fury.

THE UNION SCHOOL.

Our Union School commences its present term under very favorable circumstances.—Mr. Dickson, the able and popular Principal returns to his duties with new vigor. Mr. Hardy is his assistant teacher in the Grammar School. Our well known and popular teacher, Miss Beatty, is at her old place; and Miss Borrowman is again surrounded by her pupils always pleased with their teacher. The infant division, Mrs. Flavell's, is divided; a new teacher, Miss Curtis, of Northumberland, taking one half of the pupils into a room prepared for her out of the old Board Room. This latter change is a move in the right direction, as Mrs. Flavell's room was too much crowded, having had in actual attendance at times 140 children.—Miss Curtis comes to us with the reputation of being a good teacher, peculiarly able in the management of children of beginners room in the Girl's Department is now under the care of Miss Hatton, already of much experience. She has established for herself a reputation as an accomplished and thorough scholar, and we confidently predict for her department a successful term. Mr. McFaul and Mr. Taylor, whose services are so highly prized by the Board, are at their old places. We must not forget to mention that Miss Dowling, of Auburn, will take the North Ward School after Miss Rutherford's time has expired. Never before has the Union School had so many successful teachers within its walls. It is now one of the finest schools in Ontario, and freely quoted as such throughout the Province.—May it continue to flourish until it is not almost but altogether the finest school in the Province.

Girls at the Grammar School.

Whilst the Grammar School Masters' Association has passed a resolution affirming the principle that girls are entitled to enjoy all the privileges of our Grammar Schools equally with the boys, the Chief Superintendent has come out in the Globe with a long letter, stating in effect that in the distribution of the Grammar School fund is to be in proportion to the average attendance of boys in the prescribed course of studies, and that this is done according to the opinion of the first law officer of the crown." This is virtually leaving the poor girls out in the cold. Pupils, according to the first law officer of the crown, do not include girls in the Grammar Schools. On the same manner of reasoning they will be read out of the Common Schools. It is not likely that the Chief will endorse this conclusion. He is willing to give them the benefits of a Common School education, and if they require a higher education, private schools must be provided, or the public may do as he has done, send their daughters to a convent to be educated. We are pleased to find there is so general a feeling in favor of having the girls in the Grammar Schools by the Grammar School Teachers. Their opinion will have weight, and we hope ere long to see the old fogey notions of the Superintendent exploded. We have read with pleasure a letter in the Globe from our respected Principal on the subject, in which he holds up the exclusiveness of the department in a very amusing manner.

It is asserted on good authority that Messrs. McDougall & Lindgate are about to rebuild their mill; not at Ashburnham, but at Rice Lake. This is another blow to Peterboro'. A liberal policy in railway matters would have kept both Campbell's and McDugall & Co's mill here. 'Tis too bad that Peterboro should now have to blame herself for her misfortune. These mills will take away over 200 men and their families, while Cobourg without the expense of building a railway to Peterboro will get three quarters of her lumber trade. When Peterboro' citizens fail to be true to her, then commences her misfortunes. Yet we have a good back country and some of the mills.

KILLED.—A Mrs. Kent, of Esquesing, was lately killed in Brampton, through the running away of her horse. Mr. Kent was driving at the time; she only lived a few minutes.

The Agricultural Mutual Assurance Company, of Canada.

We have received a copy of the last report of the above company which shows it to be in a very healthy and prosperous state. It is purely a Farmers' Assurance Association, taking no risks more hazardous than farm property, and the report states that its business extends over nearly the whole of the Province of Ontario. The capital is $218,000. The policies issued on first January, 28,764. The conditions on either the premium note system or for cash without note, charging 75 cents per $100 on a three years risk; or for $3 25, including agents fees, any farmer can insure to the amount of $500 for three years and has no other liability whatever during that time. At such a moderate sum we think that no farmer should run the risk of fire sweeping away his property in a moment when perhaps he least expects it. The policies issued last year on the cash system were about 11,000. The report further adds, that:—"According to statistics laid before Parliament last year by the Auditor General the Agricultural Mutual had more policies than all the other "Farmers' Mutuals" in Ontario, combined. Mr. John A. Hartley, a gentleman well and favorably known here is agent for this company for the County of Peterboro, and we feel certain that any business transacted by Mr. Hartly will prove satisfactory. The following is from the London Advertiser:—

WITHOUT A RIVAL.—We see by the last Canada Gazette that the Agricultural Mutual Assurance Association of Canada is the only company doing business on the mutual principle that has deposited the amount required by law to enable them to operate throughout the Dominion. This speaks stronger than words in support of the claims of the Agricultural Mutual to the first place among Canadian Insurance companies. This of itself will strengthen the position which the company occupies with the farmers of Canada, and will still more to its increasing prosperity. The Monetary Times, in alluding to the matter, says:—"We are glad to notice that the Agricultural Mutual, the largest company of this class in Canada, has set a good example to all other Mutual Companies by depositing the sum of $12,000. We are strongly of opinion that it will be to the interest of the Mutual Companies throughout the Dominion to avail themselves of the means and opportunity afforded by the Act of fortifying themselves in the confidence of the community."

DISTRICT RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting held in Port Hope, on the 25th inst., a District Rifle Association for the Third Brigade Division of Ontario was formed. The M. P's of Northumberland, Durham, Peterboro and Victoria, were almost all chosen members of the council.

The following were then elected members of the Council viz:—

For Durham, West Riding.—The Hon. John Simpson, Lieut.-Col. Cubitt, and Capt. Robson.

East Riding.—P. H. Burton, Esq., M. P., Lt. Col. Williams, M. P. P., and Lt. Col. Smart.

Victoria, North Riding.—A. P. Cockburn, Esq., M. P. P., Capt. Sheffield and Capt. J. D. Smith.

South Riding.—Geo. Kenipt, Esq., M.P., Capt. Hudspeth and Capt. Cuningham.

Peterboro' West Riding.—J. Carnegie, Esq., M. P. P., Lt. Col. Poole and Major Leigh.

East Riding.—P. M. Grover, Esq., M.P., Lt. Col. Haultain and Capt. Blackhock.

Northumberland, West Riding.—The Hon. James Cockburn, Speaker of the House of Commons; Lt. Colonel Boulton and Lt. Colonel Smith.

East Riding.—Joseph Keeler Esq., M.P., Major Wainwright; Capt. Dundile

The annual meeting of the association is to be held on the third Wednesday of April each year.

SUPPOSED TO BE DROWNED.—Last week a canoe was found on the Otonabee River, a little below, or near Hales' Mill, upset. On enquiry it was learned that a man named Thompson, who had resided in South Monaghan, had left home in the canoe with the intention of coming up the river on business, and his wife and others went in search of him, and he not having arrived at the place fears were entertained that he was drowned. Search was made for the body, but to no purpose. It has been reported since that he was seen alive on the Rice Lake plains.

It appears that the effort in Port Hope to adopt the Toronto mode of dealing with silver has proved a failure. Whilst a majority appeared in favor of the plan, a goodly number were in favor of receiving silver at par. So sure as Toronto and the surrounding towns keep to the discount, so sure will places like Port Hope and Peterborough be flooded with the depreciated currency. Will our business men arouse themselves to the danger they run by their apathy.

RUNAWAY.—On Sabbath last while the Rev. Mr. Stock, Baptist Minister, was proceeding to preach in the Chapel on the Communication Line, Smith, his horse took fright and ran into the ditch. Mr. Stock in some way lost the lines when the horse ran away. Two persons who saw the animal approach them, endeavored to stop him using a fence rail for the purpose; but he, dashing against it, fell and broke his neck; fortunately Mr. Stock escaped unhurt.

The Village of Stayner, on the Northern Railway, has been almost consumed by fire which originated in the woods, and swept over that place in its course; the station house at the place was also consumed and part of the track destroyed. The train was delayed for more than a day on account of the fires crossing the tract.

The London Free Press says that two young men, McIntosh and Boulee, respectively, who were so foolish as to get upon the top of the cars during the return of an excursion trip from Windsor, were caught by the rafters of the bridge and killed. A warning to others to avoid such daring.

ACCIDENT.—On the 31st ult., a man named Hogan, of Mason, while climbing a fence, carelessly holding his hand over the muzzle of a gun, had the greater portion of the left hand blown away. It is supposed that the hammer struck against a rail which caused the discharge.

The Reformer says that an attempt was made to rob a safe in the passengers' department of the Grand Trunk station at Guelph, on Friday morning last. They were disturbed before their end was accomplished, but escaped. There were $300 in the safe.

NEW LAW FIRM.—By an advertisement in to-day's issue our readers will learn that Messrs. Scott & Green have entered into a partnership to practise law. Both are well known in the county; they have our best wishes for their success.

"CONSECRATING THE COLORS."

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—It is very annoying in a newspaper controversy to have an opponent who will not fairly meet the point at issue, but who attempts by throwing dust in people's eyes, to keep it out of sight. Such an individual I have to deal with, but I am determined he shall not slip away at a side door. I want him to show authority or usage—not for presenting or dedicating colours to a body of men, but for this mysterious ceremony of consecration. If it is ceremony as performed here is correct, how easy for "One who knows" to end the controversy by stating the fact with the proof. This he has failed to do except to say that in the "book of Field Exercises" consecration is referred to, and a stop that a similar ceremony was performed at Whitby. He might have quoted from the book the authority to consecrate, and he might have given us more examples of the usage than this solitary instance. Failing to do so the inference is that he cannot. He finds that this mysterious act—this unmeaning ceremony of consecration is extremely difficult to justify, unless by drawing somewhat freely upon the credulity of the people. Hence his ill nature towards me for calling in question the propriety of such an act and his determination to silence me if he can by browbeating and misrepresentation.

In the last Review he thus notices my last letter, "Common Sense" has shifted his ground. He started the discussion as to the propriety of the ceremony, and in reply to my letter conclusively shewing not only the propriety of the ceremony but also its necessity, now rushes into print with a long dissertation on the meaning of the word consecration and also of his own nom de plume. This dished up with a slight sauce of abuse of me is the gist of his reply. To say nothing of the bad grammar of the above extract let any one read my reply and show where I have shifted my ground. And I say where is the abuse in anything I have written? A man who writes so loosely writes himself down as wanting in the "very uncommon article." If there is any complaint to be made of abuse, I think I have reason to make it. But my object in keeping up this discussion is not to bandy epithets. I want "One who knows" or any one else to let us know where the authority for the religious part of this ceremony is to be found? Can this advocate only adduce the Whitby case? Did he read the Editor's remarks of one of the papers there on that unmeaning ceremony of consecration? Unless some better apology be given than any yet advanced for this consecration, I shall continue to consider such an act unmeaning, superstitious and wicked. The professed consecration of a set of colors to the Almighty, and their subsequent desecration appear to me little short of mockery, and the sooner such a practice is dropped the better. Its continuance only tends to bring religion into ridicule, strengthens infidelity, and blunts moral perception. I arrive at this conclusion, not from the study of Euclid or Whately's Logic, but from the simple teachings of mother-wit alias Provincial Teacher's Association.

REPORTS.

The following report of the Committee appointed to prepare resolutions expressing the views of the Association on the subject entrusted in the three topics, was submitted and laid on the table.

The committee appointed to prepare a resolution on the 3rd topic on the annual circular beg leave to report—That it is expedient and necessary for the advancement of education amongst us to discontinue county and circuit boards of public instruction, as now constituted, and appoint county superintendents, who have been at least first-class [illegible] and appointed by the Council of Public Instruction for Ontario.—Three or five of such superintendents to form a board of examiners, to grant certificates to teachers in their respective circuits, limiting such certificates to a county or township for the first two years, and to be named a third class certificate, and to require each board to elect either annually or otherwise, one of its members to act in their behalf in a central board of examiners, formed of such elective superintendents, having power to grant Provincial certificates to such teachers as they find qualified, and who have already satisfied the local boards of their ability to teach and as have been recommended by them to this central board. And that all candidates pay a fee of not less than twenty dollars on presenting themselves for examination before the local board, such money to constitute a fund for pensioning teachers. And further that any teacher who shall have have continued twenty years in the profession, and whose character can be satisfactorily vouched for by the inspectors and trustees, shall be entitled to a pension. And lastly, that as soon as practicable, all persons entering the profession be required to receive a professional training for their duties. (Signed), Robert Alexander, James B. Dixon, J. Crowle, E Scarlett.

A report of the delegate to the Protestant Teachers' Association for the Province of Quebec was also handed in. It contained many interesting points, but our space will not admit of its publication.—Globe.

Sensible Letter from Mr. Howe.

Halifax, July 31.—A number of disgraceful articles have appeared in the anti-Union papers as to the way the distinguished visitors from Canada should be received here, the Hon. Mr. Howe publishes a manly letter, rebuking the sentiments therein expressed. He also alluded to the handsome manner in which the Nova Scotian members of Parliament were treated in Canada, although hostile to the Government and to Confederation policy, and says that if Nova Scotians have lost their constitution, they should at least preserve their manners; that England having thrown upon the Canadian Government the responsibility of a great controversy, the Nova Scotians are bound to give a fair hearing to the remedial measures the Government may have to propose, and give its members courteous treatment. He further says that the Nova Scotian Antis are not so strong that they can afford to outrage the public sentiments of the whole world by a reckless disregard of the rules of civilized diplomacy. The letter has created a great sensation among the Antis. The more reasonable among them commend its sense and spirit.

SUICIDE.—A man named McDonald, of Almonte, a moulder, drowned himself lately while under the influence of liquor, and perhaps under some other influence.

In Cobourg, the Sun says, the tax this year will be five shillings and ten pence ($1.17) on the pound. To avoid this oppressive rate a loan is contemplated.

RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—We invite attention to the list of prizes published in to-day's issue. The match comes off soon when some good shots may be expected. The list of prizes, too, is large.

Remember the sale at Hale's, Otonabee, on Wednesday the 19th August. See advertisement.

LATEST FROM HALIFAX.

(From the Globe's Special Reporter.)

HALIFAX, August 8.

The failure of the Confederate yesterday afternoon took no one by surprise. Sir John A. Macdonald, Cartier, Mitchell and Kenny were before the Imperial Commission, but made no progress, or at all events none sufficiently definite to be in writing, as they were asked to do.

It is understood that Ministers said they merely came to inquire as to the cause and extent of the dissatisfaction in Nova Scotia.

The Conference lasted about an hour.

In the evening the Convention met again, and continued sitting till a late hour. Mr. Howe made a full verbal report as to the doings of the committee. The business of the Convention was closed by the adoption of the following resolutions:—

"Whereas this Convention have fully considered the reply of the British Government to the address of the representatives of the people of Nova Scotia to Her Majesty the Queen, praying for a repeal of the Act uniting Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and the course which it is expedient to pursue in the present crisis of the public affairs of this Province, be it therefore resolved it is the opinion of this convention that it is necessary to use every further lawful and constitutional means to extricate the people of Nova Scotia from confederation that has been forced upon them without their consent and against their will."

This resolution was adopted unanimously. Under it the Local Government and Assembly will, it is understood, proceed to devise means of continuing lawful and constitutional agitation. They will probably reply to the Duke of Buckingham's despatch, and urge that as the Dominion Government has not proposed measures of relief as his despatch seemed to promise, Nova Scotia has the right to renew the demand for separation from the Dominion.

Other means of lawful agitation are advocated to which I have before referred. The idea is retained of requesting members of the House of Commons to absent themselves from the sittings of the Dominion Parliament. Several Dominion members refused to commit themselves to that course.

The adoption of the above resolution is a triumph of the moderate wing of the repeal party, as all the members of the Local Legislature yielded and voted for the resolution. It puts at rest all apprehension of violent measures. It is said, however, that the extremists resisted very stoutly, and for a long time it is surprising how much fear there was that a mere violent course might be adopted.

It is now believed that the Legislative will attend to the business of the country, which has been neglected since the Dominion was inaugurated.

Though the crisis may be said to be past, considerable interest is felt to know what course the Local Government will propose to the Legislature on Monday. If some scheme of agitation is not proposed the extremists will be dissatisfied.

The Anti-Union Convention and the Privy Council.

HALIFAX, Canada, Aug. 8.—The committee sent out by the anti-union convention met the convention this afternoon at three o'clock, after refusing to go this morning to the Government House to meet the members of the Privy Council as agreed upon last night. The committee obtained the consent of the convention to receive the Privy Council if the Council would present themselves. Sir John A., Cartier, Mitchell and Kenny met the committee at half-past four and stayed about an hour. Result of the interview not yet transpired. Supposed not to be favorable to the settlement. The committee meets the convention again at half-past seven o'clock. There was a large picnic of all parties at Dr. Tupper's yesterday afternoon.

HALIFAX, 1:30 o'clock, p. m.—The Hon Joseph Howe, chairman of the Committee of Public safety, reported at length to the Convention last night. The business of the Convention has closed, and, as will be seen by the following resolution, the meeting has resolved itself into a committee of the whole. The resolution was unanimously adopted, and is as follows:—

The crisis is about over.

The Halifax correspondent of the Montreal Gazette, 6th inst., says:—

"The Anti-Confederate Convention, consisting of all the anti-Union members of the House of Commons and the Local Legislature, with Speaker Marshall in the chair, yesterday adopted a resolution appointing a committee to consider the political condition of Nova Scotia, and instructing them to report to the convention what steps are most advisable in the present crisis of affairs.

"The committee includes all members of the Local Government and the following members of the Dominion Parliament:—Messrs. Howe, Hillaire, McLellan, H. Chipman; and Messrs. Almon and Steers, of the Legislative Council. Mr. Howe is chairman of the committee.

"The convention, which has been in session since Monday, adjourned until Monday next to receive the report of the committee. The adjourned business is adjourned until Monday afternoon."

RUMORS — BITTER FEELING. — HALIFAX, August 5.—Scarcely anything has transpired about conciliation. The Antis still speak bitterly, and insist upon repeal and nothing else. It is rumored that Howe wants to avoid this extreme course; that he disountenances annexation, and advises another application to the Imperial Parliament; that the members at the caucus meeting would not take advice and go in for legislating Nova Scotia out of the Union. The House meets to-morrow, and it is rumored that a resolution will be passed regarding the old ten per cent. tariff, and that the new Customs House will be opened on Saturday under local authority. Time probably is not true, but it is believed by some. Many think there will be serious trouble; others that the whole affair will end in a fizzle. The country is not so violent as the Anti organs try to make it. It is reported that some members of the Local Government are disposed to accept the situation, but are driven to an opposite course. I can telegraph nothing definite until the Antis reveal their programme. The members of the Privy Council have kept very quiet since their arrival, and the Antis keep their movements very secret. Hon. Mr. McDougall arrived this evening.

Dr. Tanter, surgeon of the steamship "Pernian," who has long been known as a remarkably earnest and devoted Christian, and who has on almost every visit of his vessel to Montreal or Portland, addressed meetings in a very acceptable manner, is now in this city probably for the last time. The Irish Presbyterian Church, of which he is a member, having resolved to send a missionary to China, has called him to that high and responsible position, and he will in all probability proceed thither soon. He is to succeed the late lamented Rev. W. C. Burns, in a part of North

In Birmingham, England, recently, a charge of fraud of a novel character was investigated at the police court. A woman was accused of having conspired with a man, not yet in custody, to make a marriage, in which the one personated a gentleman named Mr. George Britton, (now dead) for the purpose of afterwards gaining a species of title to the estate. Mr. George Britton was once an old bachelor, who having long been in business at Stourbridge in Worcestershire, had amassed a considerable fortune. The woman in custody had been his housekeeper. A little while ago Mr. Britton died suddenly and left no will. His relatives were in council as to the disposition of the property when a local attorney suddenly made his appearance, and proposed that they should keep one half and that the rest should be given to the widow. "What widow?" cried all the relatives in a breath, "Mr. Britton's widow, your humble servant," said the housekeeper, coming forward with a certificate in her hand. We were quietly married at St. Andrew's parish Church in Birmingham, this time last year." The ugly fact, it may be supposed, were not long in moving a visit to St. Andrew's Church. They found that a marriage had taken place as certified on that day, and that the housekeeper was bride, but from an examination of the deceased gent man's photograph, the clergyman and the sexton who was one of the witnesses felt almost sure that Mr. Britton was not the bridegroom. They were afterwards taken to see the body, and then they were positive on the point. The relatives were now in a position to prove that on the day of his alleged marriage in Birmingham, Mr. Britton was confined to his room in Stourbridge, and the housekeeper was arrested. As she was not prepared with her defence she was remanded.

The Belfast papers describe an extraordinary scene before the house of the man Baird, in Monaghan, from which the Orangemen recently fired upon their assailants. After the inquest on the body of Hughes, who died from the wounds that he received, his friends made a procession carrying the remains in front of the hearse. When they arrived opposite Baird's the procession halted, as by previous concert, and the whole number, above two thousand men, kneeling down, shouted "Murder murder," and prayed maledictions upon Baird and his household. "For fully 20 minutes," says the Belfast News Letter, "they cursed him and his family in a manner dreadful to listen to. They then got off their knees, and the coffin was raised to the shoulders of the six young men who had previously carried it. The hearse was again started and the coffin bearers marched slowly after it, followed by a large crowd." The women took a prominent part in the attack on the Orangemen and in the breaking of the windows. They gathered stones from lane ways near for the use of their male friends, and "some were in attendance with bonnets to break them, so as to make them fit for throwing."

A CONTRAST.—The people of New Brunswick are just as well pleased with their Governor as the people of Ontario are displeased with theirs. Judge Wilmot is universally esteemed, and what is more, he deserves to be so. Immediately upon his installation the Mayor and Corporation of the capital presented him with a congratulatory address; and every opportunity was taken by the people to demonstrate their joy at the event. The state of affairs on the mainland is in striking contrast with the silence which characterized the inauguration of Howland at Toronto. No address was presented to him, no word of welcome, no popular shouting, no demonstration to his honor of any kind. If he had been a Russian Cossack taking possession of a Polish Province he could not have been greeted with more dismal silence.—Exchange.

THE PURCHASE OF ALASKA.—The warrant for the payment of the purchase money for Alaska and General Spinner's draft for the same, were duly signed on Saturday. The following is a copy of the receipt given by the Russian Minister:—

"The undersigned, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, does hereby acknowledge to have received at the Treasury Department, in Washington, seven million two hundred thousand dollars in coin, being the full amount due from the United States to Russia in consideration of the cession by the latter power to the former of certain territory described in the treaty entered in by the Emperor of all the Russias and the President of the United States on the 30th day of March, 1867 — (Signed). STOECKL.—Washington, Aug. 1, 1868.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST A MINISTER.—St. Mary, August 8.—Isaac W. W. Langford, now a labourer but formerly a school teacher, and local preacher residing in the neighbouring township of London committed on the 24th of July a rape on his brother's daughter, aged four years. On the 2nd instant he was arrested by Constable Ilsley, taken before Squire McLaughlin, examined, and sent to jail to await his trial.—Telegraph.

The Triennial Handel Festival, held in the Crystal Palace of London, was a great success. A choir of 4,000 voices sang the Queen's Anthem, and the choruses of the Messiah, and other sacred and secular work of Handel, before an audience of 20,000. Madle. Christine Nilsson, the new Swedish prima donna, and Miss Kellogg, from America, took a prominent part in the solos.

It is intimated that Jefferson Davis is going to become a business man in England. He is not a lawyer, and therefore cannot depend upon his professional exertions for a living. "Horace," says the Richmond Whig "other employment is necessary, and the expected opportunity of a commercial connection with a house in England for American business probably now takes him abroad.

SUICIDE OF A GAMBLER.—A noted Montreal gambler, and saloonist, named Xavier Charbonneau, committed suicide lately by leaping into the river. He was walking with his mistress at the time, and had a quarrel with her, which led to the act, which was only intended as bravado.

An Illustrious Race Going Down to Imbecility.

"There is none so poor as to do them reverence" may be said of the remains of the old "Family Compact," now that we find high Tory journals like the Kingston Whig embodying the following severe but truthful remarks in a prominent editorial paragraph:

"THE RELICS.—The old Family Compact was an admitted evil, and in the due course of time was put down, and by this time is almost forgotten. An evil, however, has grown out of it, which is not only annoying to the generality of Canadians, but is certainly most expensive to the country; and which is the descendants of the families comprising the Family Compact, still thrusting themselves into places of public trust solely on the mere strength of their family names. The Bethunes, Robinsons, Patersk, Sherwoods, Jarvises, Thompsons, Boultons, &c., &c., are all good men deserving of the prominent positions they filled in the early days of the Province. But their sons rare'y equalled their fathers in capacity or excellence, and their grandsons are far inferior still; nevertheless, they presume upon their grandfathers' services, and insist upon being applicants for every vacant position in the gift of the Government. They don't always succeed, but when they do they make very bad public servants, not only neglecting their duty, but assuming certain effen-ive airs and graces that better men never think of assuming."

The justice of the Whig's remarks will not be gainsayed unless by those who are the subject of them. It is a melancholy fact that the descendants of the strong minded but arbitrary compact are at this day in a condition of genteel mendicancy.—They regard themselves as possessing inalienable right to public office. Their vigorous grandfathers acquired to rule the country, lent their own ambition in for subordinate offices for which indeed they hardly considered the necessary capacity. It is a remarkable fact that notwithstanding their opportunities not one of them has risen to distinction, while nearly all are below mediocrity. We are not surprised that the Whig is desirous of cutting their association and acquaintance.—Freeholder.

The Catholic Church and Education.

The Nation of New York, referring to the Pope's recent allocution to the Austria Government, says:—"In this allocution his Holiness denounces as atrocious wickedness the establishment of the same relations between church and state regarding marriage and education which we have here, and threatens ever body concerned in bringing them about with the severest ecclesiastical censures. Amongst of the ideas entertained by the Catholic clergy regarding their duty in the matter of education is, when ever they can secure the power of exercising it, a late utterance of the Bishop of Dordogne, in France, is interesting and instructive. He affirms that "to the Church only, Christ gave the right and imposed the duty of teaching mankind"

"It is a fact that the laity are prohibited from receiving education, especially when science and literature are its object. We put forth no such claim. The Church accepts, encourages, and blesses devotion of every kind; but that which is true, and what we must loudly proclaim is, that every person engaged in teaching is bound in conscience to accept the superintendance and control of the Church. This right of the Church is imperative."

In fact, we need hardly hesitate in affirming that the only limits which the Catholic clergy even here impose on themselv s touching education are what are imposed by State authority, and that if circumstances should enable them to secure legislation placing the entire control of the schools or school funds of this State in their hands, they would think it a duty to alter the power thus offered them, and to treat the claims or pretensions of those opposed to such legislation as of absolutely no consequence. Moreover, they would attracting public attention to their pretensions in this matter by resolutely refusing to discuss them publicly, and push their claims simply by quietly influencing Catholic voters and political managers, and, through them, getting all they can, while waiting for all they think they are entitled to.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.

A despatch from the Colonial Secretary to Lord Monk, published in the "Gazette" today, lays down the following as the new table precedence within the Dominion of Canada, which has been approved by Her Majesty:—

1st—The Governor General or officer administrating the Government; 2nd—Senior officer commanding Her Majesty's troops within the Dominion if of the rank of a general; and officer commanding Her Majesty's naval forces on the British North American station if of the rank of an admiral; their own relative rank to be determined by the Queen's regulations on this subject; 3rd—The Lieut. Governor of Ontario; 4th—The Lieut. Governor of Quebec; 5th—The Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia; 6th—The Lieut. Governor of New Brunswick; 7th—The Archbishops and Bishops according to seniority; 8th—Members of the Cabinet according to seniority; 9th—The Speaker of the Senate; 10th—The Chief Judges of the Courts of Law and Equity, according to seniority; 11th—The members of the Privy Council not of the Cabinet; 12th—General officers of Her majesty's army serving in the Dominion, and officers of the rank of Admiral in the Royal navy serving on the British North American Station not being in the chief command, the relative rank of such officers to be determined by the Queen's regulations; 14th—Members of the Senate; 15th—Speaker of the House of Commons; 16th—Puisne Judges of Courts of Law and Equity, according to seniority; 17th—Members of the House of Commons; 18th—Members of the Executive Council, Provincial, within their Province; 19—Speaker of Legislative Council within his Province; 20th—members of Legislative Council within their Province; 21st—Speaker of Legislative Assembly within his Province; 22nd—members of Legislative Assembly within their Province.

GETTING WROTHY.

"Will the Essex Record quote us a single sentence in which the Leader advocated the claims of Mr. H. S. Howland? It cannot, and it is therefore a liar and a slanderer—As to our being actuated by any motives arising out of a dread of losing government patronage, the Leader gets no government patronage, and has never sought it. We have all the contempt of that kind for the hungry small fry."—Leader.

We think there can be no doubt of the certainty of Mr. Amos Wright's election, or the Leader would not thus have got so enraged. As for obtaining no government patronage, when it has paid off the old York Reade claims it may commence to talk—Till then it had better keep mute. It is very evident that the Leader is immensely chagrined at the course events have taken in West York.—Aurora Banner.

Among the late eating sight at Saratoga few attract more attention than a Candian woman who has three little girls born at once. They are about fifteen or eighteen months old, and look exactly alike. Advices from Texas, by the editor of an Austin journal, fully confirm the previous intelligence of the murders and assassinations in that State. About 10 days ago, while the Hon. A. O. Cooley, the only loyal member of the State Senate of Texas, was standing in the door of his dwelling at Fredericksburg, he was shot by one Dixon, from Fayette county. The first reports were that the shot would prove fatal; later accounts say that Mr. Cooley is alive, and may recover. Mr. Cooley has been a consistent Union man, and his prominence as the single loyal Senator in the Throckmorton cabal, made him a target for rebel revenge.

THE Wilson says some owners of saw-mills in Canada have petitioned Government to abolish a tax of 22½ cents per 100 pieces of boards, &c., charged by the St. Lawrence. This charge is for the nominal service of culling, and is a burden upon lumber sent to the States across our inland waters. Statements urged our merchants to ship lumber direct to the West Indies and South America, instead of having that also to go through the states, and Government will doubtless remedy this injustice. It has reduced the charge already to five cents at the instance of the Montreal Board of Trade.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box

THE ERIE CANAL.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1861 amounted to over three million dollors, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give "permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical Effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, by loss, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and indigne appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts per bottle.

MRS. WINSLOW'S

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH OF IT what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, and PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, their horses the sufferers, to avoid both use "Dudley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and administering the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, occasional extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, sequint sleep, fainting, trembling cough, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 33

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, purposing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

"Jest so

Poetry.

Tying her Bonnet under her Chin.

Tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied her raven ringlets in,
But not alone in the sixteen years,
She catch her lovely floating hair,
She tied a young man's heart within.

They were strolling together up the hill,
Where the wind comes blowing merry and chill,
And it blew the curls a frolicksome race;
All over the happy, peach colored face
Till scolding and laughing she tied them in,
Under her beautiful dimpled chin,

And blew a color as bright as the bloom
Of the pinkest fuchia's tossing plume,
All over the cheeks of the prettiest girl,
That ever imprisoned a romping curl,
In tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

Stronger and steeper grew the hill—
Colder, warmer, chillier still,
The western wind blew down and played
The wildest tricks with the little maid,
And, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

The western wind do you think it was fair,
To play such tricks with her floating hair?
To gladly, gleefully do your best
To blow her cheek against the young man's breast,
Where he so gladly folded her in,
And kissed her mouth and dimpled chin?

Oh, Hilary Vane you little thought,
An hour ago when you besought
This country lass to walk with you,
After the sun had dried the dew,
What perilous danger you'd be in,
As she tied her bonnet under her chin.

Young man, thy mother is thy best earthly friend—The world may forget thee, thy mother never; the world may persecute thee while living, and when dead, plant the ivy and the nightshade of slander upon the grassless grave, but thy mother will love and cherish thee while living, and if she survive thee will weep for thee when dead such tears as none but a mother knows how to weep. Love thy mother.

During the session of Democratic Convention two loyal soldiers, who had experienced the horrors of captivity in Richmond during the war, met the keeper of the Libby Prison wearing a delegate's badge! They fell upon him and give him a dreadful beating, which was not hospitable, certainly but not unnatural either.

Girardin says; "A newspaper man should always watch those who attack him with unnecessary bitterness: he should keep a file of papers brochures and books, and, when they least think of it, treat them to extracts from their former writings. If he pursues this course for sometime without flinching, few hounds will dare to bark and snap at his heels."

It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who do not advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbors who do advertise are filled with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; cough'd nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me enough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I am hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Jose phus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be relied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has worked effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Poetry.

CANADA.

Let others sing of other lands,
And other skies than ours,
Of orange groves and glittering sands,
And ever blooming flowers.

To Canada I dictate
My appreciative verse,
And bless the kind decree of fate
That cast my lot with hers.

The summer's gorgeous blush and bloom
She may not always wear;
The same bright hues, the same perfume,
Unchanging, through the year.

But varying seasons, after all,
Afford more real delight
Than changeless sweets and scenes that pall
Upon the taste and sight.

Winter, with desolation grand,
With ice and drifting snow,
Spreads pleasures thick on every hand,
As all Canadians know.

Spring comes with smiles, and tears, and sighs;
The ice-king is and n;
He yields his and summer quickly flies
To seize the vacant throne.

And summer brings the flow'ry plain,
Bright skies and leafy groves—
An absent friend returned again
To gladden those she loves.

Then autumn, with her richest gifts
Of fruits and various stores;
And man to heaven his heart uplifts,
And wonders and adores.

This is my favoured country—this,
Earth's fairest land for me,
But not so much for what she is
As what she yet may be.

Selections.

THE MISTRESS'S STORY.

From "Under One Roof," the Christmas Number of Chamber's Journal.

It was the finest room that ever I be held by far, lined with books, many of them larger than myself, from floor to ceiling; while three tall windows looked forth upon a flower-garden, bright with colour, bordering a noble lawn, beyond which stretched a wooded park, with herds of deer. but at that time I had no eyes for anything either within or without the room, except for its occupant. A thin, small, wrinkled, old man he was, with snow [illegible] there was the look of authority about him before which I could see that even my protectoress, Mrs. Mellon, quailed. He rose from his chair as we entered, and came towards us hastily, tightening the silken cord that held his dressing-gown together, as he moved.

So this is the child, said he ex-emptuously, who, I daresay, has been often you already, Mrs Mellon. Why does she not come here into the light?

My companion made no reply, but motioned to me that I should walk towards the window, through which the setting sun was pouring all its splendours.

And who are you, now? said the old gentleman, regarding me fixedly, with his hands deep in the pockets of his dressing gown.

My name is Annie Gray, said I, not overwell pleased, for I had always been a great pet with poor papa, and was not used to rough questioning.

Oh, yes, of course, rejoined he snappishly, that was easy to learn by heart; but it is not all your story, I suppose.

I know it and am glad of it I returned the old man fiercely. But his falsehood may flourish after him; and mind, added he, pointing to me with a shaking finger on which the jewels glistened like serpent's eyes, even if this child were what it says it has written, I would never own her for a Darcy, never! You may give her house room, if you please, but she is no guest of mine. I charge you never let me see her.

Without another word, he went back to his arm-chair, before the blazing wood, although the sun was June; and closing Mrs. Mellon's beckoning finger, nothing loath, I left the room.

I don't like grandpapa at all, said I as soon as the double doors had closed behind us.

But he will like you in time, said the old housekeeper reassuringly. If you had known the trouble I had to persuade him to send for you at all, and the unwillingness he felt to see you—But there, child, how should you know anything about it. I tell you Mr. Dacre saw the likeness as plainly as I see it, and all will be well if we have patience. It is a great deal that you are allowed to be in the house.

Who is it that I am like, please, said I quietly.

Well, you are like that little girl—she was your great-great-grandmother—no, her—in the gallery there. Nay—why should I keep it from the child, muttered she to herself—you are much more like some one else.

She stood still a while and listened. All was still in the great empty passage, where, of a morning time, you could hear it from end to end.

Come here with me Annie; but be sure you never tell what I shall show you.

She drew a key from her pocket, and softly applied it to the door on the side opposite to that on which was the library we had just quitted; then carefully taking out the key, she entered closing the door. It was a sitting-room, small by comparison to the other, and looking down upon a terrace which bordered a lake, with one gaily inked in it, a lady's room, to judge by the work-baskets upon the table; but what struck me about it most was the thick dust that lay on them everywhere. There were some skeletons of flowers in a china vase upon the mantelpiece; a book with a paperknife between the leaves, lay upon the chair, as though just thrown down as [illegible] there were ashes in the grate too, as though a fire had been kindled there but yesterday; but all these signs of recent occupancy were negatived by what I have described—a coating nearly an inch thick of dust. The windows were fast shut, and very dim; and the air was so faint and musty that the use of the great folding screen between the door and the fireplace—itself a mere dust) wall, upon which bird and flower were portrayed in vain—could scarce be guessed. There was something in the look of all these things which frightened me, and I was about to cry aloud, when suddenly, in the passage without, a door was heard to jar.

Great heaven! exclaimed Mrs. Mellon, some one has left the library! If your grandfather comes hither, we are lost! We heard his slippered steps shuffling towards us along the outer floor of the gallery without. Stoop down behind the screen, child, and neither speak nor move upon your life.

In another moment we had both crouched down on the thick carpet, and fortunately without much disturbing it, though, as it was it flew on about us, and made me long to sneeze like snuff. The door opened and Mr. Dacre came slowly into the room. I could see him through the space between the hinges of the screen and I could not but notice how changed he was since I beheld him last. His pinched and puckered features were quite white; his eyes alone no longer, but were dimmed with tears; and his walk instead of being rapid and impatient, was like that of one both sad and wearied. He came up to the fire place, over which hung a large picture, the only one in the room, and as I had thought, so covered with dust, like everything else, that the painting was obliterated by it. This, however, was not the case; I had only beheld the canvas back of it; it had its face to the wall. He turned it slowly—reverently—into its proper position and then I saw it was the full length portrait of a young girl. He stood before it with his chin resting on his hand. His lips moved, but no sound came from them; and presently down his withered cheeks the tears [illegible] The tears of those seemed to rouse him; he drained them quickly away, and looked about him almost fiercely, as though to assure himself that there were no witnesses to his emotion; then, sighing heavily, he replaced the picture as he had found it and left the room, locking the door and taking the key.

Until we heard the thud of the green baize door once more, neither of us dared to move. Then Mrs. Mellon drew a long breath of relief. Come away, child, cried she in a trembling voice, I might never to have let you run this risk. If your grandfather had discovered us, I should never more have been housekeeper at Dacre Hall, and you—well, I am not sure about you He saw the likeness plainly enough, as I expected, and came here to compare them That portrait was the picture of your mother, Annie: that room was her room. All is left there exactly as she left it years ago when she ran away with your father. No body enters it from year's end to year's end, not even your grandpapa. What a mercy it was he did not notice the door was opened! Let us get the dust off our clothes before anybody sees us. O dear, O dear, I'm all of a twitter.

For my part, I was as much alarmed about grandpapa, as interested in the room we had just quitted. How strange it seemed that the last person who had set there so many years ago, should have been me now another, the original of that beautiful picture! To think that her own fingers, that had so long been dust, as I was told, had arranged those very flowers in the vase; and placed that paper knife in the book; had left upon the workstand that moth-eaten something, which had doubtless been some dainty piece of handiwork. A feeling weird and strange possessed my childish breast, but yet without terrifying it.

Why did wicked grandpapa give up mamma's room? asked I, as I was being put to bed after an excellent supper.

Hush, Annie, your grandpapa is not wicked. He was angry because his daughter was disobedient, and fell in love with—whom—with Mr. Gray.

I'm sure papa's great deal better than grandpapa said I, so why shouldn't she.

But your papa is dead now, my dear, as one can't love dead people, you know.

That seemed unanswerable, and yet if it was the case, I could not understand why grandpapa had had tears in his eyes; revoking this hastily [illegible], as I lay all alone in my little bed, but yet within call of the kind old housekeeper, I fell asleep.

Mrs. Mellon said I gravely, as I sat at breakfast the next morning in her cosy and genial sitting-room, with its cupboards full of delicious jams and preserves, and other sweetmeats and spoons of the ladies, don't like people coming into my room after I'm gone to bed.

Well, my darling? (it was astonishing how fond the old lady was of me by the way, and, to do myself justice, my affection was equally strong for her), I only opened it just before I went to bed, to see that you were quite comfortable, and I did not even know that I had waked you, so seemed to be fast asleep enough.

So I was, said I. I do not know that it came at all. I am sure you are very pleasure, but I don't like strange people.

What do you mean, child? cried the housekeeper, putting down the saucer of tea she was carrying to her mouth.

I mean that I don't like the old woman [illegible] cap, that came and stared at me so last night without speaking.

Half a dozen different expressions flitted across the old housekeeper's face as I said those words. At first I thought she was frightened, although I could not imagine for that reason; and then she did not believe what I had told. She had all the servants under her, she said, and thought it exceedingly improbable that any of them should have come into my room at night without her leave.

Somebody did come, reiterated I; but it was a nice, clean looking old woman enough, and I daresay she meant no harm.

Oh my answered the housekeeper hastily, she certainly meant no harm. But if it happens again, Annie, be sure you tell me.

Mrs. Mellon said no more; but for the rest of the meal, and indeed throughout that day, I caught her casting the most curious glances at me, very much disconcerted she looked when I did so. I was not allowed to stray about the grand old house, although I longed to explore it, for fear I should meet with Mr. Dacre; but the housekeeper took me for a ramble in the grounds, which were very extensive and picturesque. She showed me what had been mamma's favourite walk in the avenue that led to the bowling green, and the summer house on the island in the lake where she used to sit, and then she pointed up to those dim and dusty windows—through which mamma had taken her last look of all those pleasant places ere she left them forever—and bade me beware of undutifulness and disobedience.

Mrs. Mellon meant nothing but good I am very sure, but the effect of what she said was to make me think of dear papa's poverty stricken face, and blame Mr. Dacre because it was so pale and wan. Being so rich, why did he not send him help? And why had I been so strictly enjoined not to mention my own name to him, because it was poor papa's? If it was not possible to love people who were dead, neither surely ought we to hate them. I felt an affectionate pity, too—independent of the relationship, which, indeed, I could scarcely understand—for the beautiful young lady whose portrait hung in the neglected chamber and although I wondered how she could have wished to have left so fair a home, I could not think she had done wrong.

I went so far, indeed, as to argue the matter with Mrs. Mellon; but my childish obstinacy seemed to give the old lady so much pain and even apprehension—she wringing her hands and muttering to herself: Her mother's child—her mother's child all over, in quite a piteous manner, that I ceased to oppose her.

That night, I was again waked up by the same silent visitor, and this time I took more particular note of her. She was an old woman—for [illegible] Mrs. Mellon, almost as old as she who looked after the children's ward in the workhouse, but ever so much cleaner and tidier. She was dressed in black, except her cap and wristbands, which were very white, and stuffy starched; and stood with her back to the window, through which the moon was shining, and though her wrinkled face, looking very calm and sad, and turned full towards me.

You are very rude, said I to a pet, to come here again, and I will tell Mrs. Mellon; and thereupon I called hastily to the housekeeper, who came in a moment, for she had been sitting up in case of this very thing should occur.

This woman is here again, cried I; but even as I spoke, the figure had vanished, although the housekeeper was standing in the only doorway of the little room. Then for the first time, I was really frightened. Can you not stop her coming? cried I. I would rather go back to the big room at the workhouse than see her again.

No, dear child, I cannot stop her, exclaimed Mrs. Mellon hastily; but Mr. Dacre can and shall. And without more ado she snatched me up, and throwing a shawl over my little palpitating body, carried me straight into the library, where it was her master's custom to sit up very late at night, and where we found him

He started up surprised and angry; but for once Mrs. Mellon did not seem afraid of him. Ask the child, exclaimed she, speaking with great excitement—ask the child why we came here. She will tell you that this is the second time that she has seen Nurse Austin.

It is false I cried I; it is a pack of yours and hers; but I noticed that her shrill voice shook, and his spare frame trembled while he spoke.

Nay, said she, it is true and you believe it. Ask her—ask her.

I know nothing of Nurse Austin, said I stoutly; but I had rather be with Dame Morris, (that was the work house nurse) than hate that silent woman in black come to stare at me every night. I had rather leave this fine house—thank you—than ever see her again; and I don't want you to be my grandpa, you cross old man, one bit.

Hush, hush; you don't know what you are saying, child, cried Mrs. Mellon; but Mr. Dacre took me on his knee, and wiped my tears away quite tenderly.

If, said he, Nurse Austin has been really troubling you, I will see to it; and she shall go on no more; and when he had asked me a few questions in order to make quite sure (he said) of who it was among the servants that had been so rude, he kissed me on the forehead, and said that he foresaw we should be the best of friends.

Then you must not hate papa, said I, not yet quite satisfied; and you must let mamma's room be unlocked and made pretty again, as she used to have it.

And though I saw that poor Mrs. Mellon turned white with terror at my boldness, grandpapa only patted my head and smiled gravely: Yes, Annie, yes; it shall all be as you wish.

He was convinced that I was indeed his grandchild, because Nurse Austin, who never spoke any but a Dacre, had come to my little room. For seven generations, that servant, faithful beyond the grave, has watched over us, under the old roof, and when anything of importance, whether for good or evil, is about to happen to any one of us, she makes her appearance at our bedside. Mamma, they tell me, saw her the night before grandpapa made his will and me his heiress, acknowledged me as his daughter's child.

If we were not "the best of friends," from that time forth, as he had predicted, we were, at all events, very constant companions. I do believe he was never so happy as when sitting in that room, now swept and garnished where the portrait of my mother smiled down upon him from the wall, while her daughter played at his knee, or ransacked the shelves for picture books. But before the year was out, Nurse Austin came to fetch him, and he had to leave me with strange guardians that seemed no more for me (although they were much more polite) than did those of the work house board room. Good Mrs. Mellon left me, too, long before I was grown up—a loss I felt very deeply. I was friendless, though no longer poor, until I met my husband here. It was then, for the first time, that I felt why mamma had given up all for Mr. Gray, and knew that I should have done the same.

FROM HALIFAX.

THE GOVERNMENT REPEAL RESOLUTIONS IN FULL.

HALIFAX, August 14.

In the House this afternoon, Attorney-General Wilkins moved the following resolutions:—

"Whereas, this House, on the 21st day of February last, unanimously adopted resolutions protesting against the provisions of an Act passed by this Imperial Parliament, confederating the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, which were followed by an address from the same body to her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, praying that the people of Nova Scotia be released from the operation of such Act, and that the rights, privileges and powers long enjoyed and exercised by the Legislature of this Province be restored;

"And whereas, in reply to such resolutions and address, his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, Secretary of State for the Colonies, in a despatch bearing date the 4th of June, 1868, has informed the Governor-General that the Queen's Government do not feel warranted in advising that repeal of the British North America Act for the following reasons:—First—That Nova Scotia was, on several occasions, the first of the Provinces to move the project of Confederation. Second—That Confederation, in 1854, was proposed in the Legislature of Nova Scotia. Third—That Confederation, in 1857, formed one of the topics entrusted to delegates from the Governments of Nova Scotia to her Majesty's Government. Fourth—That the subject of Confederation was revived in Nova Scotia in 1861.

"Resolved—1. That the reverse of the assertion in the despatch of his Grace the Duke of Buckingham is the fact—the word Confederation never having been in any resolution moved in the Legislative Assembly of this Province previous to 1866, although the subject of Colonial Union had been from time to time discussed in this House in general terms, without affirming the desire of this Province to become a party to Legislative or Federal Union of the British North American Provinces till the adoption of the aforesaid resolution of April, 1866, which was a surprise to the people of Nova Scotia.

Resolved—2. That the resolution moved in the Legislature of Nova Scotia in 1854, which is as follows, makes no mention of Confederation: That the House do now resolve into Committee on the general State of the Province for the purpose of considering the subject of the union of the British North American Colonies, which was debated without eliciting any expression of opinion from the House, and was postponed to the next session of the Legislature, but was never again taken up.

Resolved—3. It is true that delegates from the Government of Nova Scotia were in 1857 instructed by a Minute of Council to confer with Her Majesty's Government, not upon the subject of Confederation, but in respect to a union of the British North American Provinces; but the Council had no authority from the Legislature to make such minute, as will fully appear from the report of the delegates themselves, who say that neither the Legislature nor the people of Nova Scotia had given an expression of opinion on the subject and we had no authority to answer the enquiry of the Colonial Secretary, whether the people of Nova Scotia desired the change.

Resolved—4. That that resolution of 1861 makes no reference to Confederation, being simply an instruction to confer with his Grace the Colonial Secretary, His Excellency the Governor General, and the other North American Colonies on the subject of a union of the North American Provinces with the Mad ine Provinces, with a view to an enlightened consideration of a question involving the highest interest, and upon which the public mind in all the Provinces ought to be set at rest; that a conference consisting of delegates from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and the Executive Council of Canada was held at Quebec in September, 1862, at which the question of colonial union was set at rest without a dissenting voice, on the ground that it was premature even to discuss it—a decision acquiesced in by the Assembly in the session of 1863, and by the people of Nova Scotia, who imagined that the prospect of uniting the Provinces had disappeared

And yet in presence of evidence so clear and conclusive, drawn from the public records of the country, His Grace the Colonial Secretary has ventured not only to defend the adoption of a scheme of Government which was never submitted to the Legislature or to the people of this Province, but to throw upon them the responsibility of having initiated the measure itself.

And Whereas, instead of recommending the repeal of the British North American Act, His Grace the Duke of Buckingham has invited the attention of the Government of Canada to the points raised in the address relative to taxation, the regulation of trade and the fisheries, with a view to their modification or relaxation in relation to the peculiar interest of Nova Scotia and the Maritime portions of the Dominion.

And whereas, five members of the Dominion Government have been several days in this city, during a portion of which time a Provincial Convention was in session, but no offer to relax taxation or to modify regulations in relation to trade has yet been made to the Government or Legislature of this Province.

Resolved.—That no more financial arrangement or offer can be made which would satisfy the people of Nova Scotia.—A restoration of their constitution with full powers of self government they consider the only effectual quarter for the wise regulation of their trade and fisheries for protection from unjust and excessive taxation and for the economy and wise administration of affairs.

And whereas John Bright, Esq., member for Birmingham, on the 24th day of May last, presented a petition to the House of Commons, signed by sixteen of the nineteen members elected by the people of Nova Scotia to the Parliament of the Dominion, and by thirty-six of the thirty-eight members elected to sit in the Legislative Assembly of this Province, fully setting forth the grievances inflicted upon the people of Nova Scotia by the Act of Confederation, and praying for their removal by the repeal of said Act; and also a petition signed by the accredited delegates from this Province, namely the Hon. Joseph Howe, Hon. Wm. Annand, Hon. J. C. Troop, and H. W. Smith, Esq., praying to be heard by counsel at the bar of the House of Commons on behalf of the aforesaid petition.

And whereas, the said John Bright in his place in the House of Commons on the 16th day of June last, with the approval of the delegates aforesaid, consented to waive the demand for an immediate repeal of the British North America Act, and to act in lieu thereof that Her Majesty's Government would institute an inquiry into the grievances of Nova Scotia, which moderate and reasonable request was refused.

And Whereas, Mr. Adderley, Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, in the House of Commons on the 16th of June last, in refusing such inquiry, declared that he could assure the House that by the employment of other means any apprehensions which might have been entertained by the people of Nova Scotia were being rapidly dissipated at the present moment; that by following the line indicated in the last despatch of the Colonial Secretary, 4th of June, 1868, and by using all friendly and moral influence the Government at home would be able, while avoiding all the evils of misadvised interference, to induce the Colonists to arrange their mutual interests. This had been effected to a large extent already, upon which assurance the House of Commons by a vote of 183 to 87, refused to grant such concession.

Resolved—That this House regards with indignation and alarm, the refusal of a majority of the House of Commons inspired by the leaders of Government to grant even an inquiry into the grievances of a people second to none in the United Kingdom, for public spirit and intelligence and attachment to the throne—a demand which could not be safely disregarded if made by the smallest corporation in the British Isles, and we believe could not have been refused if the population of Nova Scotia were as great as that of the two Provinces of Ontario and Quebec; and this House emphatically records its deliberate repudiation of the statements of the Under Secretary for the Colonies, that the grievances of Nova Scotia were being rapidly dissipated and that their removal had been effected to a large extent already as utterly untrue, and that so far from the discontent having been dissipated or even subdued, the feeling of hostility against the Act of Confederation has increased and intensified since the address from this House was laid at the foot of the throne.

And whereas, the said Act of Confederation was passed by the Imperial Parliament in direct opposition to and against the wished of the people, and is unjust and oppressive:

Resolved—That the answer of the British Government to the Prayer of this House, based on false promises, is unsatisfactory, and this Assembly again records its solemn protest against the said Act of Confederation, which was a fraud upon the people of this country, and nothing but Imperial coercion can force it to be bound by such Confederation Act.

Resolved—That the representatives of the people of this Province, loyal to their Sovereign, but confident of the justice of their cause, feel bound to use all constitutional means for the restoration of their liberty, peace and prosperity as a colony of the Crown, and in their behalf invoke the sympathy and support of the people of the adjacent Colonies, and the lovers of freedom in every part of the civilized world.

The resolutions were ordered to be printed before any discussion.

Attorney-General Wilkins also submitted a minute of the Executive Council forwarded to the Imperial Government, similar to the resolutions.

Repeal meetings are being held in the country.

A SINGULAR STORY.—The Smith's Falls Review relates the following strange circumstance as having occurred in that village during the visit of Howe's circus to that place! Three years ago Charles Hodgkins, a boy 12 years of age son of Mr. G. C. Hodgkins, painter, disappeared, and, despite the efforts of his parents, not a trace of him could be obtained either dead or alive. A sister of the lost boy attended the circus and noticed a boy in the ring tumbling about with some others, and going through the various antics common in those places, and thinking he bore a very strong resemblance to Charlie she watched him very closely, and was only set first of his identity when she heard his voice. The lad was reclaimed immediately as a matter of course. He had joined the circus a couple of years ago, and has been travelling with it from place to place ever since. So little attention has he paid to places visited that he did not know he was in Smith's Falls or near his parental home.

Provincial Exhibition at Hamilton.

Monday, Sept. 21st. will be devoted to the final meeting of artizan for exhibition, and their proper arrangement. None but Officers and members of the Association, judges, exhibitors, and necessary attendants will be admitted.

Tuesday 22nd.—The judges in all the classes will meet in their respective Committee Rooms at 10 A. M., and will make arrangements to commence their duties.—On receiving their class books, they will be also furnished with the blank prize tickets which they shall fill up and affix in each section as soon as they have finally determined their awards. The First Tickets will be Red; the Second, Blue; the Third, Yellow; the Fourth, White; Horses, Green; the "Highly Commended" and "Commended" Tickets, White. On completing the class, the judges will report to the secretary. The noon Exhibition Building will be closed all this day, for the purpose of affording the judges an opportunity for discharging their duties properly.—Non-members admitted to the grounds on payment of 25 cents each time. The annual meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association will take place at 7 p. m.

Wednesday, 23rd.—The judges of the various classes will complete their awards as early in the day as possible. All the building and grounds will be open to visitors. Admission the same as on Tuesday. The annual meeting of the Mechanics' Institute Association will take place this evening at 7 o'clock.

Thursday, 24th.—Admission tickets 25 cents. The President will deliver his address from the Grand Stand at 3 o'clock. The annual meeting of the Directors of the Provincial Agricultural Association, for the purpose of electing auditors, declaring open the place of holding the next Exhibition, and other business, will take place at 7 p. m., at the Court House, Hamilton.

Friday, 25th.—Admission the same as on previous days. The prize animals will be exhibited in the ring at 10 a. m. At 2 p. m., the exhibition will be considered officially closed, after which no one will be admitted into the Crystal Palace, and exhibitors may commence to take away their property.

Saturday, 26th.—The Treasurer will commence paying the premiums at 9 a. m. Exhibitors will remove all their property from the ground and buildings. The gates will be kept closed as long as necessary, and none will be admitted except those who can show that they have business to attend to.

SUDDEN AND LAMENTABLE DEATH.—The Prescott Telegraph says:—On Thursday, 31st ult., Mrs Edward Deegan, jr., of Prescott, came to her death very suddenly under the following circumstances:—One of her children being sent to the stables for some purpose, returned to the house and told her mother that the horse was struggling with one of its legs over the halter. Mrs. Deegan immediately ran to the stable to relieve the horse, but finding she was unable to do so without cutting the halter, requested her little girl to run into the house for a knife. The child's grandmother accompanied her back to the stable to her mother, where, on entering, they found Mrs. Deegan lying senseless on the floor. The elder Mrs. Deegan threw some cold water on her face, in the hope of reviving her, but unhappily without effect. She then raised her a little and spoke to her again, but the only response was a gurgling in the throat and a groan; and all was over. At first it was supposed that the horse had kicked her or fallen against her in its struggles; but the position in which she was found lying, together with the fact that no external injuries were found on her person, led to the conclusion that death must have been the result of apoplexy caused by the fright or excitement to which she was subjected in her efforts to free the animal's leg from the halter. Dr. Scott, coroner, being absent from town, a regular inquest was deferred till the following day, when a verdict in accordance with the above facts was rendered.

A YOUNG LADY SHOT BY HER LOVER—HIS CONNUTE SUICIDE.—The Harrisburg Telegraph publishes the following particulars of a tragedy at Altoona, Penn.: Thomas Kerbich, of Mechanicsburg, was employed in the Pennsylvania Railroad shops at Altoona, where he labored for a considerable time. He there made the acquaintance of a young lady named Seibert, to whom he became devotedly attached, and finally the two were betrothed, but for some cause Miss Seibert recently saw proper to break the engagement. Merkleis made repeated efforts since to obtain her consent to a union, but without avail. On Friday evening last, he quit work as usual, but did not return next morning. During the forenoon (Saturday) he visited the Seibert family, and obtained a private interview with Miss Seibert. He again endeavored to gain her consent to marry him. She refused, at the same time stating her reason for so doing, whereupon Merkleis drew a pistol, and pointing it at her heart, fired, at the same time declaring that she should not become the wife of any one.—Immediately after firing, he turned the pistol toward his own head and shot himself, producing instant death. Fortunately, Miss Seibert was not fatally wounded, the bullet entering her arm near the shoulder. The tragedy produced great excitement among the people of Altoona, where the parties are well known. It is said that Merkleis had been intoxicated several days before he performed the deed.

THE MOST MAGNIFICENT TABLE IN THE WORLD.—The Evenement Illustre of Paris gives the following details of the silver table ordered for the Sultan: The price will be nearer 6 000,000 francs than 3,000,000 francs, as originally stated. The designs are composed from the ideas and advice of M. Agop, sent by the Sultan to Paris for that purpose, and are splendid. The middle or centre piece represents a Moorish palace two feet six inches high; there are two end-pieces, representing fountains, two triumphal arches, and two end-pieces for flowers, all to be executed in the Alhambra style in massive silver. The length of the table will be about one hundred and forty-eight feet by about sixteen feet broad. Besides the actual cost of the table, a sum of 2,000,000 francs is destined for the purchase of linen, glassware, accompanying furniture, etc. Such a magnificent tout ensemble has probably never before been manufactured.

KASTNER'S DISTILLERY.—Our readers have already been informed of the seizure of this establishment. It was, however, allowed to continue in operation on the deposit of $4,000 to the credit of the Receiver-General, and the security being given for the balance of the appraised value of the plant and stock, in all $5,500. No decision was given in the case until recently, when the authorities decided to exact the full amount as above stated.—We understand Mr. Kastner has paid the balance. It seems hard, if it be the fact, as stated, that those who have a pecuniary interest in securing a condemnation, should themselves be the judges.—Banner.

Another Daring Bond Robbery.

One of the boldest bond robberies ever committed in this city occurred on Thursday afternoon, at the office of the Star Insurance Company, No. 26 Broadway. At the time named Mr Moses H. Bradley, the secretary of the company, was engaged in counting some five-twenty bonds, when a young man entered and enquired for Mr. Abbott, a real estate agent who has a desk room in the office. The Secretary told the man to go to the rear of the room, and at the same time, turned round to show him the desk. As he did so the thief seized a bundle of five-twenty bonds, representing $40,000, from the counter and rushed into the street, pursued by the Secretary. The thief, however, was out of sight in an instant, and all trace of him lost.

The bonds were over 1800's. Their numbers are printed in our advertising columns. The company announce that their surplus is still nearly $45,000, or over twenty per cent of their capital, and that the loss will not impair their standing or credit. The matter has been placed in the hands of the detective police. The company offer a reward of $5 000 for the recovery of the bonds.—N. Y. Post.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 14.—The Adams' express company were robbed of about $7000 this morning. Two men rented an office on the second floor of No. 114 Second street yesterday and put up a sign B. F. Goodrich & Co. By last night's express train the company received a package from Odra, Illinois, addressed to above purporting to contain 147 dollars and 70c. This morning the package was delivered by the messenger who while waiting for a receipt was seized by the throat by a man in the office, and another applied chloroform to him. The messenger struggled violently, and not yielding readily to the influence of the chloroform was struck three heavy blows on the head with a heavy iron bar and knocked over senseless. The robbers then rifled the messenger's pocket of the contents and escaped. The package was no doubt a bogus one, and the whole affair a put up job. No clue has been obtained to the robbers, the messenger is badly hurt.

LONDON, August 15, evening.—Further advices from Tipperary, Ireland, have been received this evening. The agent of the land-lord, Mr. Scully, was not killed as at first reported. He endeavored on Tuesday to serve fifteen ejectment notices upon several tenants in the vicinity of the City of Tipperary, when he was attacked by a large body of them, including many women, and was obliged to flee into the city to save his life. Yesterday he started again upon the same errand, accompanied by a large body of well armed police. Upon reaching the locality of the tenantry his efforts to serve the notices were met with derision and threats of violence. The police endeavored to disperse the mob, when a fierce fight ensued, during which the police fired upon the rioters several times, the shots being returned by some of the crowd. Several of the mob were wounded, as were a number of the police. Mr. Scully was seriously wounded, and the police retired unable to make any arrests at the time. The city of Tipperary is in a high state of excitement, and further troubles are apprehended.

A MOUNTAIN ON FIRE IN WALES.—The magnificent spectacle has been visible from Wrexham and neighborhood every night for the past week of a mountain on fire. The scene of the conflagration is Cwmdig, where a spur of the Eglwyseg mountains abuts on the village of Rhosllanerchrugog, and during the darkness of the night the flames, rising to the height of several yards, illuminate the horizon and are visible for miles. A number of men are engaged night and day in beating back the flames, and endeavouring to prevent the further spread of the fire,—an extremely difficult task, on account of the dryness of the weather and the almost total absence, at present, of water in the neighborhood. The fire commenced on Monday, the 6th instant, and swept with extreme rapidity, consuming grouse, moorfowl, and great quantities of game, and scaring sheep to scatter in great hosts, and now extends over a surface embraced in a circumference of about nine miles.

SPECIE STORY.—A few days ago Mrs Wm. Lawrence of Edwardsburgh, was breaking some hen's eggs to cook she found curled up in the white of one of them, with its mouth to the yolk, a reptile, exactly resembling, if it was not in reality, a young snake. On removing it from the egg the animal uncoiled itself but showed no further signs of life. It measured about nine inches in length, was about half the thickness of a pipe stem. The fact of the animal's discovery in the egg, as described, is attested by several respectable persons who saw the egg whence it was taken. How it came there is a question for the savans to answer since this strange discovery eggs have been somewhat at a discount in the neighbourhood where it took place.

At Beaverton Division Court, a case, Lowes vs. Lennox, excited attention. It appears that plaintiff practices medicine without the necessary legal qualifications, and that the defendant, who had been billed for services rendered refused to pay, availing himself of a clause in the Medical Act. The judge summed up in favor of the defendant, but the jury thought the services were worth something and gave a verdict for plaintiff.

The Sarnia Observer says, Cornelius Masten, aged 23 years, height, 6 feet 1 inch, weight, 175 lbs., born county Hastings, on Tuesday, 6th August, cut eight acres of oats, containing 3,100 sheaves, on Lot No. 8, 1st Con. Township of Plympton. He began half an hour after sunrise, and finished half an hour after sundown, taking 1½ hours for meals.

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—An unfounded rumor was circulated to-day about ten thousand Fenians having congregated at Ogdensburg, and military preparations were made to oppose their landing. The story probably originated from the fact that the authorities have doubled the guard on the jail where Whalen and his associates are confined.

The Pall Mall Gazette gives an account of a wedding lately celebrated with ritualistic ceremonies. The priests changed their vestments five times during the service, each successive costume being more gorgeous and theatrical than the last. Four hymns were sung and the alter bloomed resplendently in white roses and orange blossoms.

A cyclone is on foot in Toronto for brigading the Volunteer Cavalry and Artillery in the three military divisions adjoining Toronto in this city during September. The camp will include four field batteries of artillery and 3 troops of cavalry. The officers of the regular army are to have command.

On Saturday last the Rev. W. Morley Punshon, the eminent Wesleyan Divine was married at the residence of the Rev. Dr. Ryerson. The lady arrived on Tuesday last from England Mr Punshon was a widower and the wife he had just taken to sister to his former wife.

Dr. Penny has at last joined the Church of Rome badly. In spite of he has belonged to that communion for some time, and all his Benedictine friends are sending to the same direction.

The Present Government a Failure.

During the late election contest we were told that there were no party lines in Canadian politics; that the great dividing lines had been demolished; that there were no questions of importance before the country; that the only matter that remained to be attended to was the consummation of the great Confederation scheme, and that it would require the master minds of the promoters to fully inaugurate and settle the matter. In vain was it urged that all that ever John A. McDonald, Cartier & Co. undertook, when not controlled by superior minds, turned out a failure, and that it was folly, nay madness, to expect that they would change their ways or do any better than heretofore. We were met with the cry of "faction" on every side, and that our only object was to remove the superior (?) statesman, J. A., at a time when all his wisdom and political acumen were required.

By these cries and the free use of money a lease of a few years more was added to the maladministration of those very men whom the country had for many years detested, and under whose mismanagement the country had long groaned. But now, more than ever, is it manifest that the McDonald-Cartier Government is a grand failure. The country is no better than before Confederation. The wisdom of that pessimal statesman, W. McDougall, aided by the cunning of Sir John A. has failed to peacefully and satisfactorily inaugurate confederation, as is evident from the state of Nova Scotia at the present time. John A. has returned to Ottawa, satisfied that the blue noses are not to be galled as the Upper Canadians have been. In vain have been his promises and his entreaties in pacifying the Acadia. They have heard of him by the hearing of the ear in their own land, and they dread any connexion with a people who have mismanaged their own affairs and promise fair to disorganize the affairs of Nova Scotia. The people of the maritime provinces expected that union would lighten their burden of the taxation; instead of that they find that extravagance prevails in high places; that recklessness characterizes every action; that selfishness rules supreme, the only object being retention of office, and they have seen, too, that to remain in the confederation will entail complete subordination to Lower Canada, as Cartier controls J. A. and he the Tory party, and hence the cry for independence from one end of Nova Scotia to the other. In every way we look at the present government we are forced to the conclusion that it is a grand failure, and that the sooner the Country gets rid of the present men the better. The greatest nuisance in politics could ruin the ship of state on the rocks of discontent and rebellion, no more fearlessly or ignorantly than do these practical statesmen. As to the debt of the Dominion we have had many a sad story — waste, extravagance, bribery, drunkenness and idleness have been the theme of public discussion for many years—while our debt was increasing at a fearful yearly rate. Now that the Intercolonial Railway is to be saddled on the country, and that it has been given into the hands of the same prodigals we may expect a fearful increase within the next two or three years. The fifteen millions will be doubled before the whole is completed, and then we shall have the sang little sum of almost $130,000,000 of a net-coal debt. The country has been conquered as the shelving of Scotland in the Ignominious way it was done, but it would be well if the present fry of politicians were all shelved, and better men in their place.

OUR RAILROAD.

The Council met in special session last night to consider a By-law granting leave to continue the Port Hope Road along the canal to which it is to the foot of "Smith's town," hill, and then to diverge towards the river, crossing somewhere near Blythe Mill-Sherrill Hall, Mr. Rose, Mr. Kingan and several others appeared before the Council petitioning that the By law be not passed until parties living on that street be sufficiently protected to prevent the necessity of going to law to obtain indemnity for the injury done to their property. The Sherrill supposed himself willing to allow the Council to appoint an arbitrator, the Company one, and these name the third one. Mr. Smith in behalf of the Company declared that the Company would enter into no such arrangements. They would build the road but nothing more. Mr. Clanston, as Director of the road, intimated that the Company were not able to pay damages, and that if they were asked for any they would do no more, they would stop work. It thus appears that the Company are about to put on the screws again. They have agreed to build the road to Lakefield; they know that the town requires it to go to Mud Lake. It is held out that if the town aids they will go to Mud Lake, and at the start they ask to be freed from the justice of paying for damages to property that they pass through or near, as much as to say the town should do it if they want a road. It is believed that $10,000 would not meet the damages, hence we must pay $10,000 to get the road to Lakefield, and then they will tell us: it is not our interest to go to the Lake; if you build the road we will run it for you. It is not our interest to stop at Lakefield, nor even to go there unless it goes to the Lake also, and if the Company does not guarantee that the road will be extended to Mud Lake in a year or so, we cannot see the propriety of the town taking the first step in the matter. The town should have the guarantee that the road will go to Mud Lake, before it does anything. The interest of private parties should be fully secured also. Messrs. W. Hall, Jas. Edwards and J. English have been appointed to make an estimate of the damages likely to be done.

FIRE IN ASHBURNHAM.

On Saturday morning about 1 o'clock, a house in Ashburnham, used as a tavern but not occupied at present, a dwelling house of Mr. Mowry, but occupied by Mr. G. Brook, and Mr. John Clarke's tannery, and the stables and sheds attached to all these buildings were consumed by fire. The fire when first seen, was in the stables belonging to the tavern and then had made considerable headway. The stables being close to the stable and shed of Mr. Brook, soon communicated the flames to those buildings and also to the house in which Mr. Brook lived; Mr. B's family being fast asleep at the time. They were aroused just in time to save the horse from being burned in the stable and to get their furniture out but much damaged. The dwelling was completely gutted, leaving nothing but the brick walls standing; the north wall, however, is much damaged. Mr. Clark's tannery was also consumed. The flames had got too far before any one arrived, to permit of saving it; considerable dressed and undressed skins were also burned. Mr. Mowry's own dwelling and Mr. Clark's dwelling were in great danger, but by the exertion of the people were saved. Mr. Mowry's foreman also appeared in danger for a time, but the Firemen so deadened the force of the flames, and the application of water to the roof of the foundry prevented damage. Mr. Calcutt's flax mill was also saved by the timely arrival of the Firemen and engine.

The loss may be summed up thus:—The tavern, stables and shed, about $1,500; owned by Joseph Sedgwick. Mr. Mowry's loss is about $1,500; insured in the for $1,000. Mr. Clark's loss he considers about $3,000; insured for $1,400 in the Royal and Ætna. Total loss about $6,000; total insured, $2400.

THE HAPPY FAMILY.

When rogues fall out honest men get their own is a very common saying, and carries the impress of truth about it. By to-day's issue it will be seen that our Conservative friends of the County are not of one mind politically or otherwise. Mr. Fitzgerald claims to be the leader of Catholic Conservatives; "no Conservative" stamps him of his peacock feathers, reducing him to a mere "jackdaw," and puts in a plea for Messrs. Moloney, Doherty, Tierney and McDonald.

For our own part we are not in Conservative regrets, but the present little buss will cause them to let out a few things; we must say that we think a "Conservative" uses too strong language, but to the "happy family" have a fling. We get into the spring of action,—J. A. speaks to Bishop Horan; Bishop to the many Priests; the Priests to the loud mouthed demagogues, and all fall into line, close and firm! We advise them to be moderate now. Although we have inserted the communication of a "Conservative," we are inclined to disagree with him in some particulars. We can hardly imagine that Bishop Horan and Priest Kelly allow themselves to be used as cats paws by either Mr. Fitzgerald or any other individual. It is possible for both Bishop Horan and the Rev. Mr. Kelly to be conservative in principle without being actuated by the motives attributed to them by a "Conservative."

A Number of Robbers taken in Toronto.

The Toronto police, aided by U. S. detectives, have succeeded in securing 11 persons said to be implicated directly or otherwise in several extensive express robberies in the United States. These robbers and burglars were living in affluence and grandeur in Toronto, some keeping hotels and some even living in furnished houses for which they were paying $100 per month. Their wives or reputed wives, too, were ladies, one of whom had no less than six diamond rings, and other valuables obtained, no doubt, by rooting. An application has been made for their extradition. The case is postponed till Thursday, to enable the prosecutors to procure witnesses from New York and other places. Let us hope that of guilty they will get their due.

FENCE.—Mr. James Brown, of Smith, hired a fence on Saturday on George street. The fence can have it by applying at Stratton & Armstrong's Book Store.

We have been requested to state that the Agamemnon School Literary Society will meet on Friday evening, 21st inst., in the Union School building.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening. The Mayor in the chair. Present—Messrs. Kemshly, Burnham, English, S. Dickson, Clanston, Stevenson, Chamberlain, Towle, J. Dickson and Wrightson.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read over and confirmed.

An opinion from Mr. Weller on the liability of the university Lands to pay taxes was read by the Clerk. He was instructed to forward a copy of the opinion to the Bursar.

Estimates from the Town Commissioners showing the amounts required from the Town for the present year, also, from the Trustees of the Union School with the amount required for the Grammar and Common Schools for 1868: For the Grammar School Board $670; for the Common School $2100. The documents were received.

Petitions were received from Mrs. Knox, asking for the refunding of taxes for 1867; referred to the Finance committee. From Lazarus Payne, William Logan and others, asking for improvements upon streets; referred to the Committee on Streets and Bridges.

Accounts from Thomas Collins, for pails, $6.00; R. Kingan, for pails, $2.34; A. Dobbin, water, $3.50; R. Romaine, $72.87; prisoners' board, $1.92½, were all referred to the Finance committee.

A report from the Committee on Finance and Assessment, showing the amounts required for the several items of expenditure for the current year, and recommending the rate of 21 mills on the dollar, was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Towle, the By-law for striking the rate for this year was read a first time. It was also read a second and third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Burnham, a By-law was introduced to authorize the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company, and their Lessee, to continue and construct their railway upon, along and across certain lands and streets in the Town, was read a first time.

The Council went into comittee of the whole on the By-law, after some discussion. Moved by Mr. Towle, seconded by Mr. Scott, That this committee do now rise and that the Mayor be instructed to refer the By-law now under consideration to James F. Dennistoun, Esq., for the opinion as to the proper method of framing said By-law to protect the interest of persons sustaining damages by the railroad through and beyond the northern limits of this Town, and whether it would be competent for this Council to appoint one arbitrator and the Railway Company the other, and these appoint a third. And whether the said By-law as it now is would sufficiently protect the interest of the above named parties.—Carried.

The Committee arose and the Council resumed.

Moved by Mr. Clanston, seconded by Mr. Dixon, That Messrs. Helm, English, and Doherty be a special committee for the purpose of selecting a site for a building to be erected to be used as a public store house or magazine, for storing powder, and recommending plans to be submitted to this Council, with estimates of the cost of said building.

The Council adjourned to meet on Wednesday next.

ASHBURNHAM.

The Council met on Monday evening. All the members present but Mr. McGregor.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Accounts of J. Craig, Craigie & Stephenson, P. Clancy and J. Stratton were ordered to be paid.

The rate for the year was fixed at one cent on the dollar, and a By-law passed to provide for levying and collecting it.

Mr. Ingram was re-appointed collector.

A By-law was passed to amend By-law No. 38, and to provide for collecting and paying 25 cents to every person that would deliver up to the pound keeper any pig found running at large.

The fleece was directed to make enquiry as to the cost of getting a map of the plan of the whole village, and also to make enquiry as to a certain lot 18 east of Stewart street that had been sold for taxes.

The Council adjourned.

The following are the estimates for the Town of Peterboro for the year 1868:

FENIANS AGAIN.—The Globe has information that it considers reliable, to the effect that the Fenians are again preparing quietly to enter Canada simultaneously as. This time they are doing things exactly; however, we need not fear much. We were never better prepared to receive them and can be to them if they attempt it. Some demonstrations are necessary to enable the rulers to raise funds, and we think this all that is intended. They cannot have the slightest idea that they can take Canada; if they get greenbacks enough to support their bosses they will never try to take it.

A DEPLORABLE ACCIDENT.—Lately, at Rochester, during a performance at Lang's Opera House, some lads, in their eagerness to see what was going on, took hold of the gas-pipes which broke. Some one then foolishly shouted fire, when a regular panic took place which resulted in the death of 26 persons, a large number severely injured, and several fatally. No correction of the newspapers who spread across the people, although there was no real danger but they taken a body more calm.

TITLES OF HONOR.

The following order of the Privy Council of England is published in Saturday's official Gazette:—

In consequence of the Confederation of the British Provinces, some members of the former Canadian Union have been pleased to approve of the adoption of the following regulations:—

1st. The Governor General of Canada to be styled "His Excellency."

2nd. The Lieut.-Governors of the Provinces to be styled "His Honor."

3rd. The Privy Councillors of Canada to be styled "Honorable" for life.

4th. Senators of Canada to be styled "Honorable," but only during their term of office, and the title not to be continued afterwards.

5th. The Executive Councillors of the Provinces to be styled "Honorable," but only while in office, and the title not to be continued afterwards.

6th. The Legislative Councillors in the Provinces are not in future to have that title, but gentlemen who were Legislative Councillors at the time of the Union are to retain their title for life.

7th. The President of the Legislative Council in the Provinces to be styled "Honorable" during office.

8th. The Speaker of the House of Assembly in the Provinces to be styled "Honorable" during office.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) BUCKINGHAM AND CHANDOS.

The settling of distinction by Imperial authority does not give satisfaction in any quarter; even Tory journalists are not pleased with the regulations. It does seem strange that the Secretary for the Colonies could not permit Canadians to adopt what titles they think best, or to retain the distinctions and usages that existed before Confederation. Intermeddling with such little things will only cause agitation and dissatisfaction. But, perhaps, this has been done at the solicitation of our statesmen. It savors of the doings of little minds, perhaps to annoy Mr. Howland.

FIREMEN'S PIC-NIC.—The Firemen are to have their annual pic nic on Thursday, the 27th instant. The steamer Forest City is to come for the party to the Locks and to bring them back again. They intend spending the day on some of the islands of Rice Lake. The trip will be a pleasant one. the scenery delightful, the company pleasant, and we have no doubt but that there will be a large "turn out." The tickets are only $1 for Gentlemen; Ladies, all free, but it is understood that they furnish refreshments.

ANOTHER FASHIONABLE WEDDING.—Our flourishing town has been favored with another of those fashionable weddings. The lucky gentleman was Egerton Ryerson Howie, M. D., of Peterboro, who led Miss Minnie Caiswe to the hymenial altar on Tuesday last. The nuptial ceremonies were performed in the Roman Catholic church here, after which, we learn, the happy pair left on their wedding tour.

BE YE READY.—Major Kennedy has shown an order from military quarters in which he is commanded to warn the officers and men of this battalion to keep themselves in readiness to move at a moment's notice for the next two months. This means somewhat of a move among the Fenians. O, that they may get a warm reception if they venture over. We think they will hardly venture.

THE BAND.—We have been requested to state that the Band will until further notice, practice on Thursday evenings in the Drill shed, instead of in front of the Court House. This change is owing to the shortness of time before darkness sets in, and the damp weather.

PUBLIC HOLIDAY.—The Mayor has issued his proclamation, appointing Thursday, the 27th instant as a holiday. The merchants have agreed to shut up for the day, and there are active preparations for a day of recreation.

DEATH OR TAVERNS.—Detective Mason had 35 writs issued against tavern keepers for selling liquor contrary to the Statute, during the West York election. He expects to clear about $7,000 out of the affair.

Holcomb Post Office, in Belmont, is closed. Letters for parties in the same locality should be addressed to "Blairton" P. O., which is only two or three miles from the old Post Office.

It was reported that a man was dismissed from the Globe office for refusing to work on Sunday. The Globe says it is false, and that no Sunday work is required at the Globe office.

A man named Evans shot his wife on Thursday last in Toronto; they were both drunk at the time. She died a day or two after. He has been committed for trial for murder.

FIRE IN WATERY.—On the 16th instant, Brown & Patterson's laundry was burned. The loss is about $30,000; there is an insurance of about $11,000.

North Monaghan Council.

North Monaghan, Aug. 6, 1868.

The Council met at 10 o'clock a. m. All the members present, the Reeve in the chair—Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. Laing.—That the tender of Mr. Duncan Stelfox sen. for repairing the Town Hall be accepted for the sum of $200, and the Reeve be requested to get the agreement signed by the contractor and by two good and sufficient sureties.

A By-law was passed to authorize the levying and collecting the sum of $1,646 63 for general county purposes on the rateable property of the Municipality.

Also, a By-law was passed to raise the sum of $800 for Township purposes for the present year.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES ESTIMATES.

A By-law was passed to levy the following amounts on the several School Sections within the Municipality

On No. 1 School Section			$160
On No. 2	do	do	240
On No. 3	do	do	160
On No. 4	do	do	77 56
			637 56

The clerk was authorized to convey the decision of Council to Colonel Prentiss with the request that the sum of ten dollars granted by the Council, to assist him to settle the account of Dr. Kincaid for medicine and medical attendance to the late Nancy Bell. An order was given on the Treasurer for the sum of $6, to Elias Scrabbon, Esq., for drawing upon Sentence and agreement for repairing the Town Hall.—An order was given to the treasurer, in favor of Robt. Reynolds, Esq., for $2.75 for advertising notices and blanks.

Moved by Mr. Laing, Seconded by Mr. Tully, —That Messrs. Young, Robson and Storey be appointed a Committee to superintend the repairing of the Town Hall as it progresses, and when completed to call on an experienced person or carpenter to inspect the same if they see it necessary.

The Council will next meet on the 15th day of October next at 10 o'clock a. m.

JOHN TULLY,
Township Clerk.

Mr. Fitzgerald's Letter, or a Shirt for Peg.

To the Editor of the Examiner

SIR,—You will confer a great favor by inserting the enclosed. As Mr Fitzgerald's letter appeared in your columns, I should prefer answering it through the same.

A CONSERVATIVE.

SIR,—From a similar feeling, doubtless, to that which guided others, I have refrained till now from any public rejoinder to the extraordinary letter copied in the Examiner of the 5th instant from the Catholic Standard of the 3rd ultimo, over the signature of James W. Fitzgerald. My first impulse was to inquire who this Mr. Jas. W. Fitzgerald was, to whom Conservatives, according to himself, were so much indebted. On inquiry I find that an individual of obscure antecedents, bearing the above name, settled in this town a few years ago. It is not necessary to my purpose to trace the history of this individual more his advent here, suffice it to say that so far as the world and its good things go he has fared pretty well. It is now about fourteen years since Sir John Alexander McDonald obtained control of the political affairs of this country, and from that time to the present one of the most faithful of his supporters has been the Roman Catholic Bishop of Kingston. The statesman's success has been great and the patronage at his disposal has been dealt out in no niggardly spirit so far as the Bishop is concerned, and when a request was made that this man, Fitzgerald, should receive employment, it was granted, and continued to a late period previous to the last general election. The amount of government patronage received by him within the last few years cannot fall short of $50,000, and yet although there were many amongst ourselves more efficient and more worthy, no one grumbled, as it was done to please the Bishop and the Rev. Mr. Kelly of this place, who have proved themselves faithful allies of the Conservative party, so much so that notwithstanding the cries and clamor of republican demagogues and close grit fanatics, the Catholic vote in the diocese of Kingston has been invariably cast, with the exception of a few malcontents, in favor of the party created by the great Conservative leader.

As Protestants and Conservatives we never complained of the amount of patronage granted to the man Fitzgerald, knowing, as we did, that it was a part of the price we had to pay for the Roman Catholic vote of this county; nor could we now complain were it not for the insatiate craving of this pot-hunting politician. A certain king once exclaimed—"My kingdom for a horse!" and in a similar spirit this man says to the members of this county, a survey or your seats! Mr. F. would have the public believe that he controls the Catholic vote of this county. Pshaw! we don't believe a word of it, we know better; in fact, we know that his name is disagreeably odorous in the nostrils of the Catholic electors of the county as far as he is known, and that is not very far. It is simply a piece of impudent humbug on the part of this man to say that his advocacy has served the Conservative cause in this county. Will he tell us how many days and nights he spent in Catholic Emissories? Why, the fact is, he only appeared in the township about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the second day of the election, in company with a man named Cooney, one Monaghan and one or two others, and only five or six votes were polled after their arrival, so that this electioneering missionary could not have accomplished much. Surely Mr. F. cannot have forgotten that his presence at Emismore was the reverse of advantageous, even amongst his own co-religionists, and that it was owing to the influence of a Protestant Conservative that he escaped rough treatment at their hands. There is no need of mincing matters, were it not for the influence of Messrs. W. A. Scott and G. Brownlee and the "pocketful of rocks" [illegible] with them, the visit of Fenianite was last to the Conservative party. It is reported that after his arrival Mr F made a private letter and an original one at that, viz: to take forcible possession of the "poll books" and enter therein the names of a number of bogus votes. His proposa. it is said was jeered for his among other reasons that Mr. P. M. Sullivan, returning officer, a man whom all classes respect and have confidence in, could not be approached with any such view. This movement on the part of Mr. Fitzgerald was the Alpha and Omega of his political services in Catholic Emismore. The Protestant Conservatives of Peterboro do not forget, however, that to Messrs Maloney, Doherty, Tierny, and McDonald is due much credit, either of whom is a host in himself, and I feel quite certain that each and all will admit I am justified in resenting the impudent pretentions of this Mr. Fitzgerald. His letter implies a covert threat of desertion on the part of Catholics from the Conservative standard. Sah! when the occasion arrives it will only be necessary for Sir John A. to intimate his wishes to the Bishop of Kingston and there will be an end of the base, loose bombast of this political huckster.—Does he imagine that the Bishop who is so much indebted to Sir John will play shilly shally and steal fly himself at his bidding and throw the Catholic vote of this county into the arms of George Brown and his grit faction? We don't believe it, Bishop Horan can obtain no better terms from any other political quarter and he knows it. It will be well, therefore, for this rain nonentity Mr. Fitzgerald to save his breath and remember that there is a wheel within a wheel. Sir John A. Macdonald and his Government will doubtless be as generous to their friends as formerly, but they may take it into their heads that somebody more worthy of their generosity than this Mr. James Fitzgerald should be chosen. A word to the wise is sufficient. Failing to obtain employment on the Intercolonial Railway or to get a survey, Mr. Fitzgerald mounts the high Catholic horse and blazes away at the Orangemen. Now, the Conservatives of this County are no more Orange than they were a year or two ago, during the heyday of his profitable employment under the Government of Sir John A.; and it is fair to presume that if it were found convenient or politic to employ him now he would have no more fault to find with us than he had formerly in fact he would be the same loud-mouthed advocate of Conservative principles that he was in days of yore. But he has no survey now and that makes all the difference.

It is a terrible thing in the opinion of Mr. Fitzgerald that the Orangemen of this county should be permitted to hold a dinner in the Drill Shed. Now, sir, was it not in bad taste on his part to utter the impudent twaddle contained in his letter. He came to this Protestant County a mere adventurer. He has been favored to an extent that no Protestant here has been, and yet he has the impudence to complain that the Orangemen, those who fought to preserve his bread and butter for him, should be allowed the use of a building, mainly erected by themselves, on a festive occasion. Mr. Fitzgerald should think coolly on the subject. Protestants compose a large majority of the people of this county, and Protestant Conservatives have dealt liberally by him. They gave him money and position when he had neither, and have a right to expect at least impunity from his upstart insolence. For the services rendered to our party he at all events has been well paid, and notwithstanding his "blustering" letter, when another election comes, and the Bishop issues his mandate, he will dance into the traces as become a docile son of the church, in fact he cannot do otherwise. Will the jackall d

Wright, called him to account for it. He said that he had no belief in Christianity. I do not applaud in a man who has no belief in the doctrines of his church.

Michael Doyle was then examined for the defence, and deposed—I am brother of the deceased. I was in the chapel on the 31st of June last. Tim priest, after saying some things concerning belligerent collections, proceeded to the boys that had done our dancing three o'clock service on Sunday forenight. My brother Patrick said—"Your reverence, I thought there was only one boy went out." The Rev. Mr. Hughes then said—"You are a boy, a byp over one Pharaoh. I thought you had some religion but you have none." My brother then said that there was only one of the boys went out, and that it was the priest who was telling the lie. The priest then replied—"I have known you to tell many lies." My brother said—"You are not ever here to ridicule but to preach the Gospel. His reverence then read the Gospel and was again more rowing to recall my brother, when my brother replied that he could not sit to hear himself ridiculed in the chapel, and then took his hat and walked out.

This concluded the evidence on both sides.

After a brief consultation the Bench ordered Patrick Doyle to pay a fine of 10s. and 51 costs. Notice of appeal was given.

The Fenians Again.—We have positive information that extensive preparations are being made on the other side of the lines for a Fenian raid. When and where the attempt is to be made we have not yet been specifically informed, but it is probable the reports of a simultaneous movement on the Niagara and Chateauguay frontiers are not far from the truth. It is possible that the movement may altogether fail from the interference of the American Government or its own weakness, but we must believe that the Government will have everything in readiness. The Volunteers are in admirable condition. We hope that a force will be placed early on the frontier, so that the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals may be rendered safe from attack.—Globe, 18th inst.

Marksmen in the Army.—A marksman instructor in the army thus writes:—"I believe no generally given by the National Rifle Association this year, to be competed for by the picked marksmen of regiments, have done. I trust, much good in showing how greatly inferior in skill our best shots are to those of the volunteer force. It may, with a certain degree of truth, I know, be answered that they have not an equal amount of practice, but I am very much mistaken if any two representative men of regiments who shot on Tuesday last not pre viously expended many rounds in preparation for the contest on their regimental ranges. Eve y one, however, who watched the firing could see at a glance that what our marksmen want is more science.—"They're not just acquaint with the wind," I heard one of the British eight r mark, who was keeping a register, as shot after shot just missed the edge of the target. It has been in fashion of late to run down the great efforts made by General Hay to spread the crude knowledge to marksm ship, but the need was never more shown than on Tuesday, when a score of 31 points (only one point over an average of centres) stands first as the performance of the best man out of some 300 picked men. Compare this with such shooting as that of the gentleman in the volunteers, who with what is considered an inferior weapon, scored some 14 successive bull's eyes at 500 yards, and it could seem that as yet we have done too little and not too much to train our army in the use of their rifles.

Primitive Methodist.—The Church in Canada contains 70 travelling preachers, 290 local preachers, 807 class-leaders, 805 Sabbath-school teachers, 7,073 church-members, and has expended during the year nearly $21,000, in addition to all the expenses resulting from keeping open 162 Connexional churches and 183 other preaching places.——Rev. G. Watson, of Brant, was recently visited by a party of his friends, who, in addition to other necessaries, presented him with a purse of $16.—The church at Caledonia, after being closed a short time while undergoing repairs, was reopened on the 6th July. $70 were subscribed at the meeting. On the 14th July the friends of Rev. J. Edgar, of Toronto, presented him with an address and a purse of $210.—The Sabbath-school Teachers' Association of the Toronto Circuit held a meeting on the 9th July. The Association embraces several schools, with about 140 teachers and 1,000 scholars.

London, August 18.—Despatches have just been received from Ireland giving the particulars of deeds of lawlessness which occurred yesterday near Tipperary. It seems that while one of the great landlords of that region named Mr. Scully was serving the usual notices on his various tenants, he was shot and killed by some party unknown. A strong body of police soon after made their appearance at the scene of the murder, and attempted to arrest the culprit. The police in turn were fiercely attacked and two of them shot dead, and four badly wounded. Several arrests were subsequently made. At the latest advices quiet had been restored.

Death Through Somnambulism.—Early on Friday morning last, Mr. Charles Draycott, proprietor of the 'Star' Inn, Front Street in this city, came to his death by falling from a window of a Clifton House, Niagara Falls. Draycott was a man weighing about 200 pounds, and while in a state of somnambulism walked out of the window, and fell about fifteen feet. Owing to his heavy weight, the fall, although not a very high one, proved fatal. One leg and an arm were broken, and he received severe internal injuries, which resulted in his death on Saturday morning.

Sad Death of a Catholic Bishop.—In Louisville, Ky., on Monday night, a messenger went over the bed in which Bishop B. J. Spalding, of the Catholic Church, was sleeping, accidently a night fire. In trying to extinguish the flames his clothes ignited, and before assistance could reach him he was so seriously burned that he died on Tuesday evening. Bishop Spalding has for a number of years been connected with the Catholic Church in that city, and his sudden death cast a gloom over the whole city.

Fatal Accident with a Gun.—The Ottawa Times records another of those fatal accidents that occur from the use of fire-arms. On Friday morning about three miles from Bell's Corners, James Suart, going or having been out shooting, laid the gun down near the door and on taking it up the hammer way hitched on the door step when it went off and the charge entered the side of the unfortunate man and passed up through the thorax. We were informed that the author died of the wound.

The Cattle Disease.—It is not believed here by the health authorities that the cattle pestilence is at an end, as the period of incubation of the disease extends from ten to thirty days, and it is feared that it will again make its appearance in a few days.—Fifty-four infected cattle have been destroyed in all, of the war place, some thirteen miles up the Hudson river. One of the health board has gone up to inspect and have them slaughtered if necessary.—N. Y. Paper.

The public are cautioned against taking counterfeit shillings. A number of English shillings of the present reign are in circulation, which are so skillfully executed that they would be readily taken by an expert when tendered with numbers of the genuine and the inexperienced would readily receive the single coin without suspicion. A slightly slippery surface and a distrust in the mining is the most conspicuous evidence by which it can be detected.—Ottawa Citizen.

Methodist New Connexion.—In the minutes of the Seventh Annual Conference, the membership is reported at 8,620; hearers, 34,765; Ministers on; local preachers, 126; Sunday-schools, 152, with 6,006 scholars, and 966 teachers. Value of church and parsonage property, $200,120. There are also chapels, 13 parsonages, and 126 [illegible]

On Thursday a gentle near Georgetown started to burn a fallow from which the fire extended to the woods, burning about 300 acres of timber on the premises of Messrs. Parker Brothers, Kennedy and Livingston. Green there at one time were apprehended that Georgetown would become a prey to the devouring element. The inhabitants turned out en masse, the scene being all absorbing, and by almost superhuman efforts succeeded in arresting its progress while crossing a field towards the village, burning the grass and leaving the field like a burned prairie. The fire is still raging in the woods, but the village is no longer in danger.

Some time since the Catholic young men of Toronto sent an address of sympathy to the Pope. A reply to this has been received by the Bishop of Toronto from the Sovereign Pontiff, which thus commences:—"The meeting of the young men of your Episcopal city, held be you, and the sentiments of extreme piety expressed therein, which were a source of great consolation to us in the midst of the heat of battle now waging against the Church."

Fires in the Woods near Stratford and Mitchell.—Fires were raging in the woods in the vicinity of Stratford and Mitchell on Saturday evening. Many of the farmers were obliged to plough up the edges of their grain fields in order to save them from a conflagration. A very heavy shower fell during the course of the evening and somewhat managed the devouring element, but not before considerable damage had been sustained.

A seven thousand dollar internal revenue stamp was placed on a seven million dollar mortgage executed at St. Louis on Monday. Such a stamp is rarely met with on a single document.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear boards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

The Erie Canal.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1867 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and undeniably fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the mind of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, occasional constipation, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, heatiness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It effectually removes the thickening appendages, by removing from the air-cells the consolidate lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, poltoning the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore has been to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, while hoses the sufferers, to avoid both see "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Oscillating Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., proprietors for the Canadas. Sold by all Medicine Dealers. 18

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad heat in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of, but nothing could I find the Vegetine Sarsaparilla. It soon effected a permanent cure."

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1868.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters, should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This Well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and sure remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

A MATCH.

There is a story going the rounds of the boudoirs of Paris, about a handsome man of fifty years of age, well preserved, and with only one infirmity—he had a glass eye. It was a misfortune, but things are so well managed now a days that no one noticed it.

One evening having no other engagement he accepted an invitation to a reception at Madame Saint Ildefonse de Perseverition. My hero went to the ball, passed a charming evening, and devoted himself exclusively to a beautiful young blonde who attracted the attention of all the company.

Shall I confess it? He fell so in love with the young lady at first sight, that he made her an offer on the spot. After a few instants of reflection, and some preliminaries relating to the contract, the marriage was arranged, and celebrated in time.

When he entered the nuptial chamber he extinguished the light. A glass of water was on the table by the bedside, he dropped his eye into it.

The next morning as soon as it was light, our handsome bridegroom reached forth his arm, seized the cherished orb, and replaced it in its cherished orbit. As soon as he was dressed he went to see a friend in town. On seeing him, his friend gave a cry of surprise.

'Perhaps you find me changed,' said our friend; 'it is my business—think of it, my friend, I am married to the most delicious blonde—such hair! such eyes!'

'Blue eyes?'

'Of course, as she is blonde. If you could only see her eyes!'

'I see one of them now, and if your memory does not fail you, you have only to look in the glass to see her eye before you!'

The bridegroom trembled. He rushed to the mirror. Oh horrors!—his right eye was black and full of fire, but his left eye was blue, languishing and tender.

In the glass of water were two eyes, but they did not belong to the same person. The newly married couple separated, without vilifying each other, but not without having first changed eyes.

Beginning to Believe.

"Bubbles," of the California Golden Era, says:

I begin to believe, now-a-days, that money makes the man, and dress the gentleman.

I begin to believe that those who sin the most during the week are the most devout upon Sunday.

I begin to believe that honesty is the best of policy—to speculate with until you have gained everybody's confidence, and then lose your pockets.

I begin to believe in humbugging people out of their dollars. It is not stealing nor begging, and those who are humbugged have themselves to blame.

I begin to believe that a man was not made to enjoy life, but to keep himself miserable in the pursuit and possession of riches.

I begin to believe that the surest remedy for hard times and a tight money market is an extravagant expenditure on the part of the individual—to keep money moving.

I begin to believe that a pianoforte is more necessary in a family than bread and meat.

WAY TO ELOQUENCE.—I owe my success in life to one single fact, namely: At the age of twenty seven I commenced, and continued for years the process of daily reading and speaking upon the contents of some historical or scientific book. These off-hand efforts were made sometimes in a corn field, at others in the forest, and not unfrequently in some distant barn, with the horses and oxen for my auditors. It is to this early practise in the great art of all arts that I am indebted for the primary and leading impulse that stimulated me forward, and shaped and moulded my entire subsequent destiny. Improve, then, young gentlemen, the superior advantages you here enjoy. Let not a day pass without exercising your powers of speech. There is no power like that of oratory. Cæsar controlled men by exciting their fears; Cicero, by captivating their affections and swaying their passions. The influence of the one perished with its author; that of the other continues to this day.—Henry Clay.

Cannot ministers of Christ agree to preach more frequently and more earnestly against drunkenness and the dangers of the cup? From many pulpits this whole subject is practically excluded. The drunkard is rarely prayed for; the young not warned against this ensnaring device of the devil; the law of God against drunkenness is substantially ignored! And yet it is undeniable that the bottle is sending more souls to perdition than all the infidel tongues and pens in the land. We utter no railing against our brethern who ignore this stupendous moral evil; but we would not choose to have a son of ours trained up under such a ministry.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

A DUTCHMAN.—A facetious gentleman travelling in the country, on arriving at his lodging place in the evening was met by the ostler whom he thus addressed: "Boy, extricate that quadruped from the vehicle stabulate him, devote to him an adequate supply of nutritious aliment, and when the Aurora of morn shall again illumine the Oriental horizon, I will reward you with a pecuniary compensation for your amiable hospitality." The boy, not understanding a word, ran into the house, saying, "Master here's a Dutchman wants to see you."

The following is Josh Billings' notions of a thoroughbred gentleman: "A bob tail coat, a pennie paper kollar, a white kott a waskit, yaller trowsers without any cloth into the legs, shiney lether boots, a pair of yaller gloves, and inside of 'em all a thing got up in imitation of a man, but, as the kounterfeiters say, poorly executed, and not kalkerlated to deseve. Mustash indispensibul, and brases unnecessary. Fine specimens on exhibition.

A sea captain trading regularly to the African coast, was invited to meet a committe of a society for the evangelization of Africa. Among numerous questions touching the habits and religion of the African races, he was asked, "Do the subjects of King Dahomey keep Sunday?" "Keep Sunday?" he replied, "yes, and every other damned thing they can lay their hands on."

A printer in setting up the sentence "We are but parts of a stupendous whole," by mistake of a single letter made it read "We are but parts of a stupendous whale."

NOT DIFFICULT TO PLEASE.—"I always sing to please myself," said a gentleman who was humming a tune in company. "Then you are not difficult to please," said a lady who sat near him.

A man complaining of a constable, was asked what he meant, as he looked in good health. "Why hope, by the favour of my wife," he replied.

CHANGE OF LIFE.

An old document contains a table exhibiting an average age attained by persons that are employed in the various popular professions of the day. It reads thus:—

In the professions, so in most others, the farmers have the advantage over the rest of mankind, as their average is 66.

Next upon the docket comes judges, justices of the peace, the dignity of whose term is lengthened out to 65.

Then immediately following in the catalogue of longevity is the bank officer, who sums up his account at the age of 63.

Public officers cling to their existence with as much pertinacity as they retain their offices, but life forsakes them at 56.

Coopers, although they seem to stave through life, hang on until they are 56.

The good works of the clergymen follow them at 55.

Shipwrights, hatters, lawyers, and ropemakers go together at the age of 54.

Masons realize their cry of 'mort' at the age of 46.

The blacksmith, like most of his contemporaries, dies at 51.

Butchers follow up their bloody career at precisely 50.

Carpenters, as a general thing, are often brought to the scaffold at 49.

Jewelers are disgusted with their tinsel of life at 44.

Bakers, manufacturers, and various mechanics die at the age of 43.

Painters yield to their colic at 45, and the brittle thread of the tailor's life is broken at the age of 41.

Editors, like all other beings who come under the admiration of the gods, die comparatively young, they accomplish their errand of mercy at 40.

The musician redeems his last note and plays his dying falls at 30.

Printers become dead matter at the age of 26.

The Cattle Disease in the Western States.

Chicago has been making enquiries into the character of the disease, having sent a commissioner for the purpose into Central Illinois, where it has appeared in a somewhat virulent form. This commissioner reports in substance as follows:—

"First—We have not to deal with an infectious plague or a contagion, but with a form of poisoning due to the native cattle eating off lands polluted by droves of Texas steers.

"Second—We fail to find a single case of disease beyond the limits over which the Southern stock has been distributed, and every animal, without exception, dies on the Texas trails.

"Third—No system of medical treatment can be relied on or conveniently applied. Plagues call for preventatives, and are not amongst the curable maladies.

"Fourth—Prevention consists in herding native stock on inclosed pasture wherever Texas cattle exist, and then not moving the Texas cattle to and fro, as panic-stricken communities insist on, but keeping them well by themselves, and in proper inclosures.

"Fifth—In relation to the trade in Texas cattle, which is as important for the most consumer of the North as for the cattle producer of the South, it is obvious from all we have learned that during the entire winter the trade can go on unchecked, without the least danger of disease arising amongst our native cattle. In all probability, however, the theory is sound which was suggested at our last meeting, that even in summer, under judicious treatment, Texas steers can be cleared of the poison which infects them."

The opinion is agreed in by Professor GAMGEE, an authority of some note in the United States.

On Tuesday last, a man named Paul Kingston arrived at Buffalo from Port Colborne, Canada, bringing with him two spans of horses for sale. He was accompanied by a young man nineteen years of age, who looked after the horses. In the evening Kingston started out in search of a purchaser, and before going left with the boy some $45 in Canada money, besides $20 in greenbacks—fearing that he might be robbed. The boy, it was understood, would not leave the hotel during the evening. On the return of Kingston, however, the boy was gone, and no clue to his whereabouts could be obtained. His hat and coat were found near the bank of the canal in the lower part of the city, and it is feared that he was enticed away by some desperate character, robbed and murdered, and his body thrown into the canal.

A NOVEL CLAIM.—The French papers are engaged in earnest discussion, probably from the lack of any better topic, of a claim of some two and three quarters of a million sterling, said to be outstanding against England. The allegation is that 130 millions of francs were paid in 1818 in settlement of the claims of British subjects for losses during the war; that only 65 millions of this sum have been claimed; that the remainder has been spent in the erection of Buckingham Palace, and that this remainder is what should now be refunded to France. The matter is to be brought before the Legislative Body, and M. Berryer among others will speak in support of the French claim.

Nearly all the religious bodies of Great Britain have defined their position with reference to the bill for the disestablishment of the Irish Church. Congregationalists and Baptists are a unit in favor of the bill; so are the United Presbyterians. In the General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland, a large majority declare for the bill. The Irish Presbyterian Assembly declare, by a small majority, against it. The Established Church of Scotland are against the bill. The Wesleyans are divided on the subject, and avoid all official demonstration.

ONE FOR DEAN RAMSAY.—Two ministers on a pedestrian tour went into a country public house and ordered a gill of whiskey. The refreshment was produced and duly measured out into glasses. One of the brethern, reverently putting his hand over his eyes, asked a blessing on the grog, while the other tossed off both glasses. With a look of wonder, the other enquired, "Where's my share?" "Ah!" responded his companion, "you should have remembered the whole of the Scriptural injunction, that ye should both watch and pray, for, ye see, ye was prayin' but ye wasna watchin."

The phrase "stranded on the goose," originated in Pittsburg, Pa. That city, some years ago, was so overrun with that aquatic fowl that its sidewalks became an intolerable condition. A public meeting was held on the subject, and at it the extermination of the offended bird was decided on. A short time after election some following, the two candidates for the mayoralty were questioned as to what would be their action in the premises in case of election. The one who was "found on the goose question" was elected; and from that day the phrase crept into general use among politicians.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary persons but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. T. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night, and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I coughed over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me enough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I feel hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be applied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Whistle Down the Brakes.

Hark the Spectre's gloomy signalling!
Who has only pipp'd the shady
Ghastly supply string
Giving his elder brethren
A ghostly dinner-pledge yarn!
We whistlemakers are brothers forty
He's moving on my form.

Where go ye now, ye young mode Master,
Up rising on the floor—
Where go ye now with wisdom—
Into his ear would I call—
"Oh whistle down the brakes boys,
You're moving on too fast."

When with erring footsteps onward
We behold a brother move,
Whom in our hearts we've cherished
With an ocean vast, of love;
When we know he has forgotten
In his cups, the sacred past,
We cry, "Whistle down the brakes boys,
He's moving on too fast!"

All along the world's broad-gauge road
We're resting toward the tomb—
Look ahead!—the track's encumbered—
Over the future hangs a gloom—
Stop the train!—a switch is open!
The whistle shrieks its blast;
"Down! Down! hard down the brakes boys,
We're moving on too fast!"

When with truth's banner flying,
We sweep toward life's goal—
Our locomotive spring,
Fired with religious coal—
Relieving the allowed,
Inlosing the downward cast,
Oh whistle up the brakes boys,
We cannot move too fast.

Selections.

DOUBTS AND FEARS.

(From "All the Year Round.")

"My own dear, dear little Maggie!" I was Maggie. As to whether or not I was dear it was for me to say, but detraction itself acknowledged me little,—hence, with the usual contentment of gentle English maidens, I greatly deprecated to be tall. Tall and fair, with delicate features and well cut nose. Such was my ordered taste. Men, I conceived, should without exception be dark; women, without exception, fair.

But I and my theories had got somehow into a sort of muddle.

Here was I, Maggie, short dark plump. (I forgot to mention that, in my standard of beauty, women were universally slight. I presume, indeed, the contrast unconsciously with arms over which I had frequently sighed, they were so round and so plump and meant to remain so. I decided to comfort them their dimpled appearance.

Then again, he who had called me his dear little Maggie was fair. Decidedly fair, understand! No sort of compromise. Yellow hair, whiskers, moustache, all quite golden. No doubt he had some good points. Handsome, sleepy blue eyes, brilliantly white teeth, and that sort of thing. But the one fact remained—he was fair.

I had fretted and fumed at this at first but it was no useless [for, with the best intentions to please me, my love could not positively change his skin, and the hottest sun had no power to bronze him] that it beat I left off thinking about it, and felt back resignedly on his inner qualities. One of them was, at all events a reassurance for all things worthy to be reassured.

We had the most outlandish courtship. All adjectives on his part, all modest deprecations on mine. It had only one drawback. It had left us where we began. We were neither of us any nearer to the old sweet end of courtship. Marriage was still, but a lovely prospective. The fact is, that among the many mistakes the fairies made at my birth they forgot to endow me with wealth. That and the fair skin had both been omitted. My lover also was poor, existing at present on an officer's pay, but with fabulous riches shining in the future.

His mother was a very rich woman, and we had always supposed she meant to provide for her only child; but it had lately been rumored that she would not do so, unless, said report, he married to please her.

And soon my lover showed me a letter where the tone turned to a threat.

To inherit her money, he must indeed marry to please her, and she appeared to have by all selected his wife.

"O Bernard, how unfortunate!"

I did not seem unfortunate. But I was so happy in the possession of a lover and so proud of the lover being Bernard, that I don't at all think I realized the extent of the misfortune. Bernard, however, was filled with indignation against his mother.

"My own dear, dear little Maggie! Maggie, you do not doubt me? You are not in the least afraid,—the latter I mean?"

"Why, Bernard, no."

"You do not think it could ever influence me," he went on excitedly; "that I would ever take a wife of my mother's choosing. that I would ever marry any one—any one—but you, Madge?"

As I have said before, I did not at all admire my arms, but that was no reason why they should not be made of use.—They were of use now for they crept round his neck, and Bernard became quiet.

We read no little in the course of the next few months that I am not going to repeat at. Besides, we had said it an often before. How happy we were in the south that succeeded! Bernard and I threw the frost to the winds. South lovely long walks in the Staffordshire lanes, such reckless plashing of Staffordshire roses!

Ah! how easily I conjure up the lanes and the fields. Cool and fresh, with the smell of grass in the air, and the drone of insects. The heat of the day passing in vapor, the flower-cups filling with dew. A lark soaring upward, like a speck in the light. A golden rain of sunbeams falling warm from heaven to earth.

"And you, Madge," said Bernard, with his arm round my waist "I see the happiest [illegible] breath on the earth."

"You would be perhaps, at the top of a gentleman quartered bridge just behind me, a gentleman cow looking over. I would reply, confidently:

"Dear, we are very happy so."

This could not last forever. I don't mean sitting on the gate—because that would have been very undesirable, but the peace, the quiet, the sense of being alone.

Even the gods had to come down from Olympus, and I found that my presence was required on earth.

"Madge," said my father at breakfast one morning, following me a letter across the table, "read that. Mary Hall is quite well, and Florence has asked to come here."

He had a newspaper before him, which he pretended to be reading, whilst really he waited for my answer.

"O my dear papa!" I remonstrated.

"I know, I know, my dear," he said, hurriedly; "but it can't be helped. Just tell Flo' that you and Bernard are—in fact, that you like sometimes to be alone, and I am sure she will be too good-natured to worry you. You can give her a book, you know, or an antimacassar to do."

But I did not at all think one would work antimacassars, and I felt my brown skin flush up angrily.

"Write to her nicely, Madge," my father hinted, "and be sure that your letter is posted before 5 o'clock."

After which little speech, compliance on my part was expected.

At Staffordshire! Staffordshire that till now I had so loved! I wished now we were all in any other county. For in Staffordshire there lived Miss Florence Bernard, So at least said Staffordshire; but Staffordshire was mistaken. Going to Paris at the height of the season, you sat at the Louvre next Miss Florence Bernard. If you leaned on the rails of the drive in Hyde Park, the prettiest face was Miss Florence Bernard's. On the top of Mont Blanc, with a long cooled stick, there had once been seen Miss Florence Bernard to feet. Florence was everywhere and did everything. So I'm Staffordshire there did exist a certain Mage Hall, and at the top of Flo's epistles, posted, perhaps, from some place up the Nile, there always appeared an apposite little monogram, with Mage Hall very fine and large in gilt letters underneath.

On the strength of which St Gordshire put forth its claim to Florence; that young lady danced the while in London ball-rooms or admiring the sea from the chain-pier at Brighton.

Suddenly she disappeared from the world of fashion. The mysterious little lady gave tired of heiress. She dropped the laurels that were offered her at the pretty feet, and took the train to Staffordshire.

"And I wish that train had carried her past." I grumbled to Bernard, but Bernard for once did not heed me.

"Bernard," he said, "Bernard, Bernard! Now where have I heard that name?"

That evening I wrote to Florence, telling her how intensely stupid she would find us, and hoping she would not allow it to keep her away.

Florence wrote back. She should certainly come, and no place could seem stupid after Leyden.

"Charm a fool, girl," said Bernard shrugging his shoulders. "If she finds us amusing, I shall think she has a fund of amusement within herself. Little lady, why don't you unseal your gloves. And so we slided away gracefully with Florence.

But all too soon Mrs Burnand arrived.

Now, I was myself not at all acquainted with my cousin. All that I knew of her I knew from report.

"Too pretty for the place," I commented inwardly, and then I was very angry with myself, and begged Bernard's pardon in my heart, and could find no words strong enough to condemn my want of faith, and tried very hard to like my pretty cousin. In fact, she was a mere slip of a girl, very slight and looking, with very undeniable eyes, and a very undeniable mouth. A little girl, with little delicate ears, slim feet, and long fingered hands with pink palms.

That night I looked long and earnestly at myself in the glass. I believe it is not uncommon for young ladies so to do, and with me it had grown rather a habit. I was always so anxious to see if, happily, I appeared one shade fairer, and I know that I turned my whole hair inside out, so that I might get at the lightest tints. That night, however, I played no such freaks. I simply stood and examined.

I saw in the glass a well shaped girl, a brown face brilliantly coloured, a plump white neck, round plump arms decorated with dimples, little fat hands, also all over dimples, but grievously brown, and with fingers unpleasantly short.

Now, looking back on what I saw, I highly approve of the image in the glass; but Maggie in those days was not satisfied.

"Brown!" I sighed disconsolately. "Brown is no word for it, Mahogany is nearer the color."

Then I, Maggie, into the small hours; then tired at last, I crept into bed, and brought my brown face into contrast with the sheets.

Next morning on entering the breakfast room, I found Florence already down before me, looking fresh and sweet, as an English girl should, at something before eight in the morning.

My father was no artist, and had a true artist's reverence for beauty. He looked with admiration at her elegant little figure, at her classically shaped head, with glossy wavy hair simply and prettily confined. Bernard was not so artistic. I glanced at him over my teacup, let his handsome blue eyes were half asleep, and his face a black wall for expression.

At length, as I watched him, I saw the man change; his sleepy blue eyes woke up, and some intelligence flashed in his face. Turning to Florence, and for the first time addressing her he said:

"You have just come from London, Miss Burnand, where have you lately been visiting?"

"Kensington," said Florence, "twenty-nine, Assyrians Terrace. It's very pretty about there."

"It is so," he replied, inaudibly; and tapping from her, he chatted gaily to me through breakfast.

I was filled with a horrible dread. Twenty-nine, Assyrians Terrace! And Bernard's mother, I knew well, lived at twenty. Could it be possible that Florence was the lady she had selected for his wife. She had plenty of money, and she was aristocratic enough for any great dame.

Oh! how I wish that Bernard and I might just run down to the station after breakfast, see her off politely by the train. Not so, however.

I saw my father shut himself up in his studio; I watch Bernard saunter slowly down the garden, walk; as usual, for me to join him; I wonder how on earth I shall get rid of Miss Burnand.

I think of papa's little hint,—the antimacassers,—but I feel intuitively that though a crochet needle may be very well in any little short fingers, Miss Burnand's pretty hands are not meant to such account. Then Bernard whistles, and I flush and Florence looks around her, a well-bred girl much amazed. I felt hot and indignant. What ridiculous lovers she must think us!

I touch my old hat from a peg, and half make as though I would put it on. To put it on—utterly, I have no courage. Florence catches the idea conveyed by my act

I am going to write letters," she says: "don't mind me."

I place pens and ink before her with the rapidity of an experienced clerk, and dance out in the sunshine down our gay little garden up to Bernard. A long happy morning; a lovers' long talk. We go out of the garden, and sit on a great yellow haystack. Bernard goes up first, and I climb up after. Bernard talks rubbish and I talk rubbish after him.

He tells me where, when we are married, he means to take me. We are to touch, it would seem, at all the loveliest spots on the earth; we are just to touch, and pass on. I am very inexperienced — and I have never been out at Staffordshire. Still I vaguely feel that this touching and passing on may be expensive.

"That will require money?" I say, modestly interrogative.

"Beyond a doubt, Madge."

Bernard's face clouds. I feel sure he is fitful, and thinking of his mother. Some subtle association of ideas places Florence before me.

"What do you think of her, Bernard? You admire her of course?"

"Of course I do," he said. "Who could help it?"

I was mortally ashamed, but little jealous thrills ran down my dreadfully plump arms, and I felt myself striving to slide out of his grasp.

Bernard would not hear of the arrangement. He took no notice of my discomposure, only held me all the faster, and talked on as if I, Maggie, were at once the quaintest and sweetest little lady in the land. This was so far pleasant that I partially recovered; but I could not quite lay aside a restless fear, a horrible dread of—something.

Florence gave me no cause for uneasiness; and yet I was forever watching her. She was certainly down at Staffordshire, just as she had been in London Paris, and half a dozen other capitals, a complete success; her peculiar charm was the ease with which she allowed herself to be assumed. It was all one to her, London or Staffordshire. She would frame her little aristocratic face in the window of a carriage, in the drive of Hyde Park, calmly returning the gaze of the multitude; she would ride in the "Row" her delicate profile set off by her fashionable hat; or here, in the country, she would gather up the skirts of all her pretty morning dresses, and race about the lanes like a child. So strangely adaptable!

To my father she talks pictures, and to Bernard does not praise her now to poor jealous little me.

So things go on, and I do not like her in the least, and I say hasty rude things and repent, and am sorry, and, in fact am Maggie all over. Florence, being sweet tempered herself, does not know I am sometempered, and goes in our walks with a quite persistence and an absence of fact that teases politeness and on my part an impracticable theory. Every time she tucks herself on to us, I mount swiftly up to a white heat of impatience.

"All of no use. I seem to hear Bernard saying; "We cannot leave her alone, Maggie; you would not leave the poor little girl alone?" And I feel he is right and I clench my teeth hard, and walk along silent, until the tones of my voice are pitching to my likes.

At length, however, things take a new turn. I inform myself as I stand at one of the pretty French windows that open on our lawn, too many. "There are limits to every brilliantly green after the rain.—That lawn was a picture,—red with geraniums in white stone baskets, and everflowering with beauty. In the centre, a fine old oak threw dark shadows, of the ground; and there, in the shade, hidden away from the sun's hot glare, sat Florence Bernard —and my Bernard!

Flo' was looking up, and laughing. Her hat lay beside her, and through the thick boughs a sunbeam was sprinkling on her pretty teeth. Like insertions were settling on her white dress, and Bernard's blue eyes were looking straight into hers!

I don't stop to reason. I don't stop to remind myself what I am busy about the house, as I always am on Monday morning, nor let Bernard nor Florence can be told to my side; that the greatest and they being the only two young people in the house, they must of necessity amuse each other; much they cannot do more innocently than by sitting on the lawn in my sight; neither do I reason that I do not literally expect Bernard's eyes to be lowered more and except when they are turned towards me.

I flounce about angrily all the morning and will not go near them. I fan my

Bernard looking up at the house, and I know very well he is looking for me; but the minute that gratitude brings out to his side dirt pray or the air and don't go to him. Then they come in to lunch. Flo' with her delicate cheeks like rose leaves, the effect of sitting in open air. I catch a glimpse of myself in the glass over my head, and see features all the more rather large as a rule, and dark brown complexion my beauty. I am very angry with Miss Burnand, and experience a childish desire to retaliate by giving her the drumstick of a fowl. Her manners prevent and I give her a small wing.

Bernard takes this occasion to unmask, but is of course, the first to try to set it right. He stretches his long legs and stares at us—rather lazily.

This is our first tiff and I feel there is something exciting in it, though I am conscious of a vague suspicion that the smooth smiling was much better. Ah me how the small waves rise and swell! shall I never again see the calm waters!

I had only meant to be dignified and stately, and I soon grew tired of that, and would very gladly have come around, but —to my horror—there was a barrier. An invisible one, but none the less a barrier, and I could not break it down. I found, when I would have again addressed Bernard in the old familiar manner, a shade on the face that had no long been my own. I do not think he was aware of it. He was graver than usual, and nobody else seemed to notice his constraint, but if Bernard is concerned my senses quicken and to me it was too clear. This change in Bernard, arising from the change in me, was reflected in my voice, and so we went on affecting each other, until at length we were rapidly drifting apart.—And all outwardly was the same. Only now, instead of the old sweet whisper, "Come into the woods, Maggie!" there would be Bernard, hard and metallic, simply waiting our pleasure to start.—And Flore so would sit on cream tinted gloves. And I, foolish and jealous, could not steal it, and would let them go out into the quiet beauty of the woods without me.

Of course it was I who suffered most, Bernard had his sense of all usage, and as Englishman's pleasure in asking, but I was beyond such help. In the depths of my misery I threw myself at full length upon the floor, and was instantly half stunned by a projecting nail. Physical pain did me good, I crawled up again, and then, glad of the excuse to be out acted from my headaches, I went off to bed.

In bed, instead of sleep, I find wisdom. On the one point I am quite determined I will not at all expose myself to Florence.

Promptly she comes up to me, bringing her sweet face and her wonderful absence of tact, into my sick room. She pities me very much, and tries to do me good.

"Such a lovely walk!" she breathes melodiously; though to me her voice sounds just like an old raven's. I become at once uncomplimentary and insufferable.

"It depends very much on one's own thoughts though," she remarks, "whether one enjoys things or no. I was thinking of his."

At this juncture my newly gained wisdom serves me nothing. I jump up in bed, straight as an arrow, and the hot blood paints my face in streaks from my brow to my chin. In the midst of my passion I try to be sarcastic.

"O, indeed!" I say; "and he, I suppose was thinking of you?"

"Laugh in what I intend to be an incredulous manner, but even to my own ear it sounds weird and wretched, and I feel that there are great tears in my eyes. Through them, through that mist of unshed tears I look up at her. And she looks down at me amazed. "How strange you are!" she says, "am I didn't think you knew! Yes, we have been engaged these three years, but we are to be married almost directly now; he is coming down here some time next month."

She blushes. Her face fills with color until it is as red as the berries on mountain ash, and her delicate ears become scarlet.

I lean back on my pillows ecstatically happy.

It does not even occur to me to enquire to whom she is engaged, or anything about it. She is evidently nothing to Bernard and beyond that nothing signifies. I think that she is hurt by my want of sympathy, for she goes away sad.

The instant she is gone I jump off the bed, plunge my flushed face into a basin of water, brush up all the wet hairs into a great bunch of curls, shake out my dress into folds, and go down stairs, trusting to my composure for not telling tales.

I edge up to Bernard, and propose a walk.

He agrees at once, although poor fellow he has but just come from a walk. He looks at the glued up appearance of my eyes.

Our walk is, of course, to the hay stack, and, sitting on the top of that golden edifice, the last wave of trouble recedes from my heart.

Says Bernard to a person who was sobbing in his ears: "Poor little Madge.—What was it Maggie?"

But I cannot at first explain what it was. I lift up my tear-stained face, and hide it away very modestly in the stubble.

Presently it transpires. Maggie has been jealous. Bernard opens his blue eyes wide to its sinfulness and says aloud,

"How strange?" he says, "jealous of Flo'?"

I tell myself how natural it is that he should call her Flo'.

"Quite absurd—wasn't it?" I ask nervously.

"Poor little girl!" he says, "I am so sorry for her. She has been so constant to that wrong of a man. Only to-day she was telling me how thankful she should be when they really were married. And I dare say she will be, poor little thing! for what with his wretched health and his endless suspicions her life is not too easy."

I undergo pricks of conscience which send me clambering up on the stool of repentance.

"O, Bernard, I have been an unkind!" But what a different sound Cupidity looks to be! And if whenever sinners shall have won the battle, give another pang!"

"Other people! Silliness dear, I suppose!" says Bernard, laughing and [illegible] kissing deeply to try to see my face. "But she wasn't particularly clever, Maggie. I was very sorry for her of course, but I think I would sooner have studied with my own little girl in the woods this afternoon."

This is as it should be. I compose myself to listen and Bernard leaves off. I don't care. I am so very happy just now.

"This evening Florence is coming to stay with some of those very worst blues.

"I am so sorry for you, and so very, very glad, and am sure you will be happy when you are married!"

Florence the adaptable fits into my new mood. Exchanging confidences we compare notes. Her Bob and my Bernard might be brothers. The virtues of both are exemplary, and they are so exempt from them.

The Staffordshire roses are scenting the air, though their petals begin to lie thick on the ground. Every sun speaks of a fair little bride, whose stereotyped figure shoots out through her veil, but the connection she makes is lost upon me. I am daily on course of the white bells and blooms in my own dark hair, of Bernard somewhere beside me, and all else is but a dream which I awake to find Florence married, and on my own hand a knot of thick gold just beside me to Bernard.

We have raked all, and have married without his mother's wealth.

"Madge," says he, as he takes me away easily through a crowd that is wrapped [illegible] absorbed in Florence, "of whom more in the future, do you mean to be jealous?"

I whisper up softly, "Of all those I think you love better than me."

Bernard lifted his hands and eyes, like a prophet seeing backward.

"Madge, I see in the distance a host of such rivals, misty shadows in the background softly turning into air.

I laugh at this conceit.

"Before what, then, have they vanished."

Then Bernard, looking in my eyes, stoops down before me and kisses the rag on my finger.

DAIRY ITEMS.

COPIOUS FLOW OF MILK.—The Attica Atlas says that a favorite cow, the property of F. D. Wilcox, of that village, gave 101 gallons of milk in twelve hours, or 61 pounds. The milk was weighed for several successive days, and the average was 60 pounds.

CHEDDAR CHEESE.—James McAdam is making Cheddar cheese at his factory in Manheim, Herkimer Co., at the rate of thirty-four per day. He uses the milk of 1,000 cows, and says it requires no more labor to make Cheddar than any other kind or style of cheese. The May sales brought 15½c. per pound.

CHEESE MARKET.—The market at Little Falls on the 1st inst., was rather sluggish, and the stock offered quite limited. Skimmed cheese from farm dairies, sold from 10c. to 12c., and the pure article at 13 to 13c. Factory sales were made at 14 to 15½c. Butter sales were made at 29c, with but little offering.

DAIRYING IN CHAUTAUQUA COUNTY.—The Fredonia Censor states that the farmers in that vicinity are very generally sending their milk to the cheese factories, instead of making butter as they entered earlier in the season. The decline in the price of the article is the cause of the change, as cheese is deemed to pay best.

SHADE FOR COWS.—If pastures for cows, during the hot months, are destitute of shade trees the animals will suffer much from the effects of heat and the biting of flies. Their productiveness will be considerably diminished from these causes, consequently it will pay well to furnish a temporary shelter till trees can be grown of suitable points for the dairy stock.

TO KEEP BUTTER SWEET IN A CASK.—A compound of one part sugar, one part nitre, and two parts of the best Spanish salt, beat together into a fine powder, and mixed thoroughly with the butter in proportion to one ounce to the pound, has been found to keep the butter in every respect sweet and sound during two years that it was in the cask. It is also said to impart a rich marrowy flavor that no other knows ever acquires, and tastes very little of the salt. It might be well to give it a trial.

RENNET—PREPARATION.—The Utica Herald gives the Bavaria method of curing rennets, which is said to be preferable to the one commonly practised. The contents of the rennet skin are emptied out and the latter inflated with air like a bladder, the end tied with a string, and hung up to dry. When properly cured, the skins may be taken down and packed away in a small space for use. Little or no salt is required which is supposed to be an advantage. As to from the cost of that article, as its free use in preserving rennets is supposed to materially weaken their coagulating power.

FOOD FOR MILCH COWS.—A dairyman writes to the Ohio Farmer concerning the food proper for cows. Of the grasses he prefers timothy or the wild kinds. Where grain is fed the favorite mixture is shorts, ground oats and corn meal, in about equal proportions. Oats ground alone make a good flow of milk, but the use of corn meal adds to its richness but not to its volume. Potatoes are not bad, neither are they particularly good, as the milk is strong, as it is also when carrots are fed in considerable quantities. Pumpkins make rich butter, but do not much increase the quantity of milk The best root to feed to cows is said to be the sugar beet.

THE COMEDY OF CONCILIATION.

(From the Halifax Chronicle.)

The time is unpropitious, the piece is unpopular, the actors are under the ban of popular indignation. No tact, no address, no appeals to loyalty or self-interest, no oration, elaborate, ornate, spoken with even the tongue of an angel can have any effect in inducing the people of this Province to listen with patience to this dreary comedy of conciliation; the spirit of persecution may be indeed strong in the Canadian cabinet, but the ears of prudence are forever closed in Nova Scotia.

A few short years ago a sympathetic audience might have been found in Nova Scotia for the play of conciliation, but the political managers of the time did not think fit to present it, and now it is too late. When the delegates to the Quebec Convention returned to Nova Scotia, flushed and excited with ambition and the wild hope of a new and great nationality, when the people, though suspicious and half fearful, were not confirmed in their hostility to the measure of Confederation, then indeed was the season for conciliation; then an attempt at conciliation would have been grounded, politic, indispensible, and might have been successful. Ridicule would not then have been so often and too long encouraged, and the favor of those old decrepit hacks thrown by discontented party material a whistle-mare blow for the word on their heads and the offspring of their intellect, blasted them to the fact that the people looked with other eyes than theirs on this strange and nowhere scheme; they had the powers of a giant, and careless of consequences they used them like a giant, recklessly, cruelly. The scheme was forced on the people. All the intellectual gifts God had given them, all the moral which circumstances had placed within their reach, all the ingenuity in bribing, cajoling, threatening, which long years of political warfare had taught them, were used without fear, without remorse, to force on an obnoxious measure upon an unwilling people. In the palmy days of power, when the recession of a once great popularity was yet thought, they never thought about conciliation, and it is only now when the voice of the people crying for Repeal has waxed too loud to be neglected, that the Nova Scotia quondam delegation, countenanced by their Canadian employers, began to make a indiscreetly feeble and dreary attempt at conciliation.

Now was the time immediately after the Quebec Convention, the last and only time when a judicious and possibly successful attempt at conciliation might have been made. When the question of better terms was, in accordance with a motion, made under what auspicious circumstances we know, left to the arbitrament of the Colonial Secretary, then an attempt to conciliate the people of Nova Scotia by an honest amendment of the scheme might have been successful. But no such attempt was made. On the contrary the cars of the Colonial Secretary, as on a late occasion the ears of Mr. Watkin and the House of Commons, were filled with misrepresentations and wilful misstatements, and the liberties of this people were sacrificed to the ambition of a few Canadian and Nova Scotia statesmen. Why did not Sir John A. Macdonald and his colleagues, on that occasion attempt to conciliate the Nova Scotians? He had the power and the opportunity, but the wish was far from him; and now when the baseless fabric erected with so much time and care and labour, (time ill-spent, care for an unworthy object, labour to an infamous end) is in danger of being destroyed, Sir John and his knightly friends come down to Nova Scotia to attempt to conciliate, as if the people were a crowd of school boys, who could be first whipped and then conciliated.

By our lady, Sir John, it will not do! You cannot bribe or buy, neither for silver nor for gold; you cannot flatter or cajole, because the people are in no mood to be flattered; you cannot promise aught that is worth the having, for we are too well aware of your trick of "winning with honest trifles to betray us in deepest consequence," to believe your promises; you cannot alter in any way the Dominion constitution, bound up as you are by an act of Parliament that is no thoroughfare for your horse and carriage. "Is truth, Sir John, you live in great infamy" in Nova Scotia. "Sir John, Sir John, we are well acquainted with your manner of wrenching a true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent assurance from you, can thrust us from a level consideration; you have as it appears to us practiced upon the easy-yielding spirit of this people and made them serve your uses both in purse and person." "The Kings who paid tribute are dead," said Muley Abel Hassan to the envoy of Ferdinand, who came to demand the yearly tribute, "and our mints at present coin nothing but blades of scimitars and heads of lances." In like manner we say to these Canadian Knights: "Go back, sirs, and tell your Governor-General that the people who were willing to pay tribute to Canada are dead, and at present we have nothing to offer but scorn and detestation. We will not be confederated. We will not be conciliated. We will have Repeal."

Revival.—We learn from Tharso, under date 25th inst., that there has been a great revival of religion in that vicinity, in connection chiefly with the Baptist denomination, but participated in by others. The letter says:—"Mr. Dunlop, formerly a Lieutenant in Her Majesty's forces, has been a powerful instrument in awakening many to a sense of their guilt as sinners, and he is ably supported by Mr. Ross, Baptist preacher, Tharso, and Mr. McPhail, of the same body in Ottawa city; Mr. Dove, Methodist preacher here, is throwing in his influence. I have heard to-day that Mr. Dr Dunlop, together with a considerable number of converts, are to be baptized to-morrow at Clarence, opposite Tharso." This Mr. Dunlop is one of the officers, we believe, who was forbidden by the Horse Guards to hold religious meetings, and who, in consequence, has left the service.

The British Post Office.—The progress of the post office system in Britain is still of the most gratifying description. The amount of correspondence is very formidable. In 1858, the number of letters which passed through the post office in England and Wales was 623,400,000, an increase of 4.32 per cent. on the previous year, or about 30 letters to each of the population. In Scotland, there were 70,190,000, or about 28 to each individual, showing an increase of 6.38 per cent. on the previous year; while Ireland the number was 56,500,000, or 10 to each person. The total number was 750,000,000, as compared with 720,467,307 in 1865. During the same time, 104,796,185 newspapers passed through the office; and so much as NINETY-FIVE MILLIONS of dollars were paid in money orders.

The Sun Eclipsed for nearly Seven Minutes.

An eclipse of the sun, visible only in part of the eastern hemisphere, took place on the 18th, of September fourteen days ago. It has been seen for the last several years. According to astronomical calculations, a similar one will not take place again for centuries to come. A number of favorable circumstances have combined to render this one of the most remarkable extraordinary events of the century, and an intellectual treat to the men of science, such as is rarely accorded to him. On the 1st of July, the sun was in its greatest apogee, and during the weeks that have intervened the apogee has somewhat lessened, it is still so great as to make the sun's diameter appear comparatively small. About noon the moon, on the contrary, was at its greatest perigee, which makes its diameter appear extraordinarily large. The new moon took place six hours afterward, and, in addition to this unusual coincidence, the moon being in the ascending node of its course threw its shadow over the equator, so that the eclipse not only covered the greatest possible space on the earth, but to the places where it took place at noon the diameter of the moon appeared still larger, by which means the duration of the eclipse was prolonged, while the surface of the earth, which here reaches its greatest speed at linear velocity, and following the dusk of the moon's shadow with greater velocity than at any other point, must have prolonged the whole phenomenon considerably.—In consequence of so many combining circumstances, the zone of the total eclipse covered an area of nearly 2,000 miles in length, and 30 miles in width. In places where the phenomenon reached its highest point the duration of the eclipse was six minutes fifty seconds.

On the island of Peria and in Aden, the total eclipse began shortly after sunrise; passing through the eastern part of India during the morning, it reached Tranquebar at noon, and was visible during the afternoon, first in Annam, then on the islands of Borneo and Celebes, and on many islands of the Molluck group, and towards evening in New-Guinea. It is thus apparent that for the purpose of a close observation of the physical construction of the sun, which science has not yet been able to determine, a number of different points of observation offered themselves, and with this view some of the European Governments fitted out expeditions in order that the result of their several observations might be compared.

Death from Disappointment in Love.

(From the Boston Journal.)

A sad but interesting case of the death of a young lady named Susan King, is a general topic of conversation at Woburn at the present time. The deceased had been affianced to a young man, to whom, it appears, she was very much attached.—Some weeks since she happened to observe him in company with another young woman, under such circumstances as to give rise to feelings of jealousy on her part.—She upbraided him for his conduct, and he replied to her remonstrances in a spirited manner, which further provoked her to dismiss him. It seems, however, that she still cherished in secret the old affection, and the disappointment so weighed upon her mind as to cause a severe nervous attack, resulting, about ten days since, in utter prostration. She remained in this condition until her death, which occurred on Saturday last. The circumstances having been so peculiar, and the malady having baffled the skill of the physicians, it was deemed proper an autopsy should be performed, which was done on Monday by Drs. Cutter and Abbott. No trace of disease, or obvious cause of death, was discovered in, but the system was apparently in an entirely healthy and normal condition. The deceased was a person of excellent character and fine personal appearance, and was much esteemed and beloved.

"GENTEEL SITUATIONS."

The Quebec "Chronicle" has been denouncing the eager desire so generally shown to engage in what are thought light and genteel occupations, to the neglect and disparagement of more laborious but more healthy and often more remunerative occupations. In doing this it has spoken strongly, but not too strongly, of the overcrowded state of such positions as that of dry goods' merchants and salesmen, and has provoked the indignation of some of the clerks of the ancient city. Whether the thing be denied or not, the tendency condemned by our contemporary is notorious. The dry goods business is entirely overdone in Ontario, and we suppose it is the same in Quebec; yet farmers' sons and others are eager to swell the number of those who find their competitors for situations already too many, while the labour in the fields or at the forge is at the best but very scantily supplied. We have once and again drawn attention to this unfortunate tendency to worship what after all can be called nothing else than shabby gentility, to the disparagement of "honest labour," as hurtful to individuals and injurious to the commonwealth; and every-day's experience confirms us in the conviction that every one who seeks to counteract the tendency is so far his country's benefactor.

Halifax Citizen noticing the approaching Provincial Exhibition to be held in this city, advises the people of Nova Scotia, as far as they can do so, to come up to it.—"Hamilton" says the Citizen "is too far distant from Nova Scotia to allow any of our farmers to manufacturers to compete in any of the above numerous classes, except perhaps in a few light materials in which the cost of transportation would not be large; but it is not too distant for Nova Scotia farmers and manufacturers to be able to attend the Exhibition, and profit by any improvements they may see there. We would particularly urge upon agricultural societies the wisdom of sending agents to the Exhibition, to compare the horses, cattle, sheep and pigs, with the stock now raised in this Province. Ontario has won the reputation of being the best stock raising country on the continent, and we need not object to receive improved breeds of cattle from her; although we do refuse to accept her aggressive political theories."

The New Princess.—The daughter of the Prince and Princess of Wales who was christened Aug. 6, received the names of Victoria Alexandra Olga Mary. The sponsors were Her Majesty, the Queen, represented by the Duchess of Cambridge; the Emperor of Russia, represented by the Russian Ambassador, the Baron de Brunow; the Queen of the Hellenes, represented by the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg Strelitz; the Dowager, Queen of Denmark, the Grand Duke Cesarewitch, Prince Arthur, the Dowager, Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg Strelitz, the Princess Mary Adelaide, of Teck, Prince Louis, of Hesse, Princess Frederick, Anhalt Dessau, and Prince George, of Hesse.

NEW SCHOOL BOOKS.

A cry is reaching us from every direction against the continual changes in School Books. Teachers are accused of being whimsical in their choice of books, and the Educational Department, Toronto, is also coming in for a share of the blame. There can be no doubt in the mind of any one but that some limit should be put to the introduction of text books, so that parents may not be continually annoyed with the changes. It is true that teachers are not wholly to blame, although we may not be able to declare them exempt from a share of it. Too often the teacher has his favourite authors, and now and then we may expect to find him doing a little to introduce them; but the weight of the burden of the constant changes of late, must fall upon the Educational Department, and publishers. The general book traders are losers rather than gainers by all these changes, and it may sometimes be doubted whether the people really receive an equivalent for the extra costs. The department of Public Instruction have lately been desirous of putting the whole advantage of authorship into the hands of parliament, and by this have aroused the Toronto and other publishers so that to save themselves from the storm of indignant traders, Dr. Ryerson permitted Messrs. Campbell & Son and others to bring out a new series of school books—some of these are considered an improvement on the old and some are not. They, however, have received the sanction of the Board, and are now the text books, and after January next no others will be legal. In their excessive love for change the department has taken to revising some of the school books; we say here taken to revising, but we mean have agreed to reject or refused to allow of the use of any book that is not brought out by their own pet authors. About a year ago Millar's Ballion, revised by Mr. Chesnut, was published and an edition sold as the only authorized grammar. Mr. Chesnut, however, declines in the estimation of the authorship, and now in about a year or so another Millar's Ballion is published with a few immaterial changes, not at all affecting the value of the work, and yet all are forced to throw away the books of last year and get copies of the new. How long the mass of the people will permit the affairs of our educational system to be under the control of men of so whimsical a turn of mind we cannot predict, but a change is needed either in the men or in their manner of conducting their book business.

There is a new power arising in our educational system that will tend very much to modify the management of the educational department, and that is the Grammar and Common School Teachers' Associations.—Already they offer a bold front to the designs of that department in Toronto, and already that power begins to feel itself besieged. Public opinion, too, so expressed in our leading newspaper correspondence is sure to overpower the Chief Superintendent eventually. At present it will prove a check and after a while will compel him to give way. It is true that he always makes a pretext of following public opinion, but if he acted in every county as he did in Peterboro, when he took his tour through the Province, we may safely assert that he never heard an expression of opinion, for he left before discussion commenced. Just as in the flank business. He never condescends to solicit the favor of those likely to be able to give him the favor he asks for it. He is determined to [illegible] the law, and has [illegible] Government changes.

There is another branch of the [illegible] that requires consideration and that is the [illegible] of Dr. Ryerson, of in the Normal School text [illegible] publie are led to believe that they are receiving 100 per cent on prize books ordered from the department. This we venture to assert is hardly true, and we assert for the following reasons:—First, no [illegible] books marked at regular retail prices. But buying the books in large quantities, three or four thousand dollars worth at a time. Dr. Ryerson would get a large discount; for every one thousand dollars worth of books he would pay about $600, and the larger orders better terms can be procured. To come down to our ten dollar orders for prizes, the books would cost the department $6, perhaps less, and the trustees send $5 of every $10. Thus instead of getting 100 per cent the people receive a small advantage of 20 per cent, not that perhaps. When we add to this the purchase of small cards for prizes that are never used, or not more than once, out of ten times received, the department really and truly does not give ten per cent; is it possible that the government of Canada is so much a state that it requires to carry on the book business for a revenue.—We admit that the people who send for books do save one dollar in five or six, but then they have to refund the dollar into the general revenue. But, supposing all that, to say that $50 dollars equals $100; this is a style of reckoning that few boys find even in Sangster's Arithmetic, although published under the immediate eye of the department. The worst feature of the book establishment is the deception that is inculcated in this false offer of 100 per cent, when it is only 20 per cent or so. To make it plainer, $100 worth of books from the department $80.—To obtain $100 worth from the department, trustees must send them $50; but as their books cost them only $60, trustees should send but $30 so as to receive 100 per cent

THE RAILROAD.

The several meetings of Council to consider the By-law to permit the railway company to extend their road along Bethune street, resulted in the defeat of the By-law unless the damages to parties along the proposed extension on Bethune street should be first secured. Messrs. Edwards and W. Hall set down the damages at $2,600 or so. This the company refused to pay, and in consequence the By-law was lost.

Mr. Burnham then succeeded in getting a resolution passed, withdrawing the right to extend along King street and the river bank as was intended last fall. Thus the company are now compelled to stop proceedings or seek a new route, and rumor has it that they intend crossing at Mr. Burnham's point and going through Ashburnham.

The demand of the property-holders on Bethune street was just, and the Council acted right in protecting them. The railway people think they should not be asked to pay those damages, that is saying in effect that the Town Council should pay them, for it is very evident that they should be paid. The question is, is the extension to Lakefield so much advantage to the town that the Council should expend a few thousand dollars in procuring it? For our part, we think that it is not worth a cent, for as much as is contained in Mud Lake, and on that question we believe the ratepayers would be willing to grant a little aid.

The company, however, is already at considerable expense in preparing to go to Lakefield, which they ought not to be called upon to bear; those councillors who misled the company by inducing them to go on, and said that all would be right, must see that the company has been made to suffer by inducing them to expend money before they were sure of the right of way. The company should be honestly dealt with as well as individuals, for they have rights as well as amenabilities. Now, we are told the town will suffer if the road should go through Ashburnham. We cannot see how the town will suffer. It cannot be of much consequence whether the road runs through the north or through the south of the town.—The station will remain where it is, then where can the loss be? And if it runs thro' Ashburnham, what will it benefit that village? Not a cent now; the saw mills are gone. Indeed his right must be as clear as his who saw Ashburnham in the County of Hastings last fall, who saw the town suffering because the locomotive, in getting to our station, passes through that village. That the village will grant the company $5000 to get the road into the village is very doubtful unless they get a station also, and even then it may fairly be questioned if this would be sufficient to induce them to give a bonus of $5,000.

News received us on Monday that an attempt had been made to assassinate Queen Victoria, who is now in Switzerland for her health, but yesterday's news contradicted it. It turned out to be an insane Englishman who was endeavoring to get into Her Majesty's presence, and rumor named him into a Fenian. Diabolical though the intentions of the Feninn be, we need hardly fear that a Fenian would drag her foot-steps through Europe; nor can the organization hope any good to come out of assassination, and as specially of an unoffending party whose crime can only be that she wields the sceptre of the most civilized country in the world.

The Rev. William Darling, of Toronto, preached a sermon on Sunday last in explanation of recent changes in modes of worship. He remarked that the church permitted either a very elaborate or very ornate, or plain mode of service, and that there was latitude within the church for such divergence. He explained the position and manner of the new worship as orderly, and in accordance with the mind of the church. Bowing at the Gloria is in accordance with "angels veiling their faces with their wings before the Throne." There is not a "thus saith the Lord" in the explanation from first to last.

Meagher.—An Irishman, named Quinn, in Quebec, stabbed a Canadian on Monday, in the abdomen, making a fatal wound about 6 inches in length. Hereat, the Canadian, died about 2 hours afterward. An old grudge is said to be the cause. Fears were entertained that there would be a riot on account of it.

It is reported that the Fenians in the States are collecting large sums of money for Whalen's defence.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Friday evening.—Present—the Mayor, and Messrs. Chalmers, [illegible]

[illegible] to explain the damages that [illegible] contained by parties owning property along Bethune street, the proposed extension of the railway south of Hunter street, was taken.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Hickey, the Council went into Committee of the whole.

A petition from one hundred and nine ratepayers, to the Council, asking the Council to oppose the Ashburnham extension of parties who will suffer damage by the proposed extension of the railroad along Bethune street, was presented, and on motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Hickey, the By-law granting permission to construct said extension, was read, and on motion received.

The following is the Petition of Ratepayers:

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough.

The memorial of the undersigned ratepayers humbly sheweth:

That your memorialists understand that a By-law to come before your consent which if passed would give permission to the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company to extend their railway along Bethune street without compensating the owners of property on this street for any damages they would sustain by the construction, and working of such railway.

That usually before Railway Company can commence operations the right of way has to be secured and settled for and your memorialists see no reason why an exception should be made in this case, especially as this company is a very prosperous one, and must have made a large amount of money by the trade of your constituents.

Your memorialists consider that it would be encouraging an act of great injustice if your Council should allow such a By-law to pass, without securing to all who may suffer, a just and reasonable compensation.

Your memorialists therefore pray that as the guardians of your constituents (not of the railway company) your honorable Council would see that a just and reasonable compensation is secured to all who may suffer by such extension.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

PETITION OF PROPERTY OWNERS.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough.

The memorial of the undersigned humbly sheweth:

That your memorialists are owners of property on or contiguous to Bethune street, in the Town of Peterboro, in which they have made valuable improvements.

That your memorialists learn with regret that it is the intention of Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Co. to ask your honorable Council to pass a By-law to give to the Railway Co. the authority of your Council to construct a railway along the said Bethune street, by which the property of your memorialists will be seriously injured.

While your memorialists admit that individual or private interests should not be allowed to prevent public improvement, they also submit that private property should not be sacrificed nor individuals suffer for public improvement; if the public or Company are benefitted by a work, the public or Company should indemnify individuals who may suffer by such work.

Your memorialists would therefore pray that before such By-law is passed provision should be made to protect the just rights of your memorialists, and also that you should consider your authority as a Council to prevent the Railway Company from commencing any work on said street which may injure our property, until your memorialists are first indemnified for such injury.

And your memorialists as in duty bound will ever pray.

The first clause of the By-law was read, when, after some discussion it was moved by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Dickson,—That the first clause of the By-law be amended, by adding thereto the following:—"Provided that this By-law shall not go into operation until the claims of adjoining property-holders along the line of the said proposed route shall have been settled, or security therefor given, according to the report of Messrs. Hall and Edwards, nor until a resolution of the Council shall have passed, declaring such compensation paid or security therefor given to the satisfaction of this Council.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, the committee rose, the Council resumed, and the chairman reported the By-law read a second time, thus amended,

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Chamberlen,—That the following be added to the By-law, provided always that the By-law of this Council, allowing the company to construct their line of road along King street, and thence along the bank of the river, and the same is hereby repealed.—Lost.

The Council adjourned till Monday night.

MONDAY NIGHT.

The Council met. All the members present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and signed.

A communication was read from Col. Haultain, tendering his resignation as Grammar School Trustee, owing to private arrangements calling him from home for the next twelve months. The resignation was received.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Dohany, Mr. Toole was appointed Trustee in the stead of Col. Haultain, resigned.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Burnham, the Council went into committee of the whole on the recommendation of the By-law. Mr Helm in the chair.

Mr. Scott said that his resolution of previous meeting should have been added to the last clause, and made a resolution to that effect.

In amendment, it was moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Burnham, provided always that this By-law shall not go into operation until payment of principal or interest upon the claims of the adjoining property-holders along the proposed route of railway, upon part of Bethune street, according to the report of Messrs. Hall and Edwards, shall have been first arranged to the approval of the Council to be signified by resolution to that effect.

After discussion this amendment was withdrawn, and

It was moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Chamberlen,—That the following amendment be added:—"Provided always that the By-law of this Council, allowing the company to construct their line of road along King street, and thence along the bank of the river, northward, be, and the same is hereby repealed.—Carried.

The committee arose and reported By-law duly amended.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

POLICE COURT THURSDAY.

Peggie Oddy and Mrs. Mahoney were brought from the lock-up on the charge, by Constable Hutchison, of being drunk and disorderly on the streets on Wednesday. Peggie pleaded guilty to the charge, and was fined $1 and costs. Mrs. Mahoney pleaded not guilty to the charge, and was fined $1 and costs, or three days if preferred to go; but extremity was spoken. She had to go for 21 days.

Mrs. Mahoney was next brought forward, charged by Constable Hutchison, with being drunk and disorderly.

Mrs. Mahoney—He drunk! Faith an' its yerself that was drunk, that's who it was that was drunk, and not me. That vile par one was hid ag me clothes, and he going away I was but they hid my clothes.

Constable Hutchison said that he was taken to "Goose Island" to bring her away and found her drunk and abusing the people in that locality.

Here she interrupted him with a flourish about noses, heads, decks, children and porkers, and appealed to anybody only her betters for a fair hearing of their claims, and hoped the Mayor would give her a little to do so.

Peggie again pleaded to be let off and she would drink no more.

Mrs. Mahoney to Peggie—Peggie, quit drinking child, quit drinking; an advice easier given than taken by others.

The Mayor informed Mrs. Mahoney she must go up for 21 days. She then went on her bare knees and entreated that she might not be sent to jail. A woman of her age, a sober woman that had no whiskey nor money to get it! Not a copper of gold, silver, bills or brass, no more than a dog had a soul. But it was no go, she had to go for 21 days.

RIFLE MATCH.

The following are the successful marksmen:—

All Comer's Match.—1st, Wm. English; 2nd, Capt. Rogers; 3rd, Sergt. McComber; 4th, Thomas Gordon; 5th, Mr. Leslie; 6th D. Campbell.

The Company Match was won by the Ashburnham Company.

Association Match.—1st, Sergt. Brown; 2nd, Wm. English; 3rd, John Jeffrey; 4th Corp. Ainslie; 5th, P. McIntyre; 6th, F. Hall; 7th, Lieut.-Col. Poole; 8th, J. W. Dunnett.

Volunteers' Match.—1st Wm. English; 2nd, Capt. Green; 3rd, F. Hall; 4th, Col. Poole—returned to the Association; 5th, G. H. May; 6th, W. Godfrey; 7th, Wm. M. McDonald.

Consolation.—1st, Wm. Scully; 2nd Sergt. Irwin; 3rd, John Godfrey; 4th, Wm. Montgomery; 5th, Sergt. Green; 6th, Thos. Rutherford.

The Match passed off very quietly. The prizes were presented in the Drill Shed

Furniture.—We invite attention to Messrs. Cox & Comstock's advertisement. They have a splendid stock of new furniture on hand which they are prepared to sell at moderate prices. They deserve a call. In the undertaking department they have a first class hearse, and are prepared to furnish every thing in this line cheaper than usual, they say. Messrs. Cox & Comstock are also preparing to manufacture largely.

Accident.—We learn that Jeremiah Tagney, a teamster of Messrs. Campbell & Huston, fell off a load of lumber on Monday, and broke his collar bone, bruised his shoulder badly, and received a severe cut on the head. Dr. O'Sullivan was called in to dress his wounds, and under his treatment Tagney is progressing favorably. It is believed that the fall was owing to dizziness from the effect of the sun.

Literary Club.—We are requested to state that a meeting of the Directors of the Peterboro Literary Club will be held in their rooms, over the Royal Canadian Bank, on Friday evening (to-morrow) at 8 o'clock.

Killed.—A man named Grogan fell off the platform of the street cars in Toronto, on Saturday. The wheels passed over him; he died about midnight.

A principal witness against Whalen has cleared to the United States. O'Farrell, of Quebec, it is said will defend Whalen.

DUMMER COUNCIL.

Dummer, 8th Aug, 1868.

Council met at 10 a. m. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and signed.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: To R. Romaine, Esq., for printing $8.87; Mr. Edmund Gardner, for keeping Mrs. Jackson, $7.50; Mr. Robert Lakey, sheep killed by dogs, $7.50; Mr. John Hendrue sheep killed by dogs, $9.

The Clerk was instructed to notify the Road Commissioners to have all the jobs let by them completed by the 15th of September next, or forfeit the bonds of the contractors.

On motion of Mr. Rose, seconded by Mr. Spence, the Council went into committee on the rates and expenditures of the present year, and the following rates in the dollar were struck: For County, 2 cents; general school rate, 2½ mills; Township, 4 mills; S. S. No. 1, 4 mills; No. 2, 9 mills; No. 3, 1 cent; No. 4, 1 cent; No. 5, 1½ cents; U, No. 6, 8 mills; U, No. 7, 2 cents; No. 9, 1 9-10 cents.

The Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. John Wason, Jun., to pay a further sum of $1.66, as discount on the $40 paid in silver, and take out his shop license.

$600, was appropriated as road moneys, $100 to each Division.

On motion, the clerk was instructed to notify Mr. John Wason, sen., that the Council intends opening up the original allowance of road between the east halves of lots 10 and 11, in the 3rd concession, and $30 to be taken from the dog fund, was ordered to be expended thereon.

Mr. David Rose was appointed Road Commissioner for Division no 1; Mr. Henry Ferguson for No. 3; Mr. R. Spence for No. 11; Mr. Alex. Calder, under the supervision of the Reeve; for No. 4; Mr. George Payne for No. 5. Mr. A. B. Reid was appointed Collector.

A By-law to authorize the levying and collecting of certain taxes for the present year: A By-law to affix certain penalties to the breaking of any of the Township By-laws: A By-law to provide for the payment of certain sums of money, and a By-law to appoint Road Commissioners and Collectors for the present year, were read and passed.

Council adjourned to the 10th of October next.—Com.

CONGRATULATING THE QUEEN.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I beg to [illegible] Council for [illegible] of congratulating our Queen on the [illegible] of her daughter. I [illegible] myself, but I [illegible] to see that [illegible] was not represented. From Monday to Saturday evenings 55 hand were employed to the town yard—some 20 of which were discarded and the remainder so badly housed in the open to cause us that it was not considered advisable to allow them to be sold for food. Friday night among the arrivals there was a bull—eight removed from Hudson cattle which were admitted into the yards after being inspected. On Saturday a further inspection resulted in the discovery of several animals under suspicion, symptoms of the malady, and Mr. Lundy at once ordered the owner that he could not ship or sell the cattle for a few days. The cattle are now detained, and will not be allowed to be shipped until the inspector is satisfied as to their healthy condition. The drove of cattle in which the disease is to be met, are now quartered on Mr. Cluxton's farm, on the Ennismore road, about four miles from the city. Mr. Lundy having purchased the animals from the shippers at Millbrook, paying down. Only 27 of the number are under the quarantine having been abandoned to the owners proper. About half of one 27 are sick, and the proprietors are those the which number will die. All due precautions will be carried out in shooting cattle with symptoms, at once [illegible] and diseases [illegible] will be promptly condemned.

Sudden Death.—The Bobcaygeon [illegible] Smith Barker, Esq., police magistrate of this town, while walking along Front street was observed by Mr. W. J. Barker, plan cur engineer, to stop suddenly upon his heels. Mr. Barker caught him in his arms, and with the assistance of others carried him into the store of Messrs. Graham & Gordon, where he was laid on the counter. Drs. Dickson and Bendelari were in attendance immediately, but their services were not required, as the spirit had already left the body. Deceased was only observed to breathe once or twice after being admitted into the store.—Death is supposed to have been caused by disease of the heart. Mr. Barker was an old resident of the town and was universally respected. He filled the office of Police Magistrate for several years, ever since that office was established, the duties of which he discharged in a manner that gave very general satisfaction. The suddenness of his death cast a gloom over the whole town, and his untimely end is deservedly regretted by a large circle of friends and relations.

The Rev. W. M. Rogers.—We exceedingly regret to hear that the Rev. W. M. Rogers, the esteemed pastor for some time past of the Free Church here, is about to leave this place. Since Mr. Rogers' arrival as pastor he has won the sincere affection and esteem of a far wider circle of friends than is comprised in his own church. His ability as a public speaker, his kindness and urbanity, and his willingness on all occasions to forward every good cause, have all contributed to give him a high place in the regard of the people of the town. We hope the members of the Free Church may yet induce him to remain, as his removal we would regard as a loss to Perth. It is exceedingly doubtful whether that congregation will ever get an abler preacher than Mr. Rogers—they are fairly well met get a more estimable or pious minister.—Perth Expositor.

London, Aug. 21.—Despatches were received in this city today, giving the particulars of a heart-rending calamity which occurred in North Wales yesterday afternoon, whereby twenty five persons lost their lives. A train of cars from Holyhead, containing pas-engers and mails from Ireland, which was was proceeding toward Rivers pool at the usual speed, met with a sad accident today at the little town of Abergely, in the county of Denbigh. A long train of loaded potteboom trucks had just been switched off on the swing to make way for the Irish mail, but the switchman had neglected to replace the switch, and a dreadful collision was the consequence. Several persons, all passengers in the Irish mail train, were killed outright, and many others badly injured. The cars in both trains were reduced to a shapeless mass. The concussion produced an explosion of the petroleum which instantly enveloped both trains in flames. Before it could be subdued, eighteen persons had been literally burnt to ashes.

The Benefit of Advertising.—The Belleville Town Council proposing some dredging to be done, advertised for tenders from parties willing to do the work. The result is an offer to do it for 19½ cents per yard. Our Town Commissioners are paying 30 cents per yard, making a difference of more than $4,000 on the work contracted for, over what the Belleville contractor gets. But the Belleville people advertised. Taxes also are lower in Belleville than in Cobourg.—Star.

At Toronto, on the 22nd instant, two men named William Smith, night watchman of the Great Western Railway, and James Richardson, workman, while standing talking on the track near Queen's wharf this morning, were run over by a Grand Trunk engine and instantly killed. Their legs were completely severed from their bodies at the knees, and their heads smashed to a jelly.

The Welsh Defence Fund.—We learn that a meeting is being got up for the benefit of this fund, and that 400 tickets were sold on Saturday and Sunday. The state of feeling among the parties engaged in this affair may be more easily imagined than described.—Witness.

The following error occurred at page 67 of the Militia Act, cap. 40, sec. 16, line 9 of that section:—For "nine thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine," read one thousand eight hundred and sixty nine."

It is reported that Sir Robert Napier will be appointed Commander-in-Chief of the forces in India for the term of five years, during which period the salary amounts to $375,000.

A man named Bell, of Toronto, is missing since Thursday. He is supposed to have drowned himself.

The other evening a seaman, named John Brown, belonging to Her Majesty's ship "Duke of Wellington," met with a frightful accident at Woodward's mills, gents, which is at present exhibiting at Portsmouth, there h as act of brotherliness. He was in company with several of his shipmates, and by way of [illegible] pass he would show them that he was not afraid of the lions. He accordingly thrust his right hand through the bars of the lion's cage, when one of the animals sprang forward and seized it in his mouth. The agonized cries of the unfortunate man created a most painful excitement in the menagerie, and it was not until the keepers had beaten the brute off with an iron bar that the hand was released. The back of the hand and the wrist were most horribly lacerated, the flesh having literally been torn off. As soon as he was extricated from his painful situation, Brown fainted away.

Ryan's Worms.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (see the testimony of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a sure, harmless, and eminently pleasant [illegible] and if taken to connect with invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25 cts per box.

Dr. Chilly's Pills a radical Cure for Disease of the Bowels.

Dr. Dunn's Empire Hair Gloss [illegible] the roots of the Hair.

The Montreal Witness says:—"We learn on the best authority that the amount to be paid for the construction of the Eastern Extension Railroad, will in all probability be assumed by the Dominion Government, as the liability that fund will have part of the in ordinational loan, makes indeed the monopoly demand it more reasonable price. If this amount, $900,000, be assumed by the General Government, the New Annuities will probably stand as follows:—Ontario $1,400,000; Quebec $1,100,000. In this case $15,000 a year will have to be deducted from the New Brunswick subsidy. But even then, after 1871, we shall have about $60,000 a year more for roads and bridges than the average of the eight years."

The Montreal Lead Fund—Investment Securities.—The Toronto Telegraph says, the largest borrowers from the Consolidated Municipal Loan Fund are, Port Hope, $200,000; Lanark and Renfrew, $200,000; Cobourg, $200,000; Brantford, $200,000; Kingston, (corporation) $200,000; London, $274,000; Brockville, (town) $200,000; Niagara, $200,000; Durham, $200,000; North Simcoe, $200,000; Ottawa, $200,000; and Berwick township, $200,000. In all no less 46 borrowers, representing an aggregate loan of $7,200,000 of which there has been about interest enough paid during the last fifteen years to pay for the paper on which the last parliamentary returns are printed!

The Montreal Alexander Mail regrets to learn that in consequence of the commencement of the Hon. D'Arcy McGee, two of his daughters, who have been residents of Victoria, Australia, for upwards of seven years, have been deprived of a considerable resource which they had relied upon and received from their late brother.

Two young women named Anne Thompson, aged 22, and Augusta Teasley, aged 18, were drowned on the 19th inst., at Burlington Beach, near Hamilton; the latter by getting beyond her depth whilst talking, the former by going to the assistance of her companion.

A Witness Absconded—Ottawa, Aug. 26.—Pat Gross, a witness against Whelan, cleared out today. As the time drawn nigh, the guard of chevieille commenced.—A screw is loose somewhere.

Huge fires are still reported as raging in the northern townships of Lesther, Anwatsatta, Melancthon and Nottawasaga. In some places the mail is red hot to a depth of two or three feet.

Hon. D'Arcy McGee supported two sisters in the colony of Victoria, and by his death they are reduced to want.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box

The Erie Canal.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1861 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sales of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism, fruit-bites, chilblains, &c., is increasing much faster! Sold by all Medicine dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, excoriated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It oil cases the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells the coagulable lymph and tough secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and Can Say in Confidence and Truth of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—Never has it Failed in a Single Instance to Effect a Cure, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, and Pledge our Reputation for the fulfillment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phethisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bee tens, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Rogers's Magnolia Balm. It instantly and completely removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no mineral injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at $1 per bottle.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

THIS well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, one taking Pills, by return mail.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Demas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Otis ester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

"Jos' so!"—"Exactly I"—Salem Shingle said: they were there "every time." If he fail "every" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or miserably oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins again and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" • • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" • • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • • Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD New York City.

" • • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and emaciated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" • • • The Plantation Bitters have saved me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no such testimonials is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell, so you get "good." See our private stamp over the cork.

Appointments of All-England Eleven.

London, Aug. 20.—A selected eleven from the most celebrated cricketers of England will leave Liverpool on the 2nd September and will arrive in New York on the 12th and 13th. The following are their appointments in America:—During the week of their arrival they will play a match of the selected twenty-two from the various clubs in the State of New York and the city of New York and its environs. During the second week they will play matches in Montreal with twenty-two selected from the officers of H. M. Regts., and from the Canadian cricket clubs. In the third week, they play two matches in the neighborhood of Boston against twenty-two favorite Massachusetts cricket clubs. The fourth week will be given to Philadelphia, where they will meet the American cricketers again, who made the best stand, and played the best matches against the English cricketers in 1859 of any of the series. The fifth week will be given to New York, when, possible, they may be induced to enter into a contest with an American club at the game of base ball, for which the winner party refused the offer of $3,000 to play a game on the Fashion Course. There is considerable speculation among leading English cricketers as coming events, which, it is fully expected, will end in a series of victories for the eleven.

Curious Boy.—'Jacob,' said a father, 'yesterday I forbade you associating with the neighbor's children any more, and to-day you have disobeyed me. The next time I catch you there I shall punish you.' 'The next day Jack was over there again, totally oblivious to the interdictions till he saw his father enter the neighbor's yard with a rod in his hand. Jack made for the fence, over which he leaped, pursued by his father, and ran home; there he was caught. 'Now, my conf'ound the irritated father, 'what did I tell you I would do yesterday?' 'You told me, father, that if you caught me there again that you would punish me,' 'Well,' said the father, 'Hold on, father,' said the little reprobate, who knew if he could make his father laugh the matter would be all right; 'you didn't catch me there, you catched me here!' The desired effect was produced, and the rod was dropped.

Against Long Sermons.—A minister's wife says, 'The first time I took my oldest boy to church, when he was two and a half years old, I managed with carmels, and frowns, and candy, to keep him very still till the sermon was half done. By this time his patience was exhausted, and he climbed to his feet, and stood on his seat, looking at the preacher—his father—quite intently. Then as if he had hit upon a certain relief for his troubles, he pulled me by the shoulder to attract my attention, and exclaimed in a distinct voice, 'Mamma, make papa say Amen.'

A Tocsin Case.—A little darkey was recently found sitting upon the stoop of a fashionable house near Saratoga, crying pitifully. "What's de matter wid you?" asked a colored woman. "De matter's said —double trouble all ober de house. Father am drunk—mudder has gone home and close—she broke de lookin glass wide as de mantelpiece—I baby got her eyes full of hair pepper, an de little New Antony put de mustard on he hair for goose grease, and "Goshgeon put pepper in my coffee to make it be warm." De dog licked Ned's face an got he mouth full ob mustard, an flew under de bed a howlin. De kitten got her head in a milk pot, an I cut her head off to take de pitcher, and den I had to break de pitcher to get de head out, an de way I'll get licked when mudder come home for dattin de bed afire, will be a sin.

A Tare.—A father was one evening teaching his little boy to recite his Sunday school lesson. It was from the 16th chapter of Matthew, wherein he related the parable of a miraculous multitude who went about sowing tares. "What is a tare?" asked the anxious parents.—"Tell me my son, what is a tare?"—"You had 'em." "John what do you mean?" asked the astonished parent opening his eyes rather wide "Last week when you didn't come home for three days." said Johnny, "I heard mother tell aunt Susan that you was off on a tare.' The Sunday school lesson was brought to an abrupt close, and Johnny sent off to bed.

A young lady—a sensible girl—gives the following catalogue of different kinds of love: 'The sweetest, a mother's love; the strongest, a woman's love; the dearest, a man's love; and the quietest, longest, strongest, dearest love, a love of a bonnet.'

Riches.—Misery assails riches, as lightning does the highest towers. Or as the tree that is heavily laden with fruit breaks its own boughs, so does riches destroy the virtue of their possessor.

"I have discovered the philosopher's stone," said John Randolph, "which turns everything into gold; 'pay as you go."

A great fire is raging in the woods in the neighborhood of Collingwood, and the town is in danger of destruction.

It is very good discretion not to make too much of any man at first, because one cannot always hold out that proportion.

There cannot be a pleasant smile on the lips of the hopeless. The blow which crushes the life will shatter some spoke.

Deliberates with caution, acts with decision; and yields with graciousness, or opposes with firmness.

Little Things in Religious Life.

Little words not eloquent nor learned, little deeds, not miracles or battles never won great cry or mighty martyrdom, make up the true christian life. The little, unnoticed sacrifices, like the lightning; the waters of Siloam, 'that go softly' on their much mission of refreshment, and the 'repairs of the river great and mighty' rushing down in torrent, unsubdued tones, are the true symbols of a holy life.

The avoidance of flattery, little sins, little inadvertencies, little indulgences of self and of the flesh, little acts of indolence or indecision, or aberrations, or accordance, but a requires constant abnegation from high integrity, little bits of worldliness and gayety, little unfairness to the feelings or wishes of others, little outbreaks of temper and uncleanness, or self-love, or vanity; the avoidance of such little things as these go far to make up at least the negative beauty of a holy life.

And true attention to the little duties of the day and hour, in public transactions or private dealings, or kindly arrangements to the little words and tones, little benevolences, or forbearances, or tenderernesses; little self denials, self restraints and self thoughtfulness, little plans of quiet kindness and thoughtful consideration for others; punctuality and method and true aim, in the ordering of each day—things are the active developments of a holy life, the rich and Divine meshes of which it is composed.

What makes you green hill so beautiful? Not the outstanding peak, or the stately elm, but the bright sward which clothes its slopes, composed of innumerable blades of grass. It is of small things that a life is made up, and he who will acknowledge as little as great acts that which is built up of the great things, will find little in Bible characters to admire or copy.

Let not Your Heart be Troubled.

Sweetly floating down the centuries come to us the tender words, 'Let not your heart be troubled.' Look up, faint toiler in this work day life, and catch the music of this sentence as it falls from hallowed lips—'Let not your heart be troubled.' Jesus says it to you. What love beams on his face! What tenderness! He knows how sick and frail you are. He sees that your feet are bleeding as you press along through the defile of poverty. He sees the parched lip, he hears the tremulous sigh, and he knows it is for love of him, if needed you are trying to follow in his precious way.

'Let not your heart be troubled.' The path of life is short. Do you tread on thorns? Each step makes it shorter each day you are nearer laying the burden down.

'Let not your heart be troubled.' You are going home. The care and the toil, and want of comfort will all be forgotten as soon as you reach your Father's House. No more home sickness; no more reaching out for sympathy; no more weary, lonely hours.

'Let not your heart be troubled.'—'Where I am there ye shall be also.' Look forward. The former hosts will die away; the test will be tried; the gold will appear.

Have you lost friends? He wishes to be the beloved of your heart. Have you lost wealth? It is that he may support you entirely. Are you sick? He is the Physician. Are you a helpless widow? Thy maker is thy husband. Are you bereft of earthly kindred? Jesus is your elder brother. Do you suffer? Lean upon him; he carries in his bosom all those who are too feeble to walk by the way.

How tender is his love! 'As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you.' Rest upon Jesus.

'Let not your heart be troubled.'—S. S Times.

A Bridesmaid Arrested for Larceny.

About two weeks ago Mary Gleason, a domestic in the house of Mr. M. Ramsay, Sherbrooke street, was so far forgetful of the moral teachings of her parents and the eighth commandment that she appropriated to her own use a quantity of clothing, watches and jewelry, and then departed. She left the house at six o'clock and sold some of the clothing and a watch and left by the seven o'clock boat for Quebec. The police authorities did not feel inclined to incur the expense of going to the ancient capital, as the value of the clothing was not very large, and it was held probable that the acquisitive damsel would return to the metropolis. This supposition proved to be well founded and yesterday Mary came back, a smiling bridesmaid, so neatly ornamented in the blue and white, and having such an abundant supply of tears as young ladies on such occasions feel it their duty to extravagantly shed, and the stern representative of the law had the utmost difficulty in fulfilling his duty. To break up such a pleasant party, to carry away one of the bridesmaids, and cause the happy and smiling bridegroom so much sorrow on such a felicitous occasion, must have been harrowing to the feeling of any man. The mind had simply broken one of the commandments of the decalogue, and was now in explanation, no doubt for this sin, aiding and encouraging as far as possible without implicating herself the carrying out of the primeval law to man. She was ruthlessly torn away from her companion and taken to the police station. She appeared the morning with a white veil thrown on her lovely countenance; (she was about forty and rather plain) but the veil could not charm the police magistrate, and the fair Anne was sent to gaol for six months.—Montreal Gazette.

A Bad Cure.—The following story is told of a father of the Church: At an associated dinner a debate arose as to the rod in bringing up children. The doctor took the affirmative, and the chief opponent was a young minister, whose reputation for veracity was not very high. He maintained that parents often do harm to their children by unjust punishment, from not knowing the facts of the case. 'Why,' said he, 'the only time my father whipped me was for telling the truth.' 'Well,' retorted the doctor, 'it cured you of it, didn't it?'

Quoting Latin.—A learned and eminent city orator recently startled his audience by the following sentence: "Sir, let those beware who would trifle with the popular will. In the language of the poet, 'Fucilis descensus averni'—the voice of the people is the voice of God.' This is nearly as good as the illustration once used by a member of a certain Down East Legislature: 'Mr. Speaker,' said the member, referring to the question under debate, 'this matter is like Pandora's box—the more you see it, the worse it gets.'

A Good Reason.—'Mother,' said little Negmo one morning, after having fed on from his bed—'mother, I think I know why I fell out of bed last night. It was because I slept too near the place where I got in.' Musing a little while, as if in doubt whether he had given the right explanation, he added, 'No, that was not the reason. It was because I slept too near where I fell out.'

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary persons, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly to their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

J. H. GIBSON, M. D., Durham, C. E.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. V. & C.—Gentlemen:—I Wm. Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was a great debilitator. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Parker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; to a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a table spoonful, and rested well each night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Bailing of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was effected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Louis Josephus of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be relied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting in the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has in each instance some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annals of Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former success and celebrity, we feel bound in order to prove to the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the great cut boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

RING THE BELL SOFTLY.

Somebody has gone from this stranger world of ours,
No more to gather its thorns with its flowers;
No more to linger where sunbeams must fade;
Where, on all beauty, Death's fingers are laid;
Weary with mingling life's bitter and sweet,
Weary with parting and never to meet;
Some one has gone to the bright golden shore;
Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door!
Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door!

Some one is resting from sorrow and sin,
Happy where earth's conflicts enter not in;
Joyous as birds, when the morning is bright,
When sweet sunbeams have brought us their light;
Weary with sowing and never to reap;
Weary with labor and wakening sleep—
Some one's departed to heaven's bright shore;
Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door!
Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door!

Angels were anxiously longing to meet
One who is with them in Heaven's bright street,
Loved ones have whispered that some one is blest;
Free from earth's trials and taking sweet rest.
Yes; there is one more in angelic bliss—
One less to cheer-ish and one less to kiss;
One more departed to Heaven's bright shore;
Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door!
Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door!

Selections.

How One Man Found a Wife.

You will remember I was always considered a very pretty boy; and in early days, when we were all children, you used to say that I ought to have been a girl. When I was about twenty one years old I was staying one long vacation, with some friends of mine in the 110th regiment, then quartered in Ireland. In the regiment there was a certain Captain Dundee, who was rather a heavy, stupid fellow, though a pretty good officer, and who prided himself upon being very sharp. He used to boast that nobody could take him in, and that he would recognize a person in any conceivable disguise. I was very intimate with Captain Dundee, and, so far from the king men very sharp, I used to abuse him for his stupidity, and was always chaffing him on the subject.

One evening at mess, when Capt. Dundee was not present, bets were made that I could not pass an evening in his company, dressed as a lady, without his discovering me to be a man. I betted that I could do so.

Many officers took my side, and at last it ended in very heavy bets indeed being made between those who were for and by my friends, for I felt that their losing or gaining almost a fortune depended on me.

As the day drew near, their bets were doubled. I quite trembled for the result I may mention this, though I did not know it, almost all these bets were fictitious, as only proclaimed for the sake of keeping me up to the mark. In fact those concerned thoughtlessly wanted to have a jolly lark and were afraid of my backing out. As it was, I felt that about fifteen thousand pounds in bets depended on my getting through the evening safely in my assumed character as a young lady.

Captain Dundee had married a young lady—care for nothing, stick-at nothing Irish girl." I do not at all mean to say that she was really bad; but, from thoughtlessness, from a not over refined nature, and from very exuberant, unconfined spirits, she would rush into a scrape, little thinking or caring about the consequences, or how she should get out of it successfully.

The bet was that the first evening Mrs Fenwick could get an invitation for himself and an imaginary niece, Miss Fenwick to dine with the Dundees, I was to personate, or attempt to personate, the niece; and the said bet, moreover, to the effect that I should successfully deceive Captain Dundee till such time as the party separated, however late the hour might be.

Without my knowledge, Mrs. Dundee was at into the secret; hence all my trouble. She, in her wild Irish way quite entered into the joke, and at once determined to make confusion worse confounded.

Very soon a note came—stating that Capt and Mrs. Dundee requested the pleasure of Mr. and Miss Fenwick to dinner in a quiet way on the 10th instant Only one or two brother officers were coming.

The fatal day arrived. Remember, I now thought that thousands depended on the result, and that Mrs. Dundee was as ignorant as her husband of my intended appearance. Imagine me with a profusion of false black curls; a flower or two stuck here and there; no end of lady's jewelry—rings, ear rings, brooch, &c.; a thin muslin dress, with high body; my face skilfully painted. In fact, I was altogether very well made up by a first rate hand sent for from Dublin. Partly to keep up my courage and get me up to the mark, and partly because I knew that in my assumed character I must not drink much wine, I imbibed a considerable quantity before I started. Moreover, in a secret pocket I concealed a small flask of brandy, with which I hoped to be able to keep up spirits on the sly.

At table I played my part well. I talked and flirted, chattered about dancing and so forth, and protested I was about balls. Poor wretch that I was; I wish that I had my tongue; I was unwittingly rushing to destruction. I drank as much champagne as I dared in my assumed character, and was under the impression everything was going all right, and that my friends were quite sure to win their money Scarce y had the cloth been removed when Mrs. Dundee said to me:—

"I have a pleasing surprise for you all, good people. A few days ago I received an invitation from Sir George and Lady Cromwell to a ball at their house this evening, with permission to bring any of my friends. Sir George lives twelve miles off Dundee has secured the large omnibus from the inn, and ordered four horses, and we are to start at four o'clock. We can all go together; we shall have a jolly time and I am delighted to think that you will be able to enjoy yourself, Miss Fenwick."

Good gracious! how my heart sank within me. My friends must lose their money. I could never get through a ball. I said my dress was high and would not do for a ball.

"My maid," said Mrs. Dundee, "shall dress you in one of my evening dresses."

"No that she shan't," I almost shrieked out. "If I must go, I will go just as I am. I am so delicate that the doctors will not allow me to wear a low dress."

"Perhaps, dear, you would like her to dress your hair differently; she is very clever; or to put another wreath on your head, if desired?"

"Oh no, thank you," said I; and most bitterly did I inwardly abuse my luck, but I almost grasped at "If you have a spare room where I could wash my hands and just put my hair straight for myself, I would be very much obliged."

I was shown into a room, and sat down the very picture, I am sure of despair. It now began to flash across me too, that what was, to say the least a not over creditable joke among a few lucky brother officers, would be very dishonorable if practised on society at large; that it would be wrong of me to go to a ball at Sir George's disguised as a lady; that I might get into some awkward scrape; that I might be the means of unintentionally causing pain and shame to some ladies

O dear! I was doubting whether I should be ill, and have myself conveyed home; or whether I should send for Mrs. Dundee, and make a clean breast of it, little thinking that all the time the wretch knew my fix. But then my friends would lose fifteen thousand pounds. Oh horrible! Just at that moment my hand had unluckily touched the pocket in which was my flask; to pull it out and drain it was only the work of a moment or two. My courage returned at once; my spirits rose only too rapidly. I would go through with it, I would win. My ample wadded into thin air—I forgot them.—I was not drunk, but terribly excited about it.

Soon the lady's maid entered with hot water, brushes, &c. I remember I felt very much inclined to cluck her under the chin, and ask her to get me some more brandy on the sly. The mere thought, however, steadied me at once as it struck me how nearly I had made a mess of the whole matter.

I sat down before the glass, touched up my hair, somewhat composed my flushed face, shook out my skirts, rinsed my mouth with eau de cologne, to remove the smell of brandy, and got scent on a new lace pocket handkerchief I had borrowed from Mrs. Dundee. I had often acted a lady's part in private theatricals, and was no fair in my work.

When I descended to the drawing room, Mrs. Dundee looked me over. Oh, how I shuddered when she touched one of my curls and wished to put it quite straight Knowing as she did, my assumed character, she must have been mightily amused at the way in which I said:

"O please don't. I hate all such finishing touches of every kind."

In due course of time the four-horse bus came round, and we drove to Sir George Cromwell's. My spirits had again sunk to zero; I feared I should not be able to keep up my character, and instinctively felt that I was doing wrong. O those horrible bets! There were several of the 110th in the room at the time. I danced with two. One was in my secret, the other was not. Any one who had overheard us would have been very much amazed at the conversation between my partner, who was in the secret, and my self.

"Feed, my boy, when will supper come? Do take me to some room where I can get some bitter beer or something to drink."

"Can't do it, old fellow, at any price; you would be found out, and I should lose my money; you must get on as best you can without drink."

"But I am dying with thirst; I can't hold out till supper time, and my pluck is oozing out at my fingers' ends, for I feel I am in a mess, and I am sure I shall put my foot into it and be discovered if I do not get some stimulant to keep me up."

"Can't help it, my boy; you must do your best. I tell you what you had better do—smuggle your flask out of your pocket, and give it to me; I will nibble with sherry; and then, while you and I take the curtain together on the terrace which propriety allows you must contrive to drink it."

Soon supper was announced, and I felt better. It, however, my partner, who was Fred, had not been in the secret, he would have been astonished to see how very much I ate, and how very many glasses I drank on the sly when I thought nobody was noticing. Fred watched one side of the table, and I the other. When we thought no one was looking, he would give me a kick; and if I was satisfied that I was not watched on my side, down went the champagne in the twinkling of an eye.

At length the company began to disperse, and rather quickly, too, for the rain was pouring, and an awful thunder storm evidently coming on. I heard more than one anxious parent hasten them charge away with these words—

"Come, come, my dear; you must come now; or, as papa says, we shall be obliged to stay here all night."

The words did not strike me much at the moment, but did they not all remember? Soon the storm broke; it was something frightful—and after the severity of the thunder and lightning had spent itself, the rain came down in torrents, and gave every sign of continuing to pour in that way for some hours. Sir George and Lady Cromwell would not hear of the few guests who remained going home; remarking—

"Such weather! no one ever saw anything like it; the river was a sea, the ford impassable. The house was very large; the young ladies could sleep two in a bed—(O goodness, how my heart sank!)—the bachelors must rough it for once; the smoking in the smoking room and the billiard room was very soft."

A few desperate and, as I thought, hopeless efforts were made on Mrs. Dundee suddenly persuaded her husband to stop. What on earth was I to do? My face showed the mess I was in, for one of my friends came and whispered to me:—

"Keep our pluck up, old boy; a few more minutes and you will have your bet, for you are sure to be separated from old Dundee, and then," he quickly added, "perhaps to be joined by some one better."

Oh, how I did inwardly abuse everybody. The sleeping arrangements were soon made. Of course, unless compelled by circumstances, I was not going to state who I was. It struck me that Mrs Dundee, who was a great friend of Lady Cromwell, rather favoured me.

Hurrah! it ended that I was to sleep alone in a tiny little bedroom, close to that of Captain and Mrs. Dundee. Hurrah! I will lock the door, set all ladies' maids at defiance, and throw myself to-morrow on Mrs. Dundee for protection with an ample confession and apology, for she must at any rate, in a few days know the truth, and she will help me out of my mess and out of the house.

"Good night, Lady Cromwell." "Good night, my dear Miss Fenwick; I hope you will sleep comfortably."

My conscience smote me as the kind-hearted, impulsive old Irish lady kissed my forehead.

I was alone in my bedroom; I had not locked my door, because I was waiting until the ladies maid had called and asked if she could do anything more for me. Of course a decided and peremptory "No, I thank you" would have been the answer. And I ere I sat with my elbows, in a most unladylike manner, on both knees, my head filled with the most unmaidenly thoughts. They were compounded of a semi prayer of thankfulness to the presiding genius of luck for having pulled me, as I thought, quite through my scrape, and a mixture of doubt as to whether I had better trust the heathen deity of Barcy and smoke a couple of cigars out of open window, for once in a way, chew a bit. Tobacco in some shape I felt I must have to soothe my excited nerves.

A knock at the door. "Come in;" and added to myself: "It is only that bete noir of a lady's maid, I will dismiss her, and then by for bacey."

She did come in, but not the lady's maid was she. Radiant with beauty and exquisitely flushed with excitement, robed in a most charming dressing gown, with hair hanging down her back, there entered a young lady I had been introduced to, and who had taken my fancy, in the course of the evening—one Miss Envelode!

"What! Charles!... why, that was poor wife's maiden name" ejaculated more than one of the circle who were assembled in the parson's study listening.

My wife looked sleepish; but I went on. Do not interrupt me; but hear me.

"Oh, dear Miss Fenwick," said Miss Envelode, "I am sorry to disturb you, but you know what a state of confusion the house is in, and I find that somebody else has got my bedroom. I have been undoing my hair in Aunt Cromwell's room, and now he has sent me here to say, with her love, that she hopes you will allow me to share your chamber. She knows Miss Fenwick as Mrs. Dundee told her, that you have always been accustomed to be alone, and cannot bear any body in the room; but she hopes that, under the circumstances of the case, you will excuse her request this time. And we shall be so jolly together; won't we talk over our partners and quiz them nicely?"

The girl spoke in a very lively, natural manner, but did not particularly look at me. Had she done so, she must have noticed that I was almost choking—black in the face—going into a fit.

"Good heavens, Miss Envelode, I can't. I shan't. I won't—you must not—you ought not!—Oh dear!"

In the horrible embarrassment for the moment. I covered my eyes with my hands. Miss Envelode seemed struck dumb, and no wonder.

"Of course," she replied, "I will go if you wish it, and tell my aunt, Lady Cromwell, what you say; but I have had such trouble to avoid being seen by those terrible men, that I must wait a bit to see if the coast is clear. You see the men are very well in their way, and I enjoy dancing with them; but I should not like to be caught by them looking the fright I am now."

I groaned audibly, and shivered with shame. I could not tell what was the right thing for me to do.

Another knock at the door—no, not quite a knock—a bump and an entrance without permission. Enter Mrs Dundee.

"I know what's the matter," said she, "I have known the secret all along. Miss Fenwick, pardon me, for the fix I have rather unwittingly led you into, Miss Envelode; Miss Fenwick is a man and a gentleman," she added with emphasis. As for Miss Envelode seemed inclined to faint.—"His being here in this disguise, continued Mrs Dundee, "has been brought about by a chain of circumstances quite unlooked for by him, and not expected by me. If you will take my advice, Miss Envelode, you will come with me, and keep your own counsel about this silly business. Nothing short of perfect silence will prevent awkwardness, to say the least of it, to everybody.

Miss Fenwick, who is Mr. Charles Temple will leave early to-morrow with me. I will stop my husband's mouth.—You can tell Lady Cromwell to-morrow that when you found it empty. Ere long part of the story may come out. If your aunt thinks at all about it she will think that Mr. Temple was a gentleman, and never even went into his room at all, but contrived to shift for himself elsewhere."

Miss Envelode fell in with the plan, which under the circumstances, was a good one, During the few moments that followed, but one remark was made—

"Miss Envelode," said I, "I grieve that through my folly, for it deserves no harsher name, you should be in such a fix."

"Mr. Charley Temple," bobs she, laughing, "do not trouble yourself about me. I am not very sorry for you, for I think that young lady has suspicions of it all.

The Miss Evenlode of those days is now my wife, and, as Mrs. Charles Temple, is at this moment sitting before you.

QUEEN VICTORIA IN PARIS.

ARRIVAL OF THE QUEEN AT THE FRENCH CAPITAL.—HER RECEPTION.

(From Galignani's Messenger, Aug. 7.)

The Queen of England yesterday morning, on arriving in Paris by the Western Railway from Cherbourg, was as usual in mourning, wearing a black satin dress with a profusion of similar material, falling to the knee, and a black tulle bonnet. Her Majesty seemed in excellent health, but was said to be greatly fatigued by the journey; the Princes Louise, tall and blonde, wore a light grey dress with a white and rose bonnet; the Princess Beatrice, also with light hair was similarly dressed.—Prince Leopold, tall for his age and fair wore a dark coat and light grey trousers, and bore a paletot on his arm. Three carriages belonging to the Embassy and five others hired were in attendance, the suite being composed of over thirty persons.—Her Majesty, the Princess and the Prince entered the first carriage, which was at first open but at the Queen's desire was closed by the hood being drawn forward. The whole line of carriages moved forward to the British Embassy by the Rue Treschet. The Queen remained all day quietly at home but the two Princesses and Prince Leopold drove out and visited various parts of Paris. About three o'clock, the Empress, looking most charming, arrived at the Palace of the Elysee and after a short delay proceeded to the British Embassy to visit Queen Victoria. Her Majesty of England descended to the bottom of the staircase to meet the Empress of the French, and the two sovereigns kissed each other most affectionately. Her Imperial Majesty also greeting the two Princesses in a similar manner. The whole party then withdrew to the Queen's apartments, and remained for an hour in friendly converse. The Empress afterwards returned to the Elysee, where the general expectation was that Queen Victoria would return the visit; but it appears that as Her Majesty travelled incognita, etiquette was opposed to such a return. Her Imperial Majesty remained at the Elysee until five o'clock, when she took her departure for Fontainebleau. The Queen, after partaking about five o'clock of some refreshment (tea, &c.) still remained without exertion until a quarter to seven, when the departure took place. All the staff of the Embassy now in Paris were ranged on the Empress's passage in one of the drawing rooms and each received a word of notice. All, even the Ambassador himself, were in plain clothes, the visit being strictly private. The Duke of Edinburg was present when Her Majesty entered the carriage in which besides, were the Princess Louise the Marchioness of Ely, and Lord Lyons; in a second were the Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, and Mr. Duckworth, his tutor. Other carriages followed conveying the rest of the suite. Lord Lyons took leave of the party at the Eastern Railway, by which was to be effected the journey towards Switzerland. The hour was about 7.30 when the special train which conveyed the Queen took its departure.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Bridegroom.

There is no intention to be sensational in adopting the above heading, but merely to relate what has taken place in our city,—the mysterious disappearance of a real live bridegroom on the eve of marriage. The facts will speak for themselves. A young man named Phelan, a Roman Catholic, living in Dorchester street, was engaged to be married to a respectable girl named Scott; a Protestant, residing in Colborne Avenue. Through the influence of her lover the girl was induced to profess the same religion as himself (Roman Catholic), and after a happy courtship of some time they agreed to be married yesterday morning at St. Bridget's Church. Information of this intention was given to the friends of both parties, who were agreeable, with the exception of an uncle and cousin of the girl, who were very much opposed to the match. Arrangements were, however, made for the wedding, and yesterday morning the guests assembled at the girl's house to be present at the ceremony, and everything was ready but the bride groom, who did not make his appearance. A long time the bride and guests waited; messengers were despatched to the residence of the bride room, but no one could hear or see anything of him. The parents of the young man became anxious, and making inquires could only glean that, the night before the wedding that was to be, he had set off to buy some things, and that late in the evening he met a carter named McEarne. He told McEarne he should want him to convey some articles of furniture to his house. This is the last person he is supposed to have had any conversation with. Where the young man has disappeared to is the mystery. The police were ferreting out the matter yesterday, but could find no traces of his whereabouts.

The friends of the girl persist in stating that he is murdered.

It may be mentioned in connection with the above, that, in a factory near Colborne street, some of the hands employed called out yesterday morning to open the windows and let them see the marriage pass. One of the hands hearing this immediately made the remark, "that they would never see Phelan without his head being broken." Sergeant Barber on learning this proceeded to the man's house, when he stoutly denied having made use of any such expression, but his wife as stoutly declares that he did. The uncle and cousin of the girl have been heard to use threats towards him should the marriage take place.

The greatest excitement prevails in the neighborhood of Colborne Avenue, and all sorts of wild surmises are indulged in.—Meanwhile the police are investigating the matter, and it will soon be known whether the intended bridegroom has absconded, or foully murdered or turned faithless and fled.—Telegraph.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S FIRE.

(From the New York Evening News.)

In April last Mr. Archibald, the British Consul at this port, was made acquainted with the following facts, which were communicated to the Home Government in London. Since that time, Mr. Archibald's informant went to England, in company with the three conspirators, who were American Irishmen. While there, there was a conspiracy made to make an attempt on the Queen's life at the time of her laying the corner-stone of St. Thomas Hospital, on the banks of the Thames, opposite the Houses of Parliament. There were three large booths or tents, partly covered with canvas; and the plan was to throw some combustible substance (Greek fire or phosphorus) on on the canvas, so as to set them on fire. This information of the attempt being about to be made on the booths was placed in the hands of the English Secretary of State, and there were great precautions taken, and nearly all of the police force were detailed to guard both the two Thames and the roads leading to these tents or booths, and indeed the whole place occupied by the ceremony of laying the corner-stone. Through these precautions the calamity was prevented, and some after two men were arrested, who had in their possession quantities of Greek fire or some other combustible substance.

After that, some eighteen men formed a party to make an attempt upon the life of the Queen, as it was first designed. It was arranged to make this second attempt at Osborne, but again information was given the authorities, and the Queen spent a vacation at the time in Balmoral instead Then these parties drew lots for three men and each one was to make a separate attempt on the life of the Queen, but, previous to doing this, some eight or ten of them left Europe for the United States and the attempt was not to be made until they returned. Five of them afterwards went back to Europe very recently. One of these who returned was elected to make an attempt. Having received instructions, they went to Switzerland with the idea of carrying out their object, but the conspiracy had become known to the authorities in Switzerland, and one of the parties was arrested, and now awaits his extradition papers to be returned. The other two who were elected are still at large in Europe, as supposed, but no doubt will carry out their object at the first favorable opportunity.

This information was placed in the hands of the private secretary, the Hon. Mr. Hardy, Secretary of State of Great Britain. The above facts becoming known the men were prevented from carrying out their object. The principal American in the conspiracy was formerly connected with the United States Government.

WHAT IS A TEAR?

Mostly water. Some day when you have a "good crying spell" the tears be all saved, and put into the hand of a skilful chemist, he will be able to show you what else they contain. There will be a little of a slimy substance called mucus, a little salt, some soda, phosphate of soda that unites phosphorus and oxygen united with soda, and phosphate of lime. These substances give the salt taste to tears. If a tear be allowed to fall upon a piece of glass, the water in it will evaporate and leave the solid parts. When examined through a good microscope these solid matters will be seen arranged in lines crossing each other, looking somewhat like small fish bones. Tears are extracted from the material which make up the blood, by a gland, which is situated above the eyeball and underneath the upper eyelid, on the side nearest the temple. Six or seven exceedingly small channels flow under the surface of the eyelid, discharging their contents a little above the delicate cartilage which supports the lid. It is these channels or canals that carry the tears into the eye. But tears do not flow only at certain moments and under certain circumstances, as is supposed; the flow is continuous; all day and all night although less abundantly sleep, they trickle softly from their slender sluices, and spread glistening over the surface of the pupil and the eye-ball, giving them a bright and liquid look which is one of the signs of health. It is the ceaseless movement and the contraction of the eyelids that effect the regular spreading of the tears, and the office of these has need to be constantly repeated in the way just mentioned, because they not only evaporate after a few seconds, but also are carried away through "two little drains, called "lachrymal ducts," and situated in the corner of the eye near the nose. Strong emotions, especially of sorrow, sometimes cause the flow of tears to be more abundant than can be readily carried away by the ducts; then the overflow the lower eyelid and trickle down the cheek. When you have not very good cause for such abundant tears, it may be well to dry them by thinking of the curious arrangement by which they are provided to keep the eye washed clean and in good order.

GETTING SHARP.

The police of Toronto are determined to do something for their money, and at the same time prevent citizens from breaking the Sabbath. A few days ago a man was arrested and brought before the court, who was charged with nailing up a board on his fence on Sunday. Said board had been knocked down a short time before, and in the act in replacing it was simply taking the pig out of the garden. He was fined $1 and costs.

The other cases are recorded; one of a little boy, nine years of age, who was amusing himself with his ball on Sunday, doubtless without the knowledge of his parents. He was also arrested, taken before the Chief Magistrate, and likewise fined.

The other was that of a poor Irish emigrant, recently from the old country, who thinking it no breach indeed himself in his own room, on the Sabbath, with a tune to which he sang, and for which he, too, was fined $1 and costs.

A Man Committed for Destroying his own Son.

John Leonard, a farmer, of 8th Line, Caledon, was brought to Brampton gaol on the 20th, charged with murdering his son Joseph Leonard, who was interred a few days ago at Mundelay Hill church from falling off a load of peas. The facts, as near as we can learn them, are as follows:—Some three ago a daughter of the accused married a person from the States, who came north occasionally to visit, and by some influence of the daughter and her friends, considerable of the money was got from the young woman's husband. When this thing managed, they induced her to leave her husband, which she did. The victim-fied instead then entered an action against her father, or threatened to do so. The old man, fearing that he was going to get into trouble by the transaction, made over his property to his family, 50 acres of which was deeded to the deceased. The matter with that son in law was to the insurance arranged. After that the old man started all his property back to his own name, which after some [illegible] they got it up except deceased, who could not give up his 50 acres. For not doing so the old man threatened to kill him, and, if reports are true, did so on the 20th ult.

It is stated that on that morning a load of peas was in the barn and it was arranged that the old man, Malcolm Joseph and a girl was to assist in unload the [illegible] on the way to the barn was shot by old John. Leonard, who told her therefore distributed, yet that he was not ready for him, and as he drew other load he went into the house and ordered the girl if she had gone [illegible] and on entering that the load was [illegible] and on entering the [illegible] through the [illegible] and [illegible] with the head badly split. The [illegible] that was that he had [illegible] of the head and his head cut by the wheel, and shortly after was buried. On account of the former threat of the father, suspicions shortly after began to rise among the family that he had used such foul play and they had the body exhumed and a coroner's inquest held, when after hearing the evidence compiled in a verdict of Wilful Murder against the father. In the hope, shortly after the young man's death, they found up one and a hair, with blood on them, and on a part that supports the nose were the marks of blood of three fingers, as if prisoner's head had been rested against it. The hoe and the part of the post with the blood on, was brought with the prisoner. The axe was also put in the buggy, but lost along the road.—Brampton Times.

FOR NEW DUKEDOM.

THE "TIMES" ON THE NEW CREATION.

The London Times of the 8th instant., notes the elevation of the Marquis of Abercorn, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, to a dukedom by Mr. Disraeli, the subject of a leading article. The Times says:—

"We have the good fortune to have Ireland governed by Mr. Disraeli. As it is an advantage we share with all our reading contemporaries, we boast not, nor are thankful. At an important period in the development of the understanding in the [illegible] writings fell in our way, and Mr. Disraeli's estimate of many things led us to a juster estimate of many things we had hitherto regarded with the fond confidence of youth and with the simplicity of our race. There was a time when we regarded a duke as all Englishmen do, it may almost be said from their very birth. There are a few shoes in a country which has not too many ideas so awful, so simple, so unchangeable as that of a duke. It cannot be made more; and though attempts have been made to diminish its dignity they have not had the least success, nor it appears to be independent of all that man can do. * * * Have we really discovered a duke, under the disguise of a brilliant marquis? If the appeal be to our fears or our prejudice, as it has sometimes been, we are able to hold our own. The nation will not rush to do the duty, nor will it think submission inevitable. So it will look, perforce, to the duke maker, and ask whether, under all the circumstances, the government, the occasion, and the minister are equal to so mighty a birth of time as the creation of a dukedom."

Attempted Assassination of a Priest.

The repose of the village of Bennington Vt., was started lately by an attack upon the Catholic pastor, the Rev. Father Ryan. A village desperado named Farrell has been living with his cousin. The result was the birth of a child, for the baptism of which Farrell applied to the Rev. Father Ryan. His Reverence, being acquainted with the circumstances, refused to perform the ceremony, whereupon Farrell said that he had been married to the girl by the Rev. Father Haverman, of Troy. He was at once telegraphed to, and a flat denial was received, the Rev. Father Haverman, sending word that he had no knowledge of the couple. Farrell went from the Church vowing to take the life of the pastor. One Driscoll, fearing mischief remained at the residence of the Rev. Mr. Ryan. At about 11 p. m., Farrell, armed with a revolver, appeared and demanded an interview. As the priest was descending the stair case, Driscoll, who had watched Farrell's movements as he stood upon the doorway, cried out "For God's sake Father keep back. The man is going to shoot you." Acting upon the caution the Rev. Father retired, but not until Farrell had discharged two bullets. Shortly afterward, a number of Irishmen, alarmed by the firing came up from the village, and at once secured the miscreant. He was taken to the lock-up and held by Justice Lyman to answer the charge. On leaving the Justice's the prisoner was with difficulty preserved from the fury of about five hundred Irishmen, who were unanimous in their desire to lynch him. His safety is mainly owing to the strenuous efforts of the Rev. Father Ryan.

Earthquake.

The San Francisco Bulletin says,—"An earthquake wave which followed the recent eruptions in the Sandwich Islands was transmitted to the coast and recorded on the Government's self-registering tide gauges at San Francisco and Astoria in about five hours. On the 22nd of December, 1854, a similar wave was transmitted from the coast of Japan to the Golden Gate in 12 hours and 26 minutes.

It will be recollected that this earthquake wave caused the wreck of the Russian frigate Diana in the port of Simoda and great loss of life.

These facts, which are derived from the best authority, convey a very impressive idea of the tremendous power required to disturb the mobile body of an ocean, for a distance of from 5,000 to 5,200 miles, by a movement distinct from its ordinary tidal portage. It will be seen that the revulsion of the great tidal wave at Honolulu reached the coast, during over 5,000 miles, in 5h. 10m. as observed using a velocity of above 15 geographical degrees in length.

THE WEEKLY TRIAL.

The trial of Weekes and the other parties accused of the murder of the Hon. T. D. McGee will take at Ottawa this week. The Assizes for the County of Carleton, at which the trial will take place, open in that city on Wednesday, but the trial proper hardly will begin before Friday. Chief Justice Richards will preside, and the crown for the County will be conducted by Mr. O'Reilly, of Kingston, who has declined to act in the case to screen out the supporters of the murder. Mr. O'Farrell, of Quebec, has charge of the arrangements for the defence of the prisoners, and has retained Messrs. Kenneth McKenzie, J. H. Cameron and M. C. Cameron to conduct the case. Mr. O'Farrell, being a Lower Canadian barrister, has no claim to be heard in an Upper Canada court, but it would that his purposes to make applications to the Judge to be heard in this case. It is probable that the return of the Law Society will prevent the application from being granted, just as a similar application on behalf of Mr. Bunting of Hamilton was refused at the time of the Fenian trials in this city. [illegible] Judge Richards disregarding of the law has him an option in the matter. This fact of such an application being made, and the [illegible] call attention to the general public to ascertain whether or not [illegible] to such a step is right. We [illegible] to any arrangement whereby [illegible] any Province in the Dominion shall be [illegible] to abandon the Courts of [illegible] Provinces. Quite apart from the [illegible] it would be very desirable that a Quebec [illegible] should be heard in the Courts of [illegible]. To the prejudices [illegible] frequently in important criminal cases [illegible] to arise from time to time in mixed communities, it is desirable that there should be as little restriction as possible upon the prisoner's choice of counsel.—Globe.

SCOTCH DOMESTIC SERVANTS FOR CANADA.—His Worship the Mayor, yesterday, received a communication from Mr. L. Stafford, government emigrant agent at Quebec, announcing that a party of emigrant families were at present on their way to Canada, from Scotland, and purposed coming on as far west as London, at the same time requesting His Worship to make the fact publicly known. The emigrants in question are farmers and farm servants, and said we have every reason to believe that, on their arrival here they will rapidly find employment. They all bear excellent characters, and some highly recommended.—There are eight married people, all having grown up families, and seven male adults, unmarried, whose average age are about 22. The party numbers 59 souls. They left glasgow on the 11th inst., and are expected to arrive at Quebec daily. They are partially assisted in the movement by Mrs. Thomas, of Edinburgh, a lady who has done much to promote emigration from that locality. The persons above alluded to are a very industrious class, and will prove useful to our Canadian agriculturists. —London Prototype.

MARRIED AND SINGLE CONVICTS.—During the years 1867 there were 90 married convicts of both sexes sent to the Penitentiary; 196 single persons [illegible] widows and 5 widowers, of both sexes, [illegible] of 296. From these figures making a total [illegible] marriage in one of the most we infer that [illegible] of crime, and as a powerful preventive [illegible] marriages should be encouragement early [illegible] said very frequently encouraged. It has been [illegible] to our notice by those who are opposed [illegible] in a public school system, that [illegible] the facts some of crime. Let us now [illegible] were sent of the sane are. Of the 296 [illegible] 1867 to the Penitentiary during the year, [illegible] 86 could not read, 127 could not write [illegible] 165 could not cipher; and the total number in the Penitentiary who could not read was 218; who could not write 477; and who could not cipher 567. The chaplain of the Penitentiary says "the total number of convicts in prison in 1867 was 1,110. And from the above returns it appears that one half, or 247, were wholly untaught in arithmetic, that over one third, or 477, were ignorant of both cipher-ing and writing; more than one fifth, or 218, were unable to read at all."—Hamilton Times.
